ABSTRACT

The English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) curriculum of the Arlington (Virginia) Adult Learning System (AALS) is presented. AALS is a consortium in which an adult education provider (the public school system) coordinates efforts of its own organization with a community-based organization, a vocational institute, and a university to transition limited-English-proficient (LEP) adults into college and vocational training. The report begins with an overview of AALS and its participating agencies and descriptions of the scope, assessment system, and criteria for determining skill level assessment in the four participating agencies, including details on both of the four participating agencies, including details on both placement and exit criteria in different language skill areas. Subsequent sections detail the curricula of the four participating agencies. The first is a life skills curriculum offered by Hogar Hispano, a community organization serving low-income immigrant families. The second is a learner-centered ESL curriculum for adults offered by the Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP), an Arlington Public Schools project serving LEP immigrants and refugees. The third is a pre-vocational transition ESL course for adults presented by a school-district-based vocational education and job placement program, and the fourth is a pre-academic ESL transitional course for adults at Marymount University (Virginia), a private liberal arts institution. OVERVIEW OF THE ARLINGTON ADULT LEARNING SYSTEM (AALS)

In October 1992, the Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP) was one of three projects in the United States to be funded under the National English Literacy Program¹. The U.S. Department of Education (Office of Vocational and Adult Education) funded these two-year grants to develop replicable models for transitioning limited English proficient (LEP) adults along a continuum of learning from literacy to vocational and academic study.

The Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP), along with ESL service providers in Arlington, created a model in which an adult education provider coordinates a unified system that bridges a community-based organization, an adult education program, a vocational institute, and an institution of higher education. This system is called the Arlington Adult Learning System (AALS) and consists of a consortium of the following local education providers:

Hogar Hispano: a community based organization under the auspices of Catholic Charities that serves the social, economic, educational, and family needs of low-income immigrants in a number of ways, eg. assistance with immigration, tax preparation, and emergency food and clothing. Hogar Hispano also offers four levels of low cost, non-intensive ESL instruction at 9 locations in Northern Virginia.

Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP): a special project within the Department of Adult Education, Arlington Public Schools (APS) that serves approximately 2500 LEP immigrant and refugees per year through a variety of program components designed to meet the diverse needs of adult learners in Arlington: REEP's Intensive ESL Program, the Adult Learning Center (Computer Learning Lab), the Workplace Literacy Program, and the Non-Intensive Extension Program. REEP is funded exclusively through grants and special projects, such as the National English Literacy Transition Project.

Employment Training Center (ETC): an adult education program of the APS that offers native and non-native adults free vocational training and job placement in the fields of office skills, child care, electrical trades, and printing. Like REEP, ETC is funded through grants and special projects.

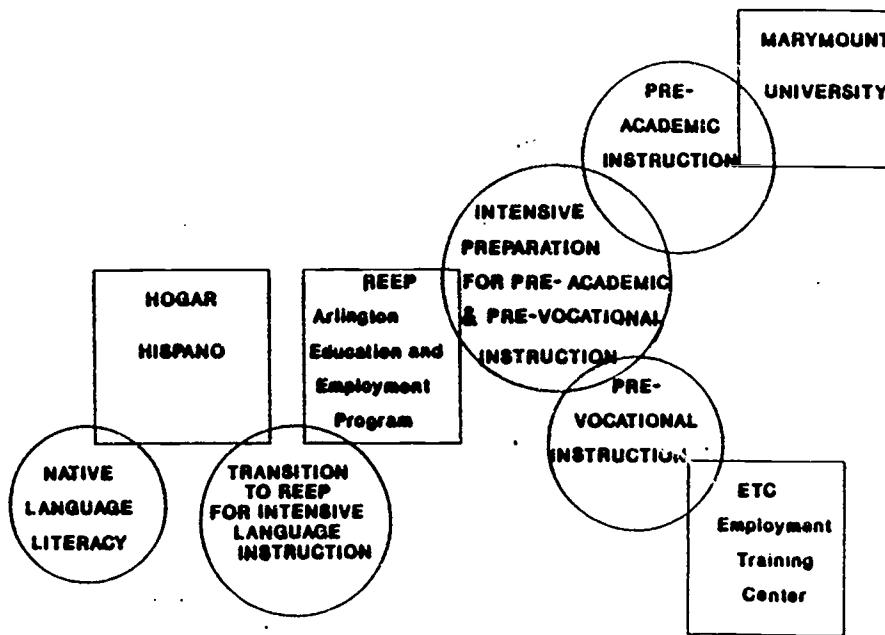

Marymount University: an independent, comprehensive, coeducational university in the liberal arts tradition that has an intensive English as a second language program with four levels of instruction that prepare foreign students for academic study at US universities.

¹ The other English Literacy Transition grantees were: El Paso Community College and The Massachusetts Department of Education.

The Arlington Adult Learning System is a comprehensive transitional program that links the resources and enhances the expertise of broad and diverse ESL service providers into a well-articulated, full-service approach to training designed to address a wide range of learning and educational needs. The primary purpose of this system is to facilitate learner transition from level to level and program to program until learners meet their education, employment, and training goals.

The following figure shows the four AALS partners (squares) and the programmatic links (circles) created by the partnership to break down the barriers to transitioning from provider to another. One of the major links that these circles represent is the transitional curriculum presented in this document. For more information about the project, copies of the final report can be requested from the addresses listed on the inside cover page.

ARLINGTON ADULT LEARNING SYSTEM (AALS)

Under the AALS model shown above, learners are assessed at their point of entry and placed along a continuum of learning from native language literacy, on the one hand, to preparation for vocational and academic study, on the other hand. Once in the system, learners transition from one program level or service provider to the next according to their goals, aptitudes, and interests.²

The Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP) serves as the king pin for the AALS system, drawing learners from the CBO and transitioning learners along the continuum of learning through REEP to vocational or academic training.

INTRODUCTION AALS CURRICULUM: A TRANSITIONAL ESL CURRICULUM FOR ADULTS

The AALS Curriculum developed under this project is a comprehensive instructional system developed for programs teaching ESL to adult immigrants and refugees. It provides instructional direction to teachers of learners along a continuum from pre-literacy to preparation for academic and vocational training.

While the service providers in the AALS shared the common goal of preparing learners for transition, each agency was free to maintain philosophies consistent with their own institutional needs³. The following chart illustrates the curriculum components developed by each agency as well as the order in which the components appear in this curriculum.

EDUCATIONAL AGENCY	AALS CURRICULUM COMPONENTS
HOGAR HISPANO	<ul style="list-style-type: none">◆ Four levels of non-intensive lifeskills English, including pre-literacy.
ARLINGTON EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM (REEP)	<ul style="list-style-type: none">◆ Seven levels of intensive lifeskills English.◆ Intensive advanced pre-vocational/pre-academic track of instruction.◆ Individualized study component for pre-vocational/pre-academic preparation.
EMPLOYMENT TRAINING CENTER	<ul style="list-style-type: none">◆ Intensive pre-vocational English course.
MARYMOUNT UNIVERSITY	<ul style="list-style-type: none">◆ Intensive pre-academic English course.

The AALS curriculum is designed to prepare learners with the skills needed to transition in the following ways:

- 1) from one instructional level to another,
- 2) from ESL service provider to service provider, and
- 3) from ESL instruction to job training and academic study.

As illustrated in the chart on the next page, this curriculum is comprehensive in scope and assists learners in making progress in a variety of areas, consistent with each individual learner's language learning needs, level, and goals.

³ See introduction to each institution's curriculum. See Table of Content for page numbers.

AALS ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

The AALS assessment system facilitates the transition of learners from one agency to another through common assessment processes and instruments that the receiving agency understands and uses in its evaluation of the applicant. The following chart shows the assessment processes and instruments used with the AALS Curriculum. LEVEL DESCRIPTIONS

The AALS agencies developed level descriptions for each of the 14 levels in the AALS curriculum. The goals of these level descriptions are to:

- * assist in appropriate placement of learners along the educational continuum
- * measure a learner's progress in English from one instructional cycle to the next
- * assist instructors in assessing a learner's readiness to transition from level to level within an agency, and
- * assist instructors and agencies in assessing a learner's readiness to transition from one educational agency to another.

The level descriptions outline the skills that learners need to exhibit in order to be placed into a given level. Depending on the level and the institution, the level descriptions consist of the following components:

- * general language ability
- * speaking skills
- * listening skills
- * reading skills
- * writing skills
- * study skills
- * academic preparedness

While service providers in the AALS developed these descriptions as a team and shared the above goals, each agency was free to determine content and presentation style consistent with their own institutional needs. Hence, the organization and formatting of the descriptions vary somewhat. A complete composite of the level descriptions are presented on the following pages in the order in which they fall along the educational continuum:

- * Hogar Hispano
- * Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP)
- * Employment Training Center (ETC)
- * Marymount University (MU)

The level descriptions for levels offered at each institution are also included in the respective curricula.

LEVEL DESCRIPTIONS

HOGAR HISPANO

PRE-LITERACY LEVEL

Basis for Placement:

Years of Education in Native Country: usually 4 or less

General Ability in English: very minimal

Listening/Speaking Ability: very few words or phrases, if any

Reading/Writing Ability: can write name and address in Spanish

Exit Characteristics: (In Spanish and In English)

The student will be able to:

- recite, write the alphabet, spell names, simple words
- greet appropriately by title, time of day, etc.
- identify self, dependents by name, address, phone no.
- complete a personal identification form
- ask, answer common questions
- count to 100
- tell time, ask for, give the time, the day, the date
- handle money, ask for prices, give, receive correct change
- identify objects in the classroom
- read and understand common signs in public places
- know parts of the body
- dial 911 and give necessary information

BASIC LEVEL/LEVEL 1

Basis for Placement:

General Ability in English: minimal, needs to be shown directions.

Listening/Speaking Ability: understands and speaks a few common words and phrases, unfamiliar with grammar.

Reading/Writing Ability: reads and writes only letters and simple numbers, with the exception of names.

Exit Characteristics include the ability to read and write material listed as Exit Characteristics of the Pre-Literacy Level.

The student is able to :

- introduce self/others by name, relationship, occupation
- pronounce/spell, read/write, and use correctly familiar English words and phrases
- say, read, write the days of the week, the months, seasons, holidays, events
- read/write lists, shop for food, clothing, household items
- read and write facts of basic health care and common ailments

HOGAR HISPANO
INTERMEDIATE LEVEL/LEVEL 2

Basis for Placement:

General ability in English: limited, prefers that demonstration accompany oral directions

Listening/Speaking ability: Understands, speaks, and responds to simple, learned phrases

Reading/Writing ability: Can read and write simple, commonly used words and short phrases

Exit Characteristics include those of the previous levels.

The student is able to:

- * understand, say, read, write simple facts about self/others
- * ask for/give orally, in writing simple directions, messages
- * use the telephone, leave and receive messages
- * handle money, pay bills, write a money order, cash a check
- * write a short meaningful paragraph/letter, using correct format, grammar and spelling

ADVANCED LEVEL/LEVEL 3

Basis for Placement:

General ability in English: Functions in routine survival needs and social demands. Follows oral and written instructions that can be demonstrated.

Listening/Speaking Ability: Understands and responds to simple, familiar English, spoken slowly. Tries to use correct grammar.

Reading/Writing Ability: Reads and writes simple, learned sentences with assistance.

Exit Characteristics include those of the previous levels. The student is able to:

- * read pertinent parts of the newspaper
- * apply for a job/community services orally and in writing, using correct pronunciation/grammar
- * understand common idioms
- * participate in normal, moderately paced, non-technical conversation
- * write correct, original short essays, reports, letters
- * have a basic sense of United States history and government
- * follow English news programs on the media

ARLINGTON EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT PROGRAM (REEP) Basis for Intake Placement: BEST* Oral Test and In-house Written Test

- 100 (Low Beginning): Has minimal oral and literacy skills, if any. A native English speaker used to dealing with limited English proficient (LEP) speakers can rarely communicate with a person at this level, except through gestures. (BEST 0-10)
- 150 (Beginning): Can satisfy limited oral and literacy survival needs. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will have difficulty communicating with a person at this level. (BEST 8-18)
- 200 (High Beginning Oral/Beginning Literacy): Can orally satisfy basic survival needs and very routine social demands, but has very limited literacy skills. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will have some difficulty communicating with a person at this level. (BEST 16-24)
- 250 (High Beginning): Can satisfy some oral and written survival needs and very routine social demands. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will have some difficulty communicating with a person at this level. (BEST 18-24)
- 300 (High Intermediate Oral/High Beginning Literacy): Can orally satisfy survival, social, and work demands, but has limited literacy skills. A native speaker not used to dealing with LEP speakers will have some difficulty communicating with a person at this level. (BEST 28-33)
- 350 (Intermediate): Can satisfy most oral and literacy survival needs and some social and work demands. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will be able to communicate with a person at this level on familiar topics with little difficulty and effort. (BEST: 23-29)
- 450 (High Intermediate): Can satisfy most oral and literacy survival needs and a majority of social and work demands. A native speaker not used to dealing with LEP speakers will be able to communicate with a person at this level on familiar topics, but with some difficulty and effort. (BEST 29-33)
- 550 (Advanced): Has effective oral and literacy skills in survival and social situations as well as familiar and unfamiliar work situations. A native speaker not used to dealing with LEP speakers can communicate with a person at this level on most topics. (BEST 31-37)

*BEST = Basic English Skills Test (Center for Applied Linguistics)

MU/REEP Pre-Academic Transition Program Entrance Level Descriptions*

SPEAKING

1. Has fluency in spontaneous/informal speech situations.
2. Has had some experience with delivery of formal presentations.
3. Understands the organizational basics of information presentations but lacks confidence in ability.
4. Speech may be accented but does not interfere with communicative effectiveness.
5. Grammar mistakes are noticeable but do not hinder listener comprehension.

LISTENING

1. Follows conversational English without difficulty.
2. Can perform basic listening comprehension tasks such as following oral instructions and taking notes on simple topics.
3. Processes unfamiliar material at a slower than normal rate of speed and often needs material to be repeated or restated for full comprehension.
4. Has had little experience with listening comprehension test taking strategies.

READING

1. Is able to summarize short unabridged reading selections (fiction/nonfiction).
2. Can identify main ideas and supporting details of those readings.
3. Comprehends general vocabulary items but has a limited academic vocabulary base.
4. Has vocabulary building skills but needs to expand them and to focus on higher level reading material.

WRITING

1. Demonstrates control of paragraph length material following standard linear development - topic sentence, supporting details and conclusion.
2. Paragraphs show mechanical and grammatical weaknesses.
3. Sentence structures are varied but lack use of idiomatic expressions.
4. Effectiveness of topic development is sometimes hampered by limited or inappropriate vocabulary choices.

* Students are also expected to score 70+ on the English Placement Test (University of Michigan).

MARYMOUNT

HOGAR HISPANO'S ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE PROGRAM CURRICULUM

MISSION STATEMENT

Hogar Hispano's ESL Program offers introductory level classes to limited English proficient (LEP) Hispanic adults in Northern Virginia to assist them to become self-sufficient and more productive members of American society.

INTRODUCTION

Explanation and Goals. The content of each level is planned for distribution over one year in three 10-week sessions and is structured to develop and/or reinforce life skills along with appropriate language skills, through exercises in listening, conversing, reading and writing.

Class Levels and Placement. Four non-intensive levels of instruction are offered: Pre-Literacy, Basic (Level 1), Intermediate (Level 2), and Advanced (Level 3). Initial placement is based upon written and oral placement test scores as well as consideration of number of years of formal education completed in the native country. See Appendix D for progress report used to evaluate continuing students.

Place and Time of Classes. Two-hour classes are held in Catholic Parish or County facilities throughout Northern Virginia. Classes are held either on Saturday or Sunday, or on one or two weekday evenings. There are three sessions a year, totaling 30 to 32 weeks of class.

Entrance Requirements.

Age: At least 18 years old.

Registration and Placement Test: Each year, at the beginning of the first session attended.

Textbook and Materials.

Pre-literacy Level: ACCESS

Level 1: Survival English 1

Level 2: Real-Life English 2 + Workbook 2

Level 3: Side by Side, Book 3 + Activity Workbook 3

Fee. Students pay a modest sum for books and materials at the beginning of each session. No student is deprived of a book because of financial straits.

Pre-Literacy Level/Native Language Literacy

Note:

Students at this level cannot read or write in Spanish. Therefore, these classes are conducted in Spanish by a native or near-native Spanish speaker. When a student is able to read and write in Spanish, there can be a gradual transition to written English. Depending upon local circumstances, students can be taught first in Spanish and then in English, or they can be taught to become literate in Spanish and in English at the time.

Basis for Placement:

TEACHER BACKGROUND FOR ADULT STUDENTS LEARNING ENGLISH AS A SECOND LANGUAGE

Steps in Learning a New Language. Each begins with the rudimentary and leads to continuing progress and confidence in using English.

1. Listening • hearing with understanding
2. Speaking • being able to make oneself understood
3. Reading • signs, directions, ads, headlines, simple sentences, short paragraphs, easy stories, etc.
4. Writing • one's personal identification, application forms, lists, simple sentences, requests/responses, short paragraphs, etc.

Principles Basic to Second Language Acquisition.⁽¹⁾ These guide the teacher in understanding the needs, difficulties, and growth of the students.

1. The ESL student is concerned with communication, rather than correctness. It is important that students feel that they are able to have their needs met by the language they use.
2. There is a natural series of language development stages that the student must move through. There is a level during which no progress is evident, but the second language is taking hold.
3. People learn better if they are relaxed and successful. The higher the degree of success, the more willingness there is to take risks to use the language. Therefore it may help to remember: Something Old, something New, something Borrowed, something Blue!

Old - begin class with something students know and/or can do

New - teach one thing, new and/or vital and/or interesting

Borrowed - (from Mother Nature) - reinforce, build success

Blue - goal (blue sky/ribbon) - give homework, something to do

P.S. - have fun in class

4. Improvement in second language learning depends, in part, on the amount and type of immersion. To help students converse in the new language, simulate situations of interest to students, such as conferring with a child's teacher, buying a car, paying the rent, making a complaint, going to the dentist, planning a trip, etc. Model the person in charge of the service, etc.

Assessment. Assessment helps both teacher and students: the teacher, by revealing the expectations of the students who come to class to learn English as a Second Language, and the adult students, by giving them a voice in what they want to and/or feel they need to learn for their daily life in American society.

Assessment techniques vary and can be adjusted to meet the level of the student. Suggestions follow.

Pre-Literacy Level. Pictures (of someone in a store), drawings (public transportation), or symbols (an envelope) of daily activities can be shown to elicit from the students where, in what situations, they need to be able to speak English.

Level 1. In addition to visuals, a simple check list of ordinary life situations can be offered to students to indicate their needs/preferences. Examples: I need English. . . in the doctor's office, in an emergency, on my job.

Level 2. A questionnaire or survey could be used to elicit from students which skills they have acquired and which ones they still need: listening, understanding, speaking, pronouncing, reading, and writing.

Level 3. There could be a class discussion of the importance of English to meet one's goals, ambitions, opportunities, etc. This could be followed by an essay or a letter to the teacher expressing needs, hopes, fears, difficulties, desires, etc.

Fundamental Strategies. These can be used over and over with a variety of topics and with all class levels. They are non-threatening, they give each one a chance to speak and/or to interact, they help to keep attention, to keep the class moving, and they have the built-in repetition factor.

1. FLASH CARDS. These can be letters, numbers, words, pictures, symbols, colors, etc.
2. ROUND ROBIN. Ask a student for just one piece of information, such as a name. Student gives info and asks next student. That student responds and asks next one, etc. It should go fast.

3. GRID. Divide a sheet of paper into 1 or 2 inch blocks. XEROX a grid for each student. In blocks across the top can be letters, numerals, categories, questions, or even drawings. In blocks down the side can be written names of students, encountered in the activity.

Each student questions other students in the class for information for the top boxes. Questioner either checks the appropriate box or writes in the answer given. Each one answering write his/her initials or name in a box at the side, until paper is filled or time is up.

Example: Vocabulary Drill

Across top: FRUIT VEGETABLE MEAT FURNITURE CLOTHING

Questions: What is an orange? a sweater? chicken? chairs?

Or: Name a fruit, a vegetable, etc.

4. HIERARCHY OF QUESTIONS. From easy to difficult.⁽²⁾

1. Do you like ____? (yes/no)
2. Do you like ____ or ____ better? (choice)
3. Where can you get a good ____? (Wh-questions)
What is in ____s?
When is it good to buy them?
How much does a ____ cost?
4. Why do you think ____ are so popular in the US? (Why?)

Try to get students to answer the "why" question, but be prepared to answer it yourself. (Try taco(s) above!)

5. CHAIN REACTION. First student says, "I see ____". Second student says, "I see ____, repeating what the first said, and adds "and ____". Third student repeats the list and adds a third item. And so forth, throughout part of the class. (Do not let list get too long. Better to start over with another list. Ex. "I went to the store and bought ____." or "I went on a trip and took ____.")
6. FACE TO FACE. Students line up in two lines facing each other. In line A each shows a picture, as line B passes by, one by one, responding to a question about each picture. Reverse roles.
7. CHARADES. Good for words or sentences. Example: Juan stands up or stands next to _____. Ask: What is Juan doing? or Is Juan standing? or Who is standing? or Where is Juan standing? or Is Juan sitting? or Where is Juan sitting? or Is Juan sitting or standing?

8. ROLE PLAY. Enact a scene from daily life: at the store, the doctor's office, the rental office, talking to a neighbor, etc. with appropriate dialogue.
9. PICTURE STORIES.⁽³⁾ (Students need a visual clue to help them with creative writing.) Do a picture story first with the class, then with individuals. Show a picture. Have students tell something about the picture. Put the ideas in order. Write the ideas in a paragraph on the board. Have it read aloud. Repeat the process with students in pairs and/or in small groups. Then have individuals write their own stories with (or without) a picture.
10. FOLLOW-UP ACTIVITIES/LESSONS BASED ON STORIES.⁽⁴⁾
 - a. Yes-No Questions, orally and in writing.
 - b. Cloze Exercises. Leave out about every fifth word and have students fill in. List deleted words at the top or side of the page for reference.
 - c. Mix Up Story Sentences on strips of paper and have students individually or in groups sequence them.
 - d. Phonics Practice. Ask which words begin with /b/, which end with /d/, etc.
11. DRAWING STUDENTS OUT TO TELL STORIES.⁽⁴⁾ These can be used to encourage students to tell, write and keep stories in a notebook.
 - a. Ask Questions designed to form a "story" when answered. ("My name is _____. I live in _____.")
12. TOTAL PHYSICAL RESPONSE. (TPR).⁽⁵⁾ Only the teacher speaks. The students do not speak. The teacher gives directions, commands. The teacher tells the class or a student to do something, or several things, such as, "stand and go to the left." It is an exercise in focused listening and in following directions.

INTRODUCTION

BACKGROUND

The Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP) is a special project within the Department of Vocational, Career, and Adult Education in the Arlington Public Schools. The project is supported by federal, state, and local grants and contracts. REEP's mission is to provide for the education and employment related needs of limited English Speaking Adults who live and work in Arlington, Virginia. This mission is accomplished through the following educational components:

- * Intensive ESL: 8 levels of instruction offered mornings and evenings in 12 week cycles at multiple locations
- * Adult Learning Center: multi-media instructional facility offering individualized, self-paced instruction with computers and other language learning technology
- * Workplace Literacy: on-site classes at 5 industries: hotels/motels; hospitals, nursing homes, convenience stores, and apartment management firms
- * Extension ESL: non-intensive, beginning level classes taught by volunteers at apartment complexes and community centers.

In 1992, the REEP Program was one of only three programs funded by The U.S. Department of Education under the National English Literacy Transition Grant Program.¹ The purpose of the grant was to create a seamless system of instruction between and among ESL providers to transition learners along the continuum of learning from basic literacy instruction to preparation for vocational or academic training. The REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) developed under this project is designed to facilitate that system. The REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) is a comprehensive instructional system developed for programs teaching ESL to adult immigrants and refugees. It provides instructional direction to teachers of learners in need of basic survival and social language. In addition, this curriculum includes a more advanced level that enables transitioning to academic or vocational training upon completion of the basic program. This curriculum can be used as a stand alone system of instruction by individual programs offering ESL instruction at these levels, or it can be the keystone that can link basic ESL providers to vocational programs and community college level ESL.

¹ The three English Literacy Transition grantees were: Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP), El Paso Community College, and the Massachusetts Department of Education. For more information about these projects, contact: US Department of Education, Division of Adult Education and Literacy Clearinghouse, 800 Maryland Avenue, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20202-7240, Fax: (202) 205-8973.

The REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) is an extensive revision and expansion of the REEP Curriculum, Revised Edition (1985)² that was developed under The National Mainstream English Language Training Project funded by the Office of Refugee Resettlement. The original REEP curriculum was a competency-based survival ESL curriculum designed to bring ESL learners to "threshold level" proficiency. The "threshold level" was based on the work on the Council of Europe's Modern Language Project which identified the threshold level as that level which enables learners to adapt to most everyday situations, even if not specifically trained for each situation.³

The REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) maintains a competency-based approach and provides materials for learning the basic language functions needed for threshold level English. In addition, the REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) has been updated to formally integrate the latest adult learning theory and best practices in second language teaching while providing flexibility in classroom delivery to accommodate the multi-faceted nature of the second language learning process.

There are three building blocks central to the foundation of this curriculum: Meaning-based instruction, adult learner input, and whole language theory. The first building block, Meaning-based instruction, (also referred to in the literature as functional context) has been found to be an effective framework for language learning because adult learners learn best when content is meaningful to their lives. Hence this curriculum uses a competency-based approach to language teaching which provides the lifeskills content in which language practice and application takes place. The second curriculum building block is the need for adult learner input into the instruction that he/she receives. This curriculum is designed to give learners a voice, hence needs assessment has become an integral part of the curriculum at all levels. The third building block is a whole language approach to language and literacy which stresses that the four language skills: speaking, listening, reading, and writing are mutually supportive and should be integrated during instruction.

ORGANIZATION OF THE CURRICULUM

In order to use the REEP Curriculum effectively, the user must understand the three essential features of the REEP Curriculum implementation process which are described in detail in this section and in the Using the Curriculum Section. These essential features are:

1. Curriculum organization:

This section provides an overview of the organization and content of the 8 instructional levels in the REEP Curriculum.

2. Learner Needs Assessment:

This component provides guidance on procedures for planning courses, units, and lessons based on information collected from learners through needs assessment. It assists the teacher in integrating needs assessment data with the curriculum unit format. The lesson planning section is especially useful in providing suggested lesson planning procedures as well as describing the stages of an effective lesson plan.

3. Learner Evaluation:

This component describes the essential role of integrating learner evaluation into the instructional process. It enables the teacher to interpret the entry level descriptions and other initial placement criteria such as literacy level, test scores, previous educational background, and age. This component also provides information to the teacher on how to evaluate and document progress throughout the level. Specific methodology is provided related to using the performance objectives to evaluate oral and written lifeskills objectives as well as developmental reading and writing objectives. Finally, information is provided on how to make a final determination as to whether the learner has successfully completed the course.

CURRICULUM ORGANIZATION

The REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) consists of 8 proficiency levels ranging from low beginning to advanced. (See entry level descriptions beginning on page 101). While each level is designed for 120 to 180 hours of instruction, the needs assessment component provides the flexibility needed to customize curricula for more intensive or less intensive instruction.

Beginning and Intermediate Levels

The beginning through intermediate levels (100-450) consist of a competency-based framework along with integration of language skill development, including reading and writing. While the competency-based framework is built on the lifeskills needed by an individual to function in the world outside the classroom, teaching and learning focus on the linguistic and communication skills needed to master those lifeskills. Each level consists of nine to twelve instructional units or topics. See Index of Topics on page 83.

Each instructional unit requires an average of 20 hours of instruction, depending on unit needs assessment. During the twelve week cycle at REEP, teachers are not expected to cover all of the units. Through the "Getting Started" unit, teachers and students prioritize coverage for a given cycle. Classes typically cover 5-7 units over 120 - 180 hours of instruction.

See page 85 for an overview of unit organization and contents for levels 100-450.

Advanced Level and Individualized Study

The advanced level (550) and the individualized study program⁴ are designed as a bridge between the functional, lifeskills oriented levels offered in levels 100-450 and the types of educational institutions that our learners may transition to upon completion of the REEP program, i.e. intensive academic or vocational training programs. For this reason, level 550 and the individualized study program differ from the other levels in their approach. The curricula focus more on the process of skill development in order to better prepare learners for transition. These components are organized by language and academic skill areas rather than by survival topic areas.

The 550 level consists of 8 instructional units, and the individualized study program consists of 5 instructional units. See Level 550 on page 353 and Transition ESL for Individualized Study on page 383 for an overview of unit organization and contents.

⁴ See Transition ESL Curriculum for Individualized Study.

UNIT TITLE: LEVEL 100-450

NEEDS ASSESSMENT: This provides information about course needs assessment in the Getting Started unit at each level and unit needs assessment information for each unit.

DEVELOPMENTAL READING: This refers teachers to the developmental integration unit for level objectives and provides suggested reading resources for a particular unit/topic.

DEVELOPMENTAL WRITING: This refers teachers to the developmental integration unit for level objectives and provides suggested writing resources for a particular unit/topic.

PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES	FUNCTIONS/SAMPLE LANGUAGE	RESOURCES	INTEGRATION
This column contains the lifeskill speaking, listening, reading, and writing objectives for a particular unit. Students are evaluated on their ability to perform the objectives using the language functions and language outlined in the functions/sample language column. Student performance is documented on the progress reports. During pre-unit needs assessment, the learner and teacher chose the unit objectives to be covered based on student need and interest. When classes identify objectives not specified in the unit, the objectives should be added to the progress report and evaluated. See Instructional Supplements Section for an overview of performance objectives by level.	This column provides examples of functions that learners will need to be able to use in order to accomplish the objective. Functions are units of communication that identify the outcome or purpose of an utterance in a topic area (eg. transportation: ask for directions). Examples of level appropriate language needed to perform the objective are provided as well. Unless otherwise specified, the language is intended for oral or written production, depending on the objective. In some cases, the language is receptive. Students are expected to demonstrate comprehension but not to respond orally or in writing. These exceptions are noted as they occur. See Instructional Supplements Section for an overview of functions by level. See Individual levels for an overview of functions by topic unit.	The resource column provides suggestions for resources for each objective. These resources include the language and vocabulary to be taught and practiced for achievement of the objectives. Some resources relate directly to the objective; others relate more generally to the topic. These are suggested resources. Teachers should select materials based on the need and abilities of their particular students. It is not intended that all of the suggested resources be used for each objective. A list of all suggested resources for a particular level is located at the beginning of each level. This list includes the resources provided in this column as well as suggested resources for structures, reading and writing development, and as computer-assisted and audiovisual resources.	When planning lessons, teachers should refer to this column for integration of related units and objectives, structures, and cross-cultural points. Related units and objectives: objectives from units not covered may be relevant to the topic and to the students' needs. For example, the "Work" objective "call in to supervisor stating reason for absence" can be integrated with the "Health" objective "describing illnesses". Structures needed to achieve the lifeskill objective. See Structure Index and Resources at the end of each level. Cross-culture: Suggestions for integrating cultural discussion points into the coverage of objectives. See "Approach to Cross-Cultural Issues" in the Instructional Supplements section. Enabling Skills (100): See 100 enabling skills Integration unit.

CA/AV RESOURCES: Suggested computer-assisted and audiovisual resources for a particular topic. See Guide to Integrating Computers into Language Instruction in the Instructional Supplements Section.

USING THE CURRICULUM

LEARNER NEEDS ASSESSMENT

This section discusses how needs assessment is used in the curriculum to facilitate three different levels of planning: course planning, unit planning and lesson planning. See Learner Needs Assessment Appendices for background reading on needs assessment, a needs assessment tools chart, and sample needs assessment activities.

Planning A Course: Initial Assessment Activities

Each level in this curriculum contains more units than could reasonably be covered during one cycle of instruction. Through needs assessment, teachers and students decide together which units will be covered. Needs assessment is a component of the first unit at each level. Initial needs assessment assists the teacher in selecting, prioritizing, and adapting materials and curricula. The purposes of this needs assessment component are to:

- * assess students' language learning goals, interests, and needs, and
- * select the units to cover based on the students' goals, interests, and needs.

Planning A Unit: Pre-Topic Needs Assessment

Needs Assessment is also conducted prior to beginning each unit (pre-topic) to help the teacher select performance objectives and language requirements for the unit. The purposes of this needs assessment are to:

- * determine what students already know, i.e. what background information learners bring to the topic
- * assist learners in clarifying their interests and needs with respect to a particular topic, and
- * determine learners' ability to use language required for the topic.

The Pre-topic Needs Assessment chart on the next page outlines the pre-topic assessment objectives by level, the functions and sample language that learners will need to use in order to be able to achieve the assessment objective, and activities suggested for each level.

PRE-TOPIC NEEDS ASSESSMENT

OBJECTIVES	FUNCTIONS AND SAMPLE LANGUAGE	SUGGESTED ACTIVITIES
100: Students demonstrate what they already know about the topic.	Identify objects: It's (a dress, car) Report information: It's ($2.50, raining)	Brainstorming, TPR, pictorial questionnaire, match words with pictures.
150: Students demonstrate what they already know about the topic.	Report information: She's (wearing a dress) I have (a cold, an appointment)	Brainstorming, TPR, pictorial questionnaire, information grid.
200: Students determine what they need/want to study in the topic.	Express needs: I (don't) need English (at the mall).	Pictorial questionnaire, mind map on where learners need the language.
250: Students determine what they want/need to study in the topic.	Express needs and wants: I (don't) want to study (ads).	Brainstorm, written questionnaire, mind map, information grid, vote with your feet.
300: Students choose and prioritize objectives.	Express needs and wants: I need to read (tickets). Express preferences: I'd like fill out (a credit card application). Report information: I can do this already.	Learner-generated questionnaire, information grids, brainstorm, mind map.
350: Students choose and prioritize objectives.	Express needs and wants: I want to practice (describing people). Express preferences: I'd rather write (a letter of complaint).	Brainstorm, discussion, written questionnaire, learner-generated questionnaire, information grid, mind map.
450: Students choose objectives and identify relevant contexts.	Express need and wants: I really need to know about (resumes). Express preferences: I prefer to (complete applications).	Brainstorm, discussion, written questionnaire, progress report, or survey on topic or functions, information grid, mind map.
550: See individual units.

Planning A Lesson:

Suggested Lesson Planning Procedures

- (1) Consider how performance objectives are related and how they might be combined. Also consider which objectives from other units would be appropriate to cover (See integration column for suggestions). Select the performance objective(s) around which you will organize the lesson.
- (2) Select the language functions, structures, and vocabulary which will be the focus for the practice, performance, and evaluation of the use of language in performing the objective(s).
- (3) Consult the resource column for texts related to the objective as well as the CAI/AV and structural resources. Also consult the appendices for activities appropriate for the task(s).
- (4) Consider the particular needs of your students and select developmental reading and writing resources and activities, pronunciation points, and cross-cultural questions which should be addressed.
- (5) Determine the evaluation activity that you will use to evaluate learner mastery of the objective and the language needed to achieve the objective. See Learner Evaluation in the next section for evaluation using this curriculum and the Learner Evaluation Appendices for suggested evaluation tools.
- (6) Integrate these selections into a lesson plan. We recommend the following model.

Stages of a Lesson

The chart on the following page presents the recommended stages of a lesson. Depending on the objective, the practice, application, and evaluation stages may spread over several class periods. However, each class period should begin with warm-up and review activities to (re)focus attention on the lesson objective and to provide reinforcement of previous instruction. This is a particularly essential step in classes where attendance is irregular.

Stages of a Lesson⁵:

Warm-up/review: Enables learners to use previously taught language.

Introduction to the new lesson: Focuses learners' attention on the lesson, establishes the objective of the lesson, and relates the lesson to the learners' lives and previous learning.

Presentation: Introduces new information, checks comprehension, and models what learners need to do with the language and the tasks during the practice stage.

Practice: Provides practice of the new language, information, and material.

Application: Enables learners to apply language and information in a new situation and to their own lives.

Evaluation: Enables instructor to assess individual achievement of the lesson objective. See Learner Evaluation Section and Appendices for more guidance.

Reassessment⁶

Needs Assessment should be done routinely (on-going) in order to insure that learner needs and goals are being met and to assist the teacher in planning effective lessons that are relevant to the learners' needs. Needs Assessment should also be conducted midway in the course (mid-course) in order to allow the teacher and students to assess coverage to date and reassess priorities for the second half of the cycle. Final needs assessment should occur at the end of a course to take account of accomplishments and to help learners make decisions about educational goals for the future.

⁵ Adapted from Lesson Planning, a teacher training module developed by the ESL Teacher Institute, Burlingame, CA. See Appendices for a sample lesson plan.

⁶ For recommended activities, see the Needs Assessment Section in the Appendices.

LEARNER EVALUATION⁷

Evaluation is essential to the instructional process. It assures teachers and learners as well as administrators and program monitors that necessary lifeskills and language skills have been identified, practiced, and mastered. Through evaluation, we certify that our students have mastered the language and lifeskills for the level. Evaluation provides a means of charting learner progress within a level and readiness for promotion and provides learners with feedback on their progress. When learners see their inventory of skills grow, their confidence and motivation increase as well. Evaluation data allows teachers to determine the effectiveness of their instruction and to make adjustments to ensure that the needs of students are met.

Crucial to all stages of the evaluation process are the entry level descriptions which describe the speaking, listening, reading, and writing skills that a learners needs in order to succeed in a given level. The entry level descriptions organized by level can be found preceding the instructional units for each level. A complete listing of entry level descriptions organized by skill area is located at the end of this section.

Initial Placement into the Curriculum

At REEP, new students are tested to determine placement into one of the eight levels in the curriculum. To assess oral competency, the short form of the BEST⁸ (Basic English Skills Test) is administered. To assess reading and writing competency, a written test developed in-house is administered. In addition to the scores on these two tests, the following criteria are also considered in placement: education level, age, time in the US, and previous study at REEP and/or other English programs.

Upon initial placement into the curriculum, a student with six or fewer of years of education and weak written skills is more likely to place into an "00" level. A student with more education and stronger written skills is likely to place into a "50" level.

⁷ See Learner Evaluation Appendices for suggested activities.

⁸ Developed by the Center for Applied Linguistics.

Progress through the Curriculum

The number of cycles that a student needs to complete the program depends on the initial placement level as well as the student's education level and literacy skills. A student who tests into a "50" level will be more likely to progress from one "50" level to the next throughout the program. A student who tests into an "00" level may progress through all the levels offered, except 550. An "00" level student generally does not take the more academically oriented 550 level.

This leveling system allows students to move through the program at their own pace without having to repeat the same material since there are more distinct levels with different instructional material.

The following chart depicts how a beginning level learner typically moves through the levels, based on their initial educational level and literacy skills.

Low education level and/or weak literacy skills	High education level and/or strong literacy skills
Initial Placement: 100	Initial Placement: 150
Subsequent Movement: 150	Subsequent Movement: 250
200	350
250	450
300	550
350
450

Evaluating Students at the Beginning of the Cycle of Instruction

At the beginning of the instructional cycle, students' language abilities need to be assessed to determine whether the initial placement was appropriate. In developing activities that allow students to demonstrate their abilities, it is critical to consult the entry level descriptions^{*}, which describe the abilities that a learner should exhibit upon entry into a certain level. It is also helpful to consult previous progress reports, previous teachers, and test scores.

^{*} See complete entry level descriptions at the end of this section. See beginning of each instructional level for level specific descriptions.

Evaluation of Progress

Although some kind of evaluation should take place on a daily basis, this section focuses on formal (documented) evaluation of the learners' progress.

Achievement of Oral and Written Lifeskills Objectives

Students should be evaluated on their ability to use the language and structures taught while completing the tasks stated in the performance objectives. Performance objectives provide the context within which students learn, practice, and are evaluated using language.

The following chart describes how language is evaluated through performance objectives. Performance objectives:

- * identify the task to be accomplished
- * specify the conditions of the performance situation
- * describe the language needed to perform the objective, and
- * provide the criteria by which to judge success.

Using this methodology along with the entry level descriptions helps the teacher to determine whether a student is making gains in his/her language performance.

PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES
COMPONENT PARTS	DEFINITION	EXAMPLE
CONDITION	give context required	given a diagram of a supermarket and shelves
PERFORMANCE	name the action to be demonstrated	ask and answer questions
CRITERIA	describe the requirement for success	about the location of five items
LANGUAGE	language needed to complete the objective	vocabulary: food structures: simple present tense, wh-questions, preposition of location

Achievement of Developmental Reading and Writing Objectives

Students should be evaluated on their mastery of the reading and writing level objectives for the level they are currently taking. The Reading and Writing Development Units at the end of each level provide guidance for instruction as well as evaluation. The following chart provides a sample of the instructional and evaluation framework for reading and writing development.

WRITING DEVELOPMENT: SAMPLE FROM LEVEL 150

LEVEL OBJECTIVE: To write a series of simple sentences.

Variables:

- * given a model
- * personal experiences
- * level appropriate

Example from 150: The goal for writing development for level 150 is to reach 250. However, some students will need more than one cycle of instruction to achieve this goal. For them, retention in 150 or promotion to level 200 may be appropriate, depending also on their listening, speaking, and reading level as well as their achievement of competencies for the level. See entry level descriptions.

EVALUATION CRITERIA:

- * conveys ideas to readers
- * logical sentence order (chronological)
- * correct capitalization and punctuation

Evaluation criteria indicate how to evaluate the level objective. These criteria should be used to evaluate writing throughout the cycle and to determine achievement of the level objective at the end of the cycle.

WRITING SKILLS DEVELOPMENT

Below are the skills that students will need to master in order to achieve the level objective. These skills should be practiced throughout the cycle.

Examples from level 150: Use paragraph format, use and edit for basic punctuation.

RESOURCES

(Resources suggested for a particular level)

Designing Effective Evaluation Activities¹⁰

Evaluation of the performance objectives should be "criterion-referenced", i.e. learners are evaluated on whether or not they can use language to perform the specified task within the conditions and criteria established by the objective.

Students are evaluated on their ability to use the language and lifeskill to complete a task in a novel situation, without assistance from the teacher or classmates. Good evaluation activities should:

- * simulate real life tasks
- * measure what has actually been taught and learned
- * be practical in terms of administration time and necessary resources
- * be reliable; someone else rating the learner should make the same decision as to the success/failure learner's performance, and
- * be acceptable to learners as a valid activity.

In addition, the type of evaluation activity needs to match the language skill taught. The reading and writing development objectives and lifeskills objectives that require written language production can be evaluated individually with paper and pencil tasks (e.g. answering comprehension questions, writing essays, completing forms, writing checks or taking messages).

Tasks which require oral communication (i.e. oral lifeskills objectives) must be evaluated orally. However, individual assessment may not always be feasible given time constraints. Pair, small group and even whole group activities can sometimes be preferable in terms of usefulness as well as practicality¹¹.

¹⁰ See Learner Evaluation Appendices for suggested tools.

¹¹ The Tools Chart in the Learner Evaluation Appendices shows how to use a variety of teaching techniques for evaluation.

Evaluating Learners at the End of the Instructional Cycle

At the end of the instructional cycle, REEP teachers make promotion and retention decisions based on the following critical measures:

- * How well a student's language performance matches the entry level description for the next appropriate level
- * Mastery of performance objectives
- * Ability to use language appropriate to the performance objectives.
- * Mastery of reading and writing development objectives

Teachers also consider attendance, participation, motivation, years of education, age, length of time in the US, and student self-assessment information.

The following chart shows how learners typically move through the REEP Curriculum (3rd edition).

TYPICAL CYCLE TO CYCLE MOVEMENT USING THE REEP CURRICULUM (3RD EDITION)
LEVEL	PROMOTION/RETENTION IN FOLLOWING CYCLE
100	Retain in 100; promote to 150 or 200 (The choice between 150 and 200 is based primarily on oral ability since the reading and writing descriptions for 150 and 200 are quite similar.)
150	Retain in 150; promote to 200 or 250 (The choice between 200 and 250 is based primarily on written ability since the speaking and listening descriptions for 200 and 250 are quite similar.)
200	Retain in 200; promote to 250 or 300 (Generally, promotions will be made to 250 rather than 300 because the speaking level for 300 has often not been reached by the end of 200.)
250	Retain in 250; promote to 300 or 350 (Choice is based on oral and written skills; 300 students have very strong oral skills but very weak written skills.)
300	Retain in 300; promote to 350 (Students often repeat 300 to allow time for their literacy skills to develop to the 350 level.)
350	Retain in 350; promote to 450
450	Retain in 450; promote to 550
550	Retain in 550; promote to *650; graduate *REEP does not have a 650 level; the designation of 650 simply indicates that the student has met the exit criteria for the program, but has chosen to continue studying.

Documenting Progress

Progress is documented on the learners' progress report at several times throughout the cycle of instruction. See sample progress report on the next page. Progress reports for each level are located at the beginning of each instructional level.

Initial: By the end of the second week, instructors complete their initial evaluation of the learners and record their assessment on the 2nd page of the progress report. It is imperative to consult the entry level descriptions in completing this evaluation. See entry level descriptions at the end of this section.

On-going: As each performance objective is evaluated, the teacher records the students' performance on the first page of the progress report:

- + Student demonstrated mastery of the objective, i.e was able to successfully perform the task using the language taught.
- ✓ Student needs more practice in order to master the objective.
- A Evaluation was not possible because student was absent.
- NC Objective within a unit covered was not covered by the class.

Mid-cycle: On the second page of the progress reports, instructors comment on the student's progress made toward meeting the entry level descriptions for the next level(s) in each skill area. A rating of good or excellent indicates that a learner is likely to meet the entry descriptions for a higher level by the end of the cycle. A rating of satisfactory or fair indicates that a learner is making progress but may not be able to meet the entry level descriptions for a higher level by the end of one instructional cycle. In the comments section, teachers point out students strengths and specific examples of progress made as well as suggestions for improvement.

The progress reports are returned for students to sign and discuss with their teachers. Students can also make comments about how they feel about their progress and areas of needed improvement.

Final: On the first page of the progress report, teachers evaluate achievement of the reading and writing development objectives. For each skill area in the final assessment box on the second page of the progress report, teachers mark X in the box for the level at which the student is functioning. It is imperative to consult the entry level descriptions for this evaluation.

Both the teacher and the student sign and date the reports and make comments. The teachers records the level recommended for the learner in the subsequent cycle.

Customizing Progress Reports

The Progress Reports provided in this curriculum include all possible topic units for a given instructional level. However, classes do not cover all units in a level in one instructional cycle. Therefore, teachers are encouraged to customize the progress reports to reflect what was covered based on needs assessment. To facilitate this customization at REEP, the teachers can copy the reports from the computer and can delete units not selected for coverage.

ENTRY LEVEL DESCRIPTIONS

The entry level descriptions outline the speaking, listening, reading, and writing skills that learners should exhibit for a particular level at the beginning of the instructional cycle. The goals of the REEP level descriptions are to:

- assist in appropriate placement of learners
- measure a learner's progress in English from one instructional cycle to the next
- assist instructors in assessing a learner's readiness to transition from level to level and from one educational agency to another (e.g. from 550 to Marymount University or the Employment Training Center).

General Entry Level Descriptions

100 (Low Beginning): Has minimal oral and literacy skills, if any. A native English speaker used to dealing with limited English proficient (LEP) speakers can rarely communicate with a person at this level, except through gestures.

150 (Beginning): Can satisfy limited oral and literacy survival needs. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will have difficulty communicating with a person at this level.

200 (High Beginning Oral/Beginning Literacy): Can orally satisfy basic survival needs and very routine social demands, but has very limited literacy skills. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will have some difficulty communicating with a person at this level.

250 (High Beginning): Can satisfy some oral and written survival needs and very routine social demands. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will have some difficulty communicating with a person at this level.

300 (High Intermediate Oral/High Beginning Literacy): Can orally satisfy survival, social, and work demands, but has limited literacy skills. A native speaker not used to dealing with LEP speakers will have some difficulty communicating with a person at this level.

350 (Intermediate): Can satisfy most oral and literacy survival needs and some social and work demands. A native speaker used to dealing with LEP speakers will be able to communicate with a person at this level on familiar topics with little difficulty and effort.

450 (High Intermediate): Can satisfy most oral and literacy survival needs and a majority of social and work demands. A native speaker not used to dealing with LEP speakers will be able to communicate with a person at this level on familiar topics, but with some difficulty and effort.

550 (Advanced): Has effective oral and literacy skills in survival and social situations as well as familiar and unfamiliar work situations. A native speaker not used to dealing with LEP speakers can communicate with a person at this level on most topics.

WRITING DEVELOPMENT - 150

Writing development is integral to this curriculum and has been integrated into every topic unit (See Individual Unit: Writing Development).

LEVEL OBJECTIVE: To write a series of simple sentences.

- VARIABLES:
- * given a model
 - * personal experiences
 - * level appropriate

The goal for writing development for level 150 is to reach level 250 (see entry level descriptions). However, some students will need more than one cycle of instruction to achieve this goal. For them, retention in 150 or promotion to level 200 may be appropriate, depending also on their listening, speaking, and reading level as well as achievement of competencies for the level. See entry level descriptions for levels 150, 200, and 250.

EVALUATION CRITERIA:

- * conveys ideas to readers
- * logical sentence order (chronological)
- * correct capitalization and punctuation

Evaluation criteria indicate how to evaluate the level objective. These criteria should be used to evaluate writing throughout the cycle and to determine achievement of the level objective at the end of the cycle.

WRITING SKILLS DEVELOPMENT

Below are the skills that students will need to master in order to achieve the level objective. These skills should be practiced throughout the cycle.

- Brainstorm using visuals or experiences
- Order sentences chronologically
- Use basic paragraph format
- Use and edit for basic capitalization
- Use and edit for basic end punctuation, apostrophes in contractions, commas in addresses and dates
- Edit for basic grammar:
 - suffixes (-s, -ing)
 - subject pronouns
 - possessive adjectives

WRITING DEVELOPMENT-250

Writing development is integral to this curriculum and has been integrated into every topic unit. (See individual unit: Writing Development).

LEVEL OBJECTIVE:

To write a simple paragraph.

- VARIABLES:
 - given a model
 - familiar, relevant topic
 - level appropriate

The goal for writing development for level 250 is to reach level 350. See entry level descriptions.

EVALUATION CRITERIA:

- uses paragraph format
- conveys ideas to readers logically organized
- correct word order for simple sentences
- correct end punctuation and capitalization

WRITING SKILLS DEVELOPMENT

Below are the skills that students need to master in order to achieve the level objective. These skills should be practiced throughout the cycle.

- Brainstorm using visuals or familiar topics
- Separate information into lists or categories
- Order sentences using time sequence markers for cohesion
- Use and edit for basic end punctuation, commas, and capitalization
- Edit for basic grammar

READING DEVELOPMENT-250

Reading development is integral to this curriculum and has been integrated into every topic unit. (See individual units: Writing Development).

LEVEL OBJECTIVE: To read simplified materials.

- VARIABLES:
- * familiar and some unfamiliar topics
 - * uses visuals and other aids
 - * short texts
 - * level appropriate

The goal for reading development at level 250 is to reach level 350. Some students will need more than one cycle of instruction to achieve this goal. For them, retention in level 250 or promotion to level 300 may be appropriate, depending also on their listening, speaking, and writing levels as well as their achievement of the competencies for the level. See entry level descriptions.

- EVALUATION CRITERIA:
- * answer questions orally and in writing related to text (T/F, multiple choice, fill-ins, wh-, opinions)
 - * scan to locate information in text to answer questions
 - * identify sequence of simple narrative text
 - * identify main idea

Evaluation criteria indicate how students should be able to demonstrate comprehension of text. These criteria should be used to evaluate reading throughout the cycle and determine achievement of the level objective at the end of the cycle.

READING SKILLS DEVELOPMENT

Below are the skills that students will need to master in order to achieve the level objective. These skills should be practiced throughout the cycle.

READING:

Make predictions from visuals and titles

Predict main idea from title

Deduce word meaning through context

Scan to locate information in text

Identify personal, possessive and demonstrative pronoun antecedents

Identify and use transition words to understand relationship between ideas

VOCABULARY:

Use phonics to decode

Categorize vocabulary (synonyms, antonyms, context)

Deduce meaning of compound words

Identify affixes (-s, -ing, -ed, -er)

LEVEL 300

The emphasis at this level is on developing reading and writing skills. Learners at this level typically have very good oral skills but weak written skills. They are usually learners who have had little education in their native countries and/or have been living in the United States for quite awhile without formally studying English.

The reading and writing development units as well as the lifeskills reading and writing objectives in selected topic units are required at level 300. Therefore, the organization of the instructional units varies somewhat from the other levels. The reading and writing development units appear immediately following the "Getting Started" Unit rather than in alphabetical order, and the lifeskills reading and writing objectives are listed separately from the lifeskills speaking and listening objectives in the topic units.

WRITING DEVELOPMENT UNIT - 300

Writing development is integral to this curriculum and is extremely important at level 300. At level 300, the writing unit is a required unit. In addition to this unit, writing development has been integrated into every topic unit. (See Individual units: Developmental Writing and lifeskills writing objectives in each topic unit.)

Needs Assessment: The goals of Needs Assessment are to:

- 1) Determine the kinds of writing to practice (e.g. letters, narrative, reports, summaries). See Learner Needs Appendices, particularly Learner Generated Questionnaires.
- 2) Determine which areas of writing they want to self-assess (e.g. how correct was spelling? how clear was meaning?).
- 3) Identify strategies for practicing and improving their writing.

Resource: Learning to Learn English, p. 97-99, 101-106, 114.

LEVEL OBJECTIVE: To write a short paragraph.

- VARIABLES:
- given a model
 - a familiar topic
 - level appropriate

The goal for writing development for level 300 is to reach level 350. However, it may take a learner more than one cycle to achieve this goal. See entry level descriptions.

EVALUATION CRITERIA:

- communicates ideas to readers
- logically organized
- revises for clear meaning, main idea and details
- correct word order in simple sentences
- uses and edits for end punctuation, capitalization and verb suffixes (-s, -ed, -ing)

READING DEVELOPMENT-300

Reading development is integral to this curriculum and is extremely important at level 300. At level 300, the reading development unit is required. Reading has also been integrated into every topic unit. (See individual units: Developmental Reading as well as lifeskills reading objectives in each topic unit).

Needs Assessment: The goals of Needs Assessment are to:

- 1) Determine the kinds of reading to practice (e.g. narrative, newspapers, poetry, reports, lifeskills, etc.).
- 2) Identify strategies for practicing and improving reading. Resource:

Learning to Learn English

LEVEL OBJECTIVE: To read simplified materials.

- VARIABLES:
- familiar and unfamiliar topics
 - uses visuals and other aids
 - with pre-reading assistance
 - level appropriate

The goal for reading development for level 300 is to reach level 350. However, it may take learners more than one cycle to achieve this goal. See entry level descriptions.

EVALUATION CRITERIA:

- Answer questions related to text (true/false, wh-, multiple choice, fill-ins, opinions)
- Scan to locate information in text to answer questions
- Interpret graphs, charts and maps
- Identify pronoun antecedents
- Identify main idea
- Identify sequence of narrative
- Retell story orally

Evaluation criteria indicate how students at this level should be able to demonstrate comprehension of text. These criteria should be used to evaluate reading throughout the cycle and to determine achievement of the level objective at the end of the cycle.

WRITING DEVELOPMENT - 350

Writing development is integral to this curriculum and has been integrated into every topic unit. (See Individual unit: Writing Development.)

LEVEL OBJECTIVE: To write a paragraph.

- VARIABLES:
- a familiar topic
 - chronological and/or descriptive
 - level appropriate

The goal for writing development at 350 is to reach level 450. See entry level descriptions.

EVALUATION CRITERIA:

- communicates ideas to readers
- elaborates ideas
- correct word order
- correct punctuation and capitalization
- correct verb tenses (simple present, simple past)

WRITING SKILLS DEVELOPMENT

Below are the skills that students will need to master in order to achieve the level objective. These skills should be practiced throughout the cycle.

Brainstorm on a variety of topics

Select and organize ideas for a topic

Write a topic sentence

Organize topic in logical sequence

Write supporting sentences

Elaborate on ideas

Use and edit for basic internal and end punctuation as well as capitalization

Edit for grammar:

affixes (-s, -ed, -er, -est, -ing, -ment)

pronouns (subject and object)

possessive adjectives and quantifiers

verb tenses (simple present, simple past)

word order (subject+verb+object)

READING DEVELOPMENT - 350

Reading development is integral to this curriculum and has been integrated into every topic unit (See Individual unit: Reading Development).

LEVEL OBJECTIVE: To read non-simplified material.

- VARIABLES:
- familiar topics
 - with/without visual aids
 - level appropriate

The goal for reading development for this level is to reach level 450. See entry level descriptions.

- EVALUATION CRITERIA:
- answer questions orally and in writing (factual, some inference)
 - scan text to locate information to answer questions
 - retell story orally
 - paraphrase main idea of story

Evaluation criteria indicate how a student at this level should be able to demonstrate comprehension of text. These criteria should be used to evaluate reading throughout the cycle and to determine achievement of the level objective at the end of the cycle.

READING SKILLS DEVELOPMENT

Below are the skills that students will need to master in order to achieve the level objective. These skills should be practiced throughout the cycle.

RESOURCES

Below are the resources suggested for this level. Also see individual units for suggested integration with topics.

READING:

- Make predictions from titles, subtitles, and headlines
- Skim and identify main idea of short readings
- Scan text for specific information
- Deduce word meanings using surrounding text and connectors
- Use punctuation cues to assist comprehension
- Distinguish between fact and opinion statements

VOCABULARY:

- Deduce meaning of compound words and words with basic prefixes and suffixes
- Categorize vocabulary based on content schemata

LEVEL 550

The advanced level (550) is designed as a bridge course between the functional, lifeskills oriented levels (100-450) at REEP and the types of educational institutions that our learners may transition to upon completion of the REEP program, ie. intensive academic or vocational training programs. For this reason, 550 is more skills-based than the lower levels and is organized by study and language skills rather than by topic areas. However, 550 is learner-centered, and needs assessment is integral to the successful implementation of the curriculum at this level (See Written Questionnaire: Level 550 and Individualized Education Plan (IEP) in the needs assessment appendices).

The 550 level consists of:

- * Overview of Unit Organization and Content
- * Entry level descriptions that describe the students entering 550 with regard to their speaking, listening, reading, and writing
- * Exit level descriptions that describe the speaking, listening, reading, and writing skills for students who have successfully completed the 550 level and are ready to transition to academic or vocational training programs
- * Progress report
- * List of level appropriate resources, including computer-assisted and audiovisual resources
- * 8 instructional units (in alphabetical order).
- * Structures and resources

UNIT TITLE: LEVEL 550
NEEDS ASSESSMENT: Information about course needs assessment in the first unit of each level and unit needs assessment information for each level.
DEVELOPMENTAL READING: Refers teachers to the "Reading Strategies" unit for developmental reading objectives and provides suggested resources for each unit.
OBJECTIVES	RESOURCES AND FOCUS	INTEGRATION
This column contains the performance objectives for a particular unit. Objectives chosen to be covered through needs assessment are those which need to be evaluated and documented on the progress report. Other objectives determined through needs assessment and covered in the class should be evaluated and documented on the progress reports as well.	The resource column provides suggested resources for each objective. These resources include the language and vocabulary to be taught and practiced for achievement of the objectives. The resources are also identified by the focus or content for which they are most appropriate: general (G) , academic (A) , or vocational (V) . These are suggested resources. Teachers should select materials based on the needs and abilities of their students. It is not intended that all resources be used for each objective. A list of all suggested 550 resources follows the 550 progress report.	Related Units and Objectives: Suggestions for integrated units, e.g. essay writing and test taking, oral presentations and reference materials. Structures: See Index of Structures for resources and structures suggested for 550 at the end of the 550 instructional units. Cross-culture: Suggestions for integrating cultural discussion points into the coverage of objectives. See Approaches to Cross-Cultural Issues in the Instructional Supplements Appendices.
CA/AV RESOURCES: Suggested computer-assisted and audiovisual resources for a particular topic. A list of CA/AV resources suggested for 550 follow the 550 progress report.

ENTRY LEVEL DESCRIPTIONS: 550

550 (Advanced) Has effective oral and literacy skills in survival and social situations as well as familiar and unfamiliar work situations. A native speaker not used to dealing with LEP speakers can communicate with a person at this level on most topics.		SPEAKING	LISTENING	READING	WRITING
Functions independently in nearly all social and work situations. Speaks fluently with little or no hesitation. Communicates by telephone on familiar subjects. Can clarify and reword some conversation. Controls basic grammar but makes mistakes with complex structures.	Understands conversations on everyday topics at normal speed in contact situations. May need general clarification and repetition. Understands most non-contact communication on familiar topics and some communication on unfamiliar topics. May have some difficulty following conversation between native speakers. Understands complex oral instructions.	Can demonstrate comprehension of a variety of non-simplified passages (e.g. academic, fiction, etc.) by answering oral and written comprehension questions, including opinion and some inference questions. Can orally retell most reading passages. Demonstrates some strategies for guessing vocabulary in context, including surrounding words and word order. Reads using multiple context clues. Can generally identify and paraphrase the main idea. Can generally recognize difference between fact and opinion.	Given a topic, can write a paragraph with a main idea and supporting sentences. May not use topic sentences and generally does not use concluding sentences. Can narrow or expand a paragraph topic with assistance. May have some sequencing problems within the paragraph. Can identify and self-edit some errors with assistance. Uses compound and complex sentences. Makes errors in complex structures such as passive, present perfect, and conditionals.

TRANSITION ESL CURRICULUM FOR INDIVIDUALIZED STUDY

Introduction to the Transition ESL Curriculum for Individualized Study

Background on the Adult Learning Center

The REEP Adult Learning Center is a state of the art multi-media ESL classroom that is used for whole class instruction as well as walk-in instruction. For whole class instruction, learners work independently, in pairs, or in small groups on lessons and projects integrated into the competencies and topic areas within the General ESL curriculum (See Guide to Integrating Use of Computers into Language Instruction in the Appendices). The Adult Learning Center is also home to an open-entry, open-exit, walk-in program. At intake, learners take a placement test and work with a teacher to discuss learning goals. Based on the intake interview and results on the test, learners are placed into a curriculum customized to meet their language learning needs and their educational goals. Learners are given a folder which includes assignments, time sheet, and ongoing log of assignments completed. The folder serves as an ongoing record of learner progress. Through on-going dialogue with instructors, learners further refine and articulate their learning goals as well as to recognize and discuss their progress.

Introduction to the Transition ESL Curriculum for Individualized Study

Organization of the Curriculum. Adult learners come to language learning with different strengths. In order to ensure their successful transition from adult ESL to either academic or vocational training, the Transition ESL Curriculum for Individualized Study has been developed. The curriculum is modular and consists of six skills-based units:

- building vocabulary
- note taking
- reading strategies
- test taking strategies
- using reference materials
- writing development

The Transition ESL Curriculum for Individualized Study both parallels and supports the 550 level curriculum, focusing on skills development key to ensuring learner success in advanced level study or training. It is designed for:

- 1) learners who have completed the 550 level, but still need to strengthen certain skills (such as writing development). The same curricular objectives may be used, but alternative materials may be substituted.
- 2) learners who have not studied in the 550 level, but who meet the entry level criteria for the 550 level and need to study on an individualized basis.

Organization of each unit. Each of the six units comprises between three and five specific, skills-based objectives. Learners work independently through modules designed to achieve these objectives. Each objective module includes carefully sequenced study, task, and performance evaluation components. Learners must work through a complete objective module before advancing to work in another module. This approach may be likened to lesson planning, in which learners work through introductory, practice, application, and evaluation activities in order to actively learn and demonstrate competence.

SAMPLE OBJECTIVE MODULE

Objective:
STUDY:	The study component introduces learners to the module objective through background reading or computer tutorials.
TASK:	The task component directs learners to complete assignments in order to further their understanding and to practice the skill.
EVALUATION:	Depending on the objective, the evaluation exercise serves to assess objectively a learner's ability to apply concepts learned, or as a self-evaluation of how well a learner understands concepts and ideas.

Using the Curriculum

Needs assessment. Learners work with a teacher to determine specific objectives for study which are based on the learner's future educational goals as well as the learner's self-perception of his/her strengths and weaknesses. In many cases, written evaluations from previous teachers or recommendations from an educational counselor may also play a role within the assessment process. Learners then read the unit objectives and select the units that will best help them meet their needs.

Working through the units. Learners work completely through one objective at a time. Because individualized study is self-paced, time on individual task as well as total time to complete an objective varies. Likewise, because units vary in the number of objective modules, the length of time to complete units also varies. Some learners may complete an entire module within three or four hours, especially if they have some familiarity with the objective. Writing objectives tend to take longer, because of the emphasis on the stages of the writing process.

Evaluation. Upon the completion of each component in a module, learners check with a teacher before continuing. Teachers monitor learner progress, and learners are free to ask teachers for help when needed. Upon the completion of the evaluation task, the learner and teacher meet to go over the learner's work within the module. Teachers record an evaluation of learner progress in the student folder in a space provided for progress on objectives. Learners write reflections on their progress in their folders, as well. In this way, learner progress is documented. These evaluative comments are important not only to the learner and the specific teacher making the comment, but to other teachers who may work with the learner.

Periodically, learners express an interest in working through an objective again. This is often the case with the building vocabulary and writing development units. Teachers can supplement additional activities or reference in assignments that they determine appropriate in assisting the learner in developing skills. Remarks concerning a learner's wish to continue working on an objective are recorded in the folder, as are the supplemental activities.

Resources. See individual units for resources related to specific objectives. A listing of all resources used in the Transition ESL Curriculum for Individualized Study follows the instructional units. For publishers' information, see Resource Appendices.

Conclusion

Effective independent study makes for successful academic study and vocational training. Learners who are able to make informed decisions about what they study and are able to articulate the learning process will be able to handle new educational experiences with skill and confidence. By engaging the learner in setting goals and selecting the objectives to meet those goals, the curriculum encourages informed decision making. Because learners also evaluate their own progress within each module, the modular curricular design encourages review of the topic and reflection about the process of learning, both key ingredients in developing successful study skills. The modular approach is easily replicable. Using the modular curricular format, teachers and curriculum designers may develop modules targeted for learners at higher and lower proficiency levels.

BUILDING VOCABULARY

Unit Objective: Students will be able to deduce or infer meaning of vocabulary items in context, using all available strategies and techniques.

Performance Objectives:

1. Use every available contextual clue to deduce word meaning in context.
 - a. Recognize the part of speech of the new word.
 - b. Associate the sentence and paragraph topic with word meaning.
 - c. Scan previous and subsequent sentences for additional clues to meaning.
2. Recognize roots and common prefix and suffix meanings.
3. Associate new words with known synonyms.

NOTE TAKING

Unit Objective: Students will be able to take effective notes from lectures and readings. They will analyze and improve their own style of note taking.

Performance Objectives:

1. Learn note taking strategies such as, abbreviations; article, preposition and auxiliary deletion to aid them in taking fast, comprehensible notes.
2. Learn techniques for organizing information; i.e. outlining, highlighting, listing, using margin notes and patterning (Using diagrams, charts and pictures).
3. Discriminate the main points and important details from the anecdotal and unimportant information that is spoken and written.

1. Objective: To learn note taking strategies such as, abbreviations and deletion of articles, prepositions and auxiliaries.

STRUCTURES

Basic to the effective implementation of the REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) is the belief that learners should have a voice in deciding what topics are relevant to their lives. Instruction, therefore, is driven by the language needed to communicate effectively within these identified topics. As learners progress through the levels of the curriculum, the language needed to effectively communicate ideas becomes increasing more complex, and hence more emphasis is placed on communicative grammar instruction and practice.

Teachers should plan lessons that integrate grammar instruction into communicative practice that is relevant to the curricular topics selected by the learners. Based on the sample language for performance objectives, structures are referenced into the integration columns of the topic units (See individual units).

This section provides an overview of which structures are taught across levels. At the end of each level, there is an index of structures by unit as well as suggested resources.

This curriculum does not intend to provide a comprehensive listing of all possible structures. The structures listed are those that have been referenced into the curriculum based on the sample language provided for performance objectives. The actual coverage of structures will depend on the topical and language learning needs and interests of a particular group of learners.

For more information and discussion regarding teaching grammar, please consult the following resources:

APPROACH TO CULTURAL POINTS AND ISSUES

Culture is infused throughout the REEP Curriculum (3rd Edition). All of the lifeskills topic units and most of the performance objectives directly relate to aspects of US culture. Our purpose is to promote discussion, understanding, and appreciation of cultural similarities and differences. Infusion of cross-cultural discussion points is designed to encourage classroom discussions which will reveal a variety of customs and beliefs in both the native cultures and the target U.S. culture.

Our adult learners bring a wealth of experience and knowledge about their cultures to the classroom. The REEP curriculum capitalizes on this resource by providing opportunities for learners to share their experience and knowledge in the classroom. Cross-cultural discussion can serve a number of purposes. First, such discussion promotes learning; adults learn better when they can relate the knowledge that they possess to the new knowledge that they are trying to acquire. Second, cross-cultural discussion promotes an understanding and appreciation of cultural similarities and differences. Through exploring cross-cultural issues, learners will increase their understanding of their own, this country's, and their classmates' cultures. An appreciation of all these cultures is essential in easing adjustment to life in the US and is critical to success in the workplace. In the majority of workplaces in Virginia, for example, there is no single culture represented; immigrants and refugees need to learn to get along with people from a wide variety of cultures, not just from the U.S.

Cross-cultural points have been referenced into the integration column in each unit. The points can be used to introduce topics or as discussion starters during on-going topics of study. Teachers may select and adapt them as appropriate for the needs and backgrounds of their students. It is expected that these points will lead to other points and further discussion. Discussion may take place among the class as a whole or in small groups. Students should provide information about their cultures and talk about what they know about life in the United States. Teachers may facilitate or participate in the discussions, addressing the issue from one or more American points of view.

In order to promote true cross-cultural understanding, it is important for the teachers and students not to be judgmental, i.e. label certain behaviors and beliefs as right or wrong. It is important to stress that differences exist between cultures but that one way of doing something is not inherently better or worse than another.

Guide to Integrating Use of Computers into Language Instruction
(Contributed by Susan Huss-Lederman)

Introduction

Effective educational software, like any other teaching aid, relies on critical evaluation for effective implementation into a learning context. Programs that are evaluated for appropriate CALL (computer assisted language learning) can be enjoyed with most success by learners and teachers if learners understand what they will be doing and are already somewhat familiar with the material they will practice or work with on the computer. Of the many educational software programs that REEP uses, some have been designed for ESL, but most have not been. Through practice and observation, teachers can integrate software into instruction for learners to practice and learn English.

Strategies for using educational software includes planning for learners' successful encounters using it. For example, pairing learners who speak different native languages in front of the terminal is one way to facilitate real communication, especially if the software requires critical thinking to solve a problem. Learners who are used to group work or cooperative learning techniques from the classroom enjoy such an approach at the computer, too. Using the computer together becomes a natural extension of cooperative problem solving. Similarly, peer teaching works well in front of the computer terminal. Learners with better developed reading and keyboarding skills can direct their fellow learners toward successful use of the computer. Those they are coaching can ask for clarification without risking embarrassment in front of a class.

Types of software available

Software used by learners in educational contexts is often categorized into the following genres:

1. drill and practice
2. tutorial
3. simulation and game
4. databases and multi-media encyclopedias
5. applications software, including word processing and spreadsheets

The first three categories encompass instructional software programs, while the last two consist of programs that can be adapted to educational contexts. Software is changing as hardware becomes more sophisticated. The advent of multi-media, CD-ROM and laser disc programs enable learners to interact with information and language in a less linear way than ever before. Sound and voice peripherals are becoming less expensive and more standardized, yielding more affordable enrichment to the second-language learner's experience with computers.

Each instructional software program has an inherent methodology within its design. Professionals responsible for evaluating software for use in second language learning contexts should become familiar with analyzing software for inherent methodology, determining when in the sequence of language practice a learner will use the software, and deciding what opportunities for manipulating language the learner will have when using the software. This is especially crucial when evaluating non-ESL software for ESL instruction.

Non-ESL software often assumes native-speaker familiarity with slang or technical language, terms used for praise, and ability to follow multi-step written or spoken directions, as well as an understanding of the target culture. Teachers must weigh these factors against the benefits the software offers their learners for meaningful language learning and practice. Learning activities prepared to help learners manage all of this "newness" enrich the learning experience and help learners experience success through independent learning. Below are descriptions of software types, followed by suggested uses of software for language learning.

Drill and Practice. As the name suggests, drill and practice software gives a learner repeated opportunity to practice a specific skill. Correct responses are rewarded with a positive comment (e.g., Right!). If learners respond incorrectly, they are asked to try again. If they don't answer correctly, but only after multiple attempts, the right answer is displayed. Some drill and practice programs end by showing learners how many correct responses they have given. Based on the learner's score, these programs recommend whether or not the learner should repeat the computer lesson.

Some drill and practice programs have a main menu which allows learners to choose from a range of drill types. Multiple choice drills merely require that learners recognize a correct answer and select it with a keystroke, while other drills demand that learners type a correct word, letter or sentence. Many of these programs allow for easy teacher-authoring of lessons customized to learner needs. Examples include:

1. Word Attack Plus and Goal Vocabulary, (Davidson and Associates) programs to teach native-speaking adults to recognize and to practice spelling vocabulary.
2. English Express Language Builder and Speech Master, (Davidson and Associates) programs to teach adult ESL learners to recognize, pronounce, and spell words related in context.
3. Basic Vocabulary Builder on Computer (National Textbook), a program that tests learners' ability to spell related vocabulary words.

4. Goal Reading (Davidson and Associates), tests comprehension of timed reading passages and quizzes learners on vocabulary learned in context of readings.

Tutorial. Tutorial programs usually begin with a diagnostic test. If the learner demonstrates weakness in certain areas, the program provides the learner with a tutorial-explanatory screens with questions the learner must answer. At the end of the tutorial, the learner takes another quiz. If the learner scores a passing score, s/he is encouraged to go on to the next level of difficulty. Examples of tutorials include:

1. SELF (American Language Academy), a grammar program that teaches basic differences between Spanish and English grammar with bilingual support available on-line.
2. Grammar Mastery II (American Language Academy), well-written grammar tutorials that presume some knowledge of grammatical concepts.
3. INVEST reading strand (Jostens Learning Corporation), offers learners instruction in critical reading skills and gives qualitative feedback when learners answer comprehension questions. It is useful to provide learners with additional questions on a handout so that they can discuss the content of the reading with others. This provides them with language practice and turns the reading experience into a more active one.

Simulation and game. In simulations, the learner enters a micro world (a computer-created situation) and must work within it to solve a problem. Such programs naturally foster problem-solving discussions for small group or pair work. Simulations include:

1. "Where in the World Is Carmen SanDiego?", a popular children's mystery game which relies on knowledge of world geography;
2. INVEST (Jostens Learning Corporation) offers many simulation programs in workplace contexts, in which learners are put into the roles of supervisors hiring employees or job candidates interviewing for jobs. Such programs foster use of language relevant to expressing oneself in real life contexts.
3. Prodigy offers many games, some of them simulations, under Entertainment.

Databases, Multi-media Encyclopedias, and On-Line Services. Software programs in this category, although not expressly designed for language learning, may also be used to foster interaction with the information that learners retrieve. Educational databases work like any other database. Learners specify parameters for information on certain topics and then use the information they retrieve. Teacher-designed work sheets or activities are necessary for learners to use databases meaningfully. Multi-media encyclopedias enable learners to use keywords and other search features to focus on a topic. On-line services enable learners to point and click to find topics of interest, as well as to conduct key-word searches. Examples of programs include:

1. Virginia View (Vital Information for Employment and Work, developed by Virginia Polytechnic Institute), enables learners to access information from an occupational and educational database, once they have input criteria information about themselves. As personal information is entered, the array of jobs narrows to those most closely attuned with individual preferences. Learners can also research all post-secondary educational institutions within the Commonwealth of Virginia, and learn about financial aid options available.
2. PC Globe, PC USA (both by Broderbund), geo-political databases, these programs enable learners to research countries and U.S. states. Learners can print out information, including maps, and listen to national anthems and state songs.
3. Compton's Multi-media Encyclopedia on CD-ROM (Compton's Multimedia) enables learners to develop skills in managing large amounts of information. Learners can scan a table of contents and move to the relevant section of an article by clicking on a mouse. Learners can also search for information by entering keywords and selecting articles based on them. A limited amount of information may be printed, and learners may also access a notebook window to take notes to print out later.
4. Prodigy enables learners to access information from the on-line service through a user-friendly graphical interface. Learners can read today's headlines, access Consumer Reports, National Geographic, numerous travel guides, and other information resources either by entering a keyword through the "jump" feature, or by pointing and clicking a mouse on different menu items.

Using a database, multi-media encyclopedia, or on-line service as a step in a larger activity, such as writing a report, or preparing a talk, is a motivating and meaningful exercise for learners because it is not contrived. It is one where they can learn about a topic and decide how much or how little information they want. The information that the learners gather on their own satisfies real intellectual curiosity.

Applications Software/Word Processing. Applications software includes, among others, spreadsheet and word processing/desktop publishing programs. The following discussion is limited to word processing programs. There are many word processing programs with different features. Examples include:

1. WordPerfect (WordPerfect Corporation) is widely used in business as well as educational contexts. Using this program helps learners develop proficiency in using software used in the world of work.

The following two programs, although not referenced into the curriculum, are also appropriate for educational uses. Their special features are highlighted.

2. BankStreet Writer (Scholastic, Inc.) is an easy-to-use multiple loading program designed for educational use. Teachers can create and save frozen text prompts, and can in effect, create writing tutorials.
3. Eye Relief (SkiSoft) is a large-type word processing program. Originally developed for the visually impaired, the size of characters on the monitor, background and character color, and cursor blink rate can all be easily adapted to meet the needs of the user.

Word processing programs give learners flexibility in revising drafts and spell-checking, and thus facilitate the writing process. Use of word processing programs also is useful in generating language experience approach stories and reading extension exercises, as well as other collaborative writing projects.

Using Software in Effective Language Learning and Practice

Learner use of any software is enhanced if it is used to accomplish a purpose external to "using software for software's sake." As stated before, educational software lessons have an inherent pedagogical methodology in their design, while word processing, desktop publishing programs, and databases do not. And as mentioned before, software not designed for non-native speakers who are learning English may require either pre-teaching or support. These factors influence teachers' decisions concerning software use.

At REEP, we use a lot of non-ESL software focused in lifeskills areas and problem solving. This is done, in part, because there is very little CALL software available that offers lifeskills and problem solving contexts for language use. In large part, software for ESL is focussed on the structure of language, not on social use. Much presupposes knowledge of grammatical concepts.

Guidelines

1. Guide the Learner's Information "Intake".

At REEP, we have found that database use is enhanced when learners work with handouts that guide them in selecting information. The content of the handout can consist of questions generated by learners. For example, in using the PC Globe database for a class project on countries and cultures, learners may collaborate in determining the information they wish to find in the database. This focuses them on selecting specific information from a seemingly limitless source.

On-line reading tutorials are often interesting for learners while they are reading them, but once they finish the story, learners have difficulty in recalling information, perhaps because they have not engaged in pre-reading, predictive activities in a group. REEP teachers have dealt with this by selecting programs based on learner goals and interest. Learners are either instructed to take notes or to complete a guided note-taking handout. Learners later use the information either to give a presentation or to collaborate on group written reports (for example, on important women in U.S. history) which are displayed in the school hallways for all learners to read. In this way, learners are reading for a purpose and are accountable to share this information with others.

2. Integrate software use into language learning objectives.

Use of software should not be treated like an unusual treat, but should fit into an overall objective. Software that helps a learner successfully complete an objective is worthy of use at any level of learner ability. For example, literacy learners who can demonstrate that they can identify and place the letters of the alphabet in order, when this is an objective that the class has been working on, are proud and pleased when they can demonstrate this independent of teacher-fronted guidance.

3. Customize instruction when appropriate.

As mentioned earlier, some drill and practice software programs enable instructors to author or customize lessons by entering their own vocabulary or reading lessons. Most Davidson products have authoring and customizing features. Teachers at REEP have created lessons to help learners recognize want-ad abbreviations and job-related vocabulary. Stories written by learners have been entered onto reading programs.

Especially useful for low-level readers, learners enjoy reading about people like themselves in familiar contexts. Teachers supply on-line reading comprehension questions.

4. Provide necessary preteaching.

Before using certain educational computer programs (especially drill and practice which often test what a learner knows), it is important to help learners gain familiarity with the content. REEP teachers make use of language master card readers, especially at beginning levels to assist learners in learning vocabulary and in reading, before they use computer programs that more rigorously test their knowledge. For example, in order to help beginners spell related vocabulary items given on the Basic Vocabulary Builder on Computer program (National Textbook Company), teachers have mounted pictures and vocabulary words on language master cards. Learners read and listen to the cards before using the computer program. When using the computer program, learners can test their vocabulary recognition and spelling abilities.

Conclusion

Computers and other educational technologies work best when integrated into lessons based on learners' needs and goals. The learning situation is ripe for learners to engage in language learning and practice. In addition to practicing with the on-screen content, when learners collaborate on using the same program they engage in task-related interactions, natural situations in which to practice requesting and giving clarification and to directing others to action without teacher intervention. Finally, providing adult learners an orientation to technology is a service in a society that uses them increasingly in occupational, service and personal settings.

SAMPLE LESSON PLAN FORM

(Contributed by Susan Otero)

TOPIC: Jobs, Finding Work

LEVEL: Intermediate

LESSON OBJECTIVE: Students will be able to describe past and present jobs, including duties and responsibilities.

BASIC SKILLS: present tense, past tense, vocabulary (job titles, action verbs)

LIFE SKILL: describe job duties and responsibilities (to get a new job-application/interview; to get promotion/raise)

LANGUAGE FOCUS: speaking and listening

ESTIMATED TIME: approximately two and a half hours

STAGES OF THE LESSON:

* Warm-up/Review Students will review job title vocabulary by brainstorming jobs for different categories such as jobs working with people, machines, animals, computers, children, numbers, tools, etc.

* Introduction Students discuss and identify why it's important to be able to explain their jobs, including duties and responsibilities.

* Presentation Using job titles from warm-up/review, students discuss and identify duties and responsibilities for various jobs. Teacher asks students about other jobs they have/have had as well as duties and responsibilities. Teacher elicits from students questions to ask about past/present jobs (What did you do? What experience do you have? What is your job? What are your responsibilities? etc.) as well as appropriate responses (I was a mechanic. I fixed cars. I used to teach children. I am responsible for taking inventory. My duties are to answer the phone and take messages.)

* Practice Students use information grid (see Learner Needs Assessment Appendix) to ask questions about previous job title, previous job duties, present job and present job duties.

* Application Students complete simplified job history section on a job application.

* Evaluation Students perform role play in which one student is given the role of asking questions to another student about their job experience and duties, and the second student is given the role of responding to the questions with information about his/her job experience and duties. The other students listen to role play and must write down job title and duties.

USING THE PHONETIC ALPHABET IN THE DICTIONARY TO IMPROVE PRONUNCIATION: UNIT PLANNING NOTES
(Contributed by Suzanne Grant)

LESSON OBJECTIVE: Students will be able to use the pronunciation key in the Longman Dictionary of American English to improve their pronunciation of spelling mispronunciations. By looking up phonetic transcriptions in the dictionary, students will be able to learn the pronunciation of new words and check the pronunciation of words they are not sure of.

* Spelling mispronunciations are words that students mispronounce because they cannot predict the pronunciation of a word from the spelling as opposed to words they mispronounce because they are unable to produce the sounds or stress patterns.

It may be first necessary to work on discriminating and producing the sound and stress patterns of American English. Looking up the pronunciation in the dictionary is not useful if the students cannot produce the sounds. Two good sources are Pronouncing American English (Harper & Row) by Gertrude Orion and Clear Speech (Cambridge University Press) by Judith Gilbert. There is a diagnostic listening test in Clear Speech. The Longman Pronunciation Key can be used as a diagnostic production test. Have students read Key Words. If it seems that students have mispronounced the word because of spelling, give them an alternate word with the same sound.

COVERAGE TIME: Should span several class periods and be reviewed periodically depending on how much time needs to be spent on articulatory work.

LEVEL OF STUDENTS: High intermediate and advanced.

SUGGESTED STEPS/ACTIVITIES:

INTRODUCTION:

Using "Problems with English Spelling" go over/elicit common problems with relying on English spelling to predict pronunciation. Elicit other examples.

Problems with English Spelling:

a. 1 letter= many sounds

cat	all	paper	alive	a= 4 sounds
city	cat			c= 2 sounds

b. 1 sound= many spellings

say	weigh	page	great	they	ey= 5 spellings
-----	-------	------	-------	------	-----------------

c. same pronunciation/different spelling:

sun	son
-----	-----

d. same spelling/different pronunciation:

bow (verb)	bow (noun)
------------	------------

e. silent letters:

island	note	bomb

PRESENTATION:

1. Using the Longman Pronunciation Key, introduce students to the phonetic alphabet.
2. Go over the symbols, sounds, and examples in the Longman Pronunciation Key. Note the sounds that the students have trouble producing and plan to do some extra work on those. Elicit other examples from students to assess whether or not students can recognize the sound and tell when two sounds are the same. In most cases, students will not be able to consistently produce sounds if they cannot discriminate them.

Some point to include:

- a) Unlike orthographic alphabet, 1 phonetic symbol always refers to the same sound, eg:
/g/ always stands for the sound in good, but never for the sound judge.
/h/ always stands for the sound in house, but never for the silent "h" in hour.
- b) Some of the phonetic symbols look like orthographic symbols ("g" and /g/). Others are completely different, eg. the phonetic symbol for the ng in sing.

As an out of class reference, it would be very helpful for the students to have a tape recording of a native speaker sounding out the symbols and their examples.

PRACTICE:

Do as many practice activities as needed to help students learn the symbols and corresponding sounds. (This could span several classes). The suggested activities below can be done in small groups or pairs.

- a) Give students symbols and have them come up with as many words as they can think of that contain the sound. When in doubt, students can look words up in the dictionary.
- b) Give students phonetic spellings and have them sound out the words.
- c) Give students orthographic spellings and have them transcribe the words using the pronunciation key.
- d) Notecards: (One side with phonetic spelling only; the other side with orthographic and phonetic spelling). In pairs, students can practice reading phonetic spellings while partner checks pronunciation.
- e) Have students identify words that they think they have difficulty pronouncing and look them up in the dictionary. Students can keep a record of the words and their pronunciation in a notebook or on notecards.

EVALUATION:

Give students a list of words to look up in the dictionary and have them sound out the pronunciation.

EXTENSION/APPLICATION ACTIVITIES:

- a) Have students record a passage, such as the following passage, once without using a dictionary. Then, have them check the dictionary for the pronunciation of words they are not sure of and rerecord the passage. (This passage contains all the phonemes of American English.)

Many now think the Steelers will have a great chance to win the Superbowl for the third year in a row. The team is justly proud of its usually competent defense, its sure-footed veterans, and its three zippy linebackers.

(From Thomas Scovel's studies on foreign accent recognition. For more information, see A Time to Speak: A Psycholinguistic Inquiry into the Critical Period for Human Speech.)

- b) Have students record a 2-3 minute talk on a topic that interests them without consulting their dictionaries. Then, have them check the dictionary for words they are unsure of and rerecord those words.
- c) Have students prepare a 2-3 minute speech to give in class. They can make a list of words and their pronunciations to practice before the speech. The teacher can jot down mispronounced words as students are giving the speech and have them look up the words afterwards.

CINQUAINS
(Contributed by Donna Moss)

Levels: 200 - 550

Time: 1 or 2 class sessions (3-6 hours)

Preparation: Review of parts of speech; nouns, adjectives, -ing verbs, subject verb agreement.

Set-up: Tell the students they are going to write a poem called a Cinquain. Then, explain the structure of the poem.

1 noun
2 adjectives
3 -ing verbs
1 complete sentence
1 noun

Create a class Cinquain. It may be necessary to supply the topic to get things moving.

SAMPLE GROUP CINQUAIN

Pizza
Round, Hot
Cooking, Buying, Eating
It is delicious.
Pizza Hut

Brainstorm with the class possible topics for a Cinquain. For example: Family, colors, seasons, countries, cities, animals, nature, work, school, etc.

Have students check each other's poems for clarity and correct structures. Collect them and have a final check. Then, have students write or type their final drafts.

Students can decorate their papers and display them on a bulletin board or make a book of them.

DIALOGUE CREATION

Purpose:

To elicit a dialogue through picture and gestures. Students generate language at their level.

Directions:

Teacher chooses a situation relevant to the topic being studied and defines the roles involved. Instead of presenting a prepared dialogue, the teacher uses pictures and gestures to elicit the dialogue from the class. The teacher accepts all suggestions from the students and encourages them to work together to provide the correct grammar. It's good to start this technique on the overhead projector and then move to individual handouts.

1. Teacher takes one role, and the students take the other role to elicit the entire dialogue.
2. Repeat the dialogue with each half of class taking one of the roles.
3. Give handouts of pictures for pair work.

Can be followed up with substitution drills, discussion of alternative ways to say the same thing, and writing the dialogue.

Example:

Visuals from class texts.

Applications:

Finding a Job: Making an appointment for an interview.

Telephone: Extending/declining an invitation.

Health: Talking to the doctor about health problems.

Clothing: Exchanging merchandise.

IDENTIFYING MAIN IDEAS AND DETAILS

(Contributed by Pat Thurston)

LEVELS: 300-450

OBJECTIVE: Students will be able demonstrate comprehension of a reading passage by identifying main ideas and details in readings. (This technique can also be applied to the students' own writing to help them identify main ideas and details in their writing.)

SUGGESTED STEPS:

Warm-up/Introduction:

Pre-reading, reading, and other activities related to selected reading passages. Teacher elicits what the students remember about the story and writes their responses on the board. No books, papers, or peeking permitted. Complete sentences should be encouraged.

Presentation:

Teacher introduces the concept of main idea and detail using pieces of chalk. A whole piece of chalk represents the main idea (i.e. What is the whole story about?). Broken pieces of chalk represent details (What are the little pieces of the story?).

Practice:

Teacher elicits the main idea of the story, writes it on the overhead, and puts the whole piece of chalk by the main idea.

Teachers instructs students to look at the sentences they generated on the blackboard and asks if the main idea is there (usually it isn't). Teacher elicits from the students that their sentences are details.

Teacher reads a sentence from the blackboard and represents the details with little pieces of chalk. Repeat for a few sentences.

Teacher puts a handful of chalk on the overhead and elicits details (pieces of the story). As individual learners respond, teacher gives the individual the piece of chalk.

Class reviews details from the board. Then, teacher erases board, and class reviews using the pieces of chalk handed out (eg. What detail is this?).

Application:

Students complete a cloze activity about the reading passage and put sentence strips in order.

INFORMATION GAP

Levels: all

Purpose:

To practice asking and answering questions. Reinforces speaking and listening skills as students are forced to understand each other and to make themselves understood in order to complete a task. Good for practicing asking for clarification.

Steps:

Teacher prepares a master handout that can be used to delete different pieces of information on two sets of handouts. Handout "A" will have some information deleted that handout "B" will provide. Handout "B" will have some other pieces of information deleted that handout "A" will provide. Class is divided in pairs, one student with "A" and the other with "B". Students must ask partner questions to get information necessary to fill in missing information.

Example:

FOOD: Have a simple menu prepared with different prices deleted on handouts "A" and "B".

Variations:

1. Handouts may be pictures, maps, or charts.
2. Students can go into the community with a questionnaire to gather information from two different places (eg. two local stores, two banks, two adult education programs).

Applications:

Housing	Diagrams of houses/apartments with missing pieces of furniture.
Transportation	Grid maps with buildings missing or unnamed.
On the Job	Schedule of workers' tasks, deleting tasks at different times/days.
Family	Family tree with different relationships/ages not filled in.
Clothing	Department store floor plans with different departments unnamed.

LINE DIALOGUES

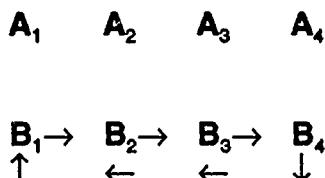

Purpose:

This activity gives students the opportunity to practice short dialogues over and over again with different partners. It also encourages peer teaching.

Directions:

1. Students form two lines facing each other.
2. Students in LINE A have cue cards. These cue cards are used to elicit responses from students in LINE B.
3. LINE A remains stationary, repeating the same questions while LINE B looks at cue cards, responds, and moves right. The last person moves to the beginning of the line. Continue until everyone in LINE B has responded to everyone in LINE A. All pairs are talking at the same time.
4. LINE A gives cue cards to whomever is opposite in LINE B. Repeat the procedure.

Example: Health Problems

LINE A has cue cards of health problems.

- A₁: (holding up fever card) What's the matter?
B₁: He's sick. He has a fever. [Moves down the line to A₂]
A₂: (holding up cold card) What's the matter?
B₂: He's sick. He has a cold. [Moves down the line to A₃]

The teacher can monitor by standing outside the lines or by participating in either one of the lines.

Applications:

Personal ID	Picture of globe, ask "Where are you from?"
Clothing	Clothing pictures and prices, ask "What is this? How much is it?"
Finding a Job	Visuals of workers, ask "What does he do? Where does he work?"

MATCHING GAME

Purpose:

To reinforce vocabulary and structures taught.

Directions:

Prepare sets of 3 x 5 cards with pairs of words or visuals. Cards are put in two stacks on the table. Students pick one card from each stack, hoping to find a pair. If the cards match (a pair), student makes a statement/sentence about the pair. This activity can be done in as many small groups as there are sets of cards available.

Example:

Employment: Cards with the job titles and corresponding work tasks.

1. Titles (cashier)
2. Tasks (takes money)

* A cashier takes money.

Variations:

1. Use pictures instead of words.
2. Use words and abbreviations.
3. Use three stacks of cards.

Applications:

Clothing

1. Weather conditions (cold).
2. Clothes (coat).

* It's cold. Wear a coat.

Health

1. Sick/injured people (headache).
2. Treatment (aspirin).

* I have a headache. Take an aspirin.

Finding the Job

1. Want ad abbreviations (F.T.).
2. Full forms of the abbreviations (full time).

* "F.T." means full-time.

Community Services

1. Envelopes with incomplete addresses.
2. Missing components of addresses.

* What's the zip code? It's 20715.

PEN PAL DIALOGUE JOURNALS

(Contributed by Phil Cackley)

The benefits of dialogue journal practice are well-established and include the opportunity to write, the chance to build rapport between teachers and students, giving individual attention in a large class, and building the students' confidence in their general language ability.

Journal writing is ungraded, non-corrected, and open-ended. It is a cumulative conversation carried over a course of weeks. It is communicative in emphasis, rather than pointed exclusively toward functions or grammar. Also, it provides important reading practice, as well as writing.

The problem with dialogue journals is that they are very time-consuming for the teacher. An alternative is peer dialogue journals, where students in one class "correspond" with students in another. There is a start-up time cost (setting up pairs of students; adequately explaining and preparing students to write), but once in progress, time needed is basically to read the journal entries, monitor them, make sure communication is taking place, and stay in contact with the teacher of the "corresponding" class. Some unexpected subtle gains may also occur. The quality of dialogue may be better between students than between student and teacher. Rather than merely maintaining the dialogue (i.e., talking about the weather or weekend activities), pairs often engage in authentic dialogue about problems finding a job, loneliness, successes in class, and plans for the future.

Suggested Additional Readings

PEN PALS: Suggested Steps and Tips

1) Present the idea to the class. Explain it as a writing practice. Give the ground rules:

Date letters.

Don't worry about spelling or grammar.

Emphasis is on communication, ideas, information.

Any topic is good: work, family, weather, weekends.

Use spiral notebooks, file folders, or 2-pocket folders. (Not loose pieces of paper)

2) Find another teacher and match up student pairs. The best pairs speak different languages (or are at least from different countries), are fairly comparable in age, and have roughly similar writing ability.

- 3) Have students write their first entry, probably a personal ID introduction. Give them 15-45 minutes in class to write (depending on level).
- 4) Give the journals to the other teacher. When the responses come back, have students read and write back. Emphasize it's OK to ask questions; it's a conversation.
- 5) Teachers read the journals outside class, monitor progress, and help students to decipher handwriting or spelling problems. Teachers can help troubleshoot any misunderstandings.
- 6) With drop-outs, try to rematch remaining students. When absences create letter gaps, have the remaining student write anyway, gently admonish the missing student!
- 7) At the end of the term/semester, hold a mixer where partners can meet. Prior to the mixer, students can write 4-5 questions based on the information that they have learned about their partner. During the mixer, students from the two classes ask each other the questions until they have found their partner. "What's your name?" is not acceptable.

You could copy the journals and give to both partners; or return letters to respective writers.

My name Nicola I am from Sudan I come in United Stat May 94 26 I come to Washington I come USA because I hear that America is country have freedom That why I come for freedom and now I was in a english class and I hope that after next year be in college I like to finish my high school and also to get university I like so much. Miss my family and my country because no freedom all over the world this freedom but can say in africa no freedom People are just killing each others for nothing.

Thank you brothers and sister student

Dear:

Nicola:

My name is Pedro, I'm from El Salvador, I'm happy to be your partner, I come to the U.S. in December 1991, I live with my brothers and one sister a nephew, in Arlington, know I'm working of cook in a restaurant. I make American food, is very easy, my boss are from Pakistan.

Nicola, welcome to America, and do you like this country? Do you work? Who with do live here?

I understand you miss the family, I miss my family to and I stay in U.S. 2 years, I miss my friends, my girl-friend and too many people, Know I came to school because I want learning English, maybe in next year I came back to my country.

Nicola I want tell you only, good luck in America.

You friend

PROBLEM SOLVING

Levels: 150-550

Purpose:

To practice skills of persuading, compromising, agreeing, and disagreeing.

Steps:

The teacher presents a problem or situation and provides some possible choices or solutions. The students work in small groups to come to consensus about which solutions/choices are the best. Finally, each group must present its decision and reasoning to the whole class.

Example:

Housing: Students are given a visual of a house in disrepair. Tell them that the landlord will only repair three problems this month. Each group must decide which three problems should be corrected first. (Sample problems: broken steps, broken front window, leaking ceiling, broken front door lock, broken toilet, clogged kitchen sink, no bathroom light, broken refrigerator door.)

Variations:

Present problem/situation but offer no choices or solutions.

Applications:

Finding a Job Hire one person for a particular job, given a job description. Read five resumes and decide which person should get the job.

Food Open a new international restaurant in town. Decide name, how to decorate, menu items, and prices.

Housing Use local housing ads to find a house/apartment for a specified family.

On the Job Present a cultural misunderstanding that might arise between two employees. Decide how to best handle the situation.

PROCESS WRITING: MY KEEPSAKE

(Contributed by Pat Thurston)

Levels: 250-450

Suggested Steps:

Day 1

Teacher brings in a keepsake of his/her own (something personal and of no real value). Students generate questions about the object. Teacher tells the story of the keepsake. Students think of a keepsake of their own (something with a story to tell) and helps those who say they have nothing. Photos, flags, and money are last resorts. Teacher asks them to bring their keepsake to class the next day. (30-45 min.)

Day 2

Students show keepsakes. Students read model (A). Small groups interview each other about keepsakes using questions (B). Students write rough copy. (60+min.)

Day 3

Students peer/self edit. Pairs can use the Reader Response Sheet on the next page. Teacher interviews students with development problems. Students write second copy or final draft.

Day 4

Students publish their final drafts

Model (A)

My Keepsake

My name is Minh Thi. I am from Viet Nam. My keepsake is a button. The button is gold metal. It is a soldier's uniform. Before the U.S., I live 18 months in refugee camp in Thailand. The soldiers have guns. I am not happy.

One day I find this button in the camp. I put in my pocket. In 2 weeks I leave Thailand! I put the button like a necklace and string. It is good luck for me.

When I see this button, I remember the camp. I remember my country. I remember my family in Viet Nam. Sometimes I am sad, but I am happy in the U.S.

Guide Questions (B)

Show your keepsake to the people in your group. Tell about your keepsake. Look at the other keepsakes. Ask about these things. Listen to your classmates.

- What is your keepsake?
- What is it made of?
- What is it for?
- Where? How did you get it?
- Why is it important to you?
- What do you think about when you see it?

Can you think of other questions?

Reader Response Sheet

Readers: _____

Writer _____

Read the whole composition from beginning to end. If you don't understand a word or several words, ask the writer what he/she means. (Writer: pay attention to the words your reader doesn't understand. Maybe you used the wrong word(s). Maybe you misspelled the word.)

Now answer the questions.

1. Is there any part of the composition that you don't understand?
UNDERLINE IT AND PUT A ? NEXT TO IT.
2. Does the writer tell you what the keepsake is? _____
3. Does the writer describe the keepsake? _____
4. Does the writer tell you where, when, and how he or she got this keepsake? _____
5. Does the writer tell you why the keepsake is important? _____
6. Does the writer tell what he or she thinks about or remembers when he or she looks at the keepsake? _____

What do you want to know that the writer did not tell you? WRITE 3 QUESTIONS TO THE WRITER TO GET MORE INFORMATION ABOUT THIS KEEPSAKE.

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____

Composition Form:

1. Did the writer begin each sentence with a capital letter and end with a period? _____
2. Does the writing start at the left margin (side) of the paper? _____
3. Do the sentences follow one after the other (not a new line for each sentence)? _____

WHEN YOU FINISH, GIVE THIS SHEET AND THE PAPER BACK TO THE WRITER.

STUDENT WRITINGS

My name is Maria. I'm from El Salvador. I have one son. His name is Ruddy. He is two years old. He is now in El Salvador because I have too many problems. He's born in this country but now he lives with my family.

My keepsake is half of a gold heart. I wear the gold heart around my neck. My baby has the other half around his neck. When I see this heart, I remember everything when my baby was born. I would like my son to keep this present on his neck for all life. My family is in El Salvador. Sometimes I am sad in the U.S.A. because I don't have my baby with me.

My name is Bea. I'm from Zaire in Central Africa. My keepsake is a malachite bracelet. Malachite is a stone and the color is green. Here in the U.S., the malachite is very expensive.

My mother gave me my malachite bracelet for my happy birthday. Now it is four years ago, and my mother said, "Keep this for you and your children sometime. Do not come back here again. When I see these bracelets, I remember my mother, I remember my country, I remember my family in Zaire."

Hi! My name is Alvaro. I am from Mexico City. My keepsake is a little statue of a Mexican man who is wearing white shirt, white pants, sandals, serape, and a big sombrero. It's of plastic. Some people use it to hang in the car. My Uncle Pedro gave it to me and he told me, "Don't forget your family in Zaire."

I came to the U.S.A. in December of 1991. Two months before I went to Puebla. I visited my grandfather and my grandmother. My grandfather's name is Ramen. My grandmother's name is Guadalupe. They are living in a small town. Their clothes and culture are different.

Thirty-six years ago my grandfather wore those clothes. When I told them I was thinking to travel to the U.S.A. they told me OK but don't forget your country and your culture. I hope to bring to this country my wife and two sons, and I need to show them how my grandfather used to wear his clothes.

My name is Lai-Ho. I am from Viet Nam. My keepsake is the aluminum comb. I was in re-education camp for five years and seven months by Viet Nam Communists. I made aluminum comb in Tan-Hiep camp, August 18, 1977, when I have free time.

I made the aluminum comb as a souvenir for my wife and daughter. I used a knife. I engraved rose flowers, lotus flowers, and leaves. I engraved my name and my wife's name and the date on the comb. I polished it with sandpaper. The aluminum comb was very important for me, because I made it by my hands in the camp. When I see the aluminum comb, I remember being in the camp, five years and seven months.

I was scared. I was not happy. I wanted come back to my home. I was very very remembering my family. I went out of the camp in 1981. I and my family left Viet Nam on October 7, 1991. I came together with my family in the U.S. October 12, 1991. I was very very happy. I received the U.S. This place is my second country.

ROLE PLAYS

Purpose:

To practice speaking and listening skills within real contexts. Encourages spontaneous speech. Gets teacher out of center.

Directions:

Have students work in pairs. Each student has a role and cue of what to say. Students carry on their conversations in their own words using the ideas on their cue cards.

Example:

Telephone: taking and leaving messages.

Call and leave a message for friend to call back.

You don't understand English very well. Ask caller to speak slowly and repeat twice.

Variations:

1. No cue given.
2. Cue cards can have visuals to stimulate a dialog/situation the students have practiced (e.g., an accident picture to role play a 911 emergency call).

Application:

Consumerism:	Clerk: You don't want to accept return.	Customer: Ask to return clothing and give reason.
Health:	Patient: Request a doctor's appointment for a checkup.	Receptionist: Offer several different appointment times/dates.
Housing:	Tenant: You need something repaired.	Manager: You can't do any work until next week.
Finding a Job:	Friend Working: Tell your unemployed friend about a job opening where you work.	Friend Unemployed: You don't want to work in the same place as your friend. Give other preferences for the jobs.

SELF-ACCESS

(Contributed by Lynda Terrell)

When adult learners are offered a wide array of choices in context, modality, and complexity, they can control their classroom and feel comfortable and competent. Students can learn specific content and language skills at the same time. Civics is a useful topic for self-access because it gives "real-life" importance to the work, and it provides a ballpark for students to play in. Later, students expand to reading, grammar, conversation, or whatever they choose.

Materials can range on a continuum from very easy--drawing and coloring, stencils and stamps, collages, simple tasks (such as drawing the flag or map of a country)--to more complex and academic tasks like reading, writing and answering questions which require interpretation. Magazines, cue cards, realia from the community, and other materials that the teacher may have on hand easily convert to self-access materials. Many activities that students have tried in the cooperative classroom translate to self-access work: conversation grids, information gaps, and jigsaw reading can work. Technology, such as language masters, audio cassettes, video cassettes, and computers can be used and controlled by students. A single language master machine or even an old telephone can take the focus off the teacher and open new possibilities of learning and power for the students.

While the underlying philosophy of self-access is simple (give them stuff and let them learn) and students are enthusiastic, there are challenges for everyone. At first, some students resist deviation from traditional classroom settings and techniques. If the class is learner-centered from the start, students understand that they can be active and powerful participants in their own learning. For those students who do not feel comfortable choosing their own work, other portions of the class satisfy desires for more traditional learning.

Teacher preparation time is extensive even for limited self-access in the class. Gathering books, puzzles, atlases, maps, art supplies, and games takes a long time and some money. Setting up a classroom which is comfortable and encouraging to students takes time, as does keeping materials in order. For teachers who move from class, organizing will take considerable time, but the self-access materials can be portable.

With self-access materials, students choose their own goals as well as their own activities. Students share triumphs and applaud excellent work. Having given the students the choice of what and how to learn, teachers should also give them choices in evaluation. Simple evaluation forms can give students a chance to comment on their own work and on the self-access project.

Adults learn in many ways. Using self-access materials where students learn content, language, and how to choose intensifies the learning process, fosters self-esteem and helps students learn to make decisions in all facets of their lives.

SIMULATIONS

Purpose:

To prepare students for real-life tasks by contextualizing language.

Directions:

Set up the room with enough props/visuals so that the students understand the setting and situation. Assign different roles to be played in the simulation. Students can be involved in determining the setting and roles as well as in preparing the necessary props.

Example:

Money/Banking: Set up a bank with customers and tellers. Customers ask to cash checks. Tellers require identification and ask customers to endorse checks. Teller gives the correct amount.

Applications:

Health Clinic: receptionists, nurse, doctor, patients.

Community Post Office: postal clerks and customers.

Food Restaurant: host/ess, waiter/ess, busperson, cashier, cook, customer.

On the Job Work Setting: supervisor explains tasks to employees.

Consumerism Department Store: clerks and customers exchanging items.

Personal ID Party: hosts and guests.

TOTAL PHYSICAL RESPONSE

Levels: 100-150

Purpose:

To introduce new vocabulary and grammatical structures within the context of a task/process. Reinforces listening skills as students observe the task being performed.

Steps:

Select a task/process that can be easily demonstrated with gestures, visuals, and/or props. First, the teacher goes through the process, stating the steps as they are performed. Once the students understand the process, the entire class performs the task as the teacher directs. Finally, the students can give the directions to partners.

Examples:

Community Services (Post Office)

1. Fold the letter.
2. Get an envelope and stamp.
3. Put your letter inside the envelope and seal it.
4. Write your name and address in the upper left corner.
5. Write your friend's name and address in the middle.
6. Don't forget the zip code!
7. Lick the stamp and put it in the upper right corner.
8. Go to the mailbox and drop your letter inside.

Variations:

1. Students can write their own processes.
2. Follow-up can take the form of questions about the process.

Applications:

Health	Taking medicine.
Housing	Performing a household chore/repair.
Finding a Job	Completing an application.
Food	Preparing food with a recipe.
Telephone	Using a public phone.

LEARNER NEEDS ASSESSMENT

Assessing the needs, interests, and goals of learners is an integral part of the REEP Curriculum (3rd edition) and is important in achieving the program's goal of creating "learner-centered" classrooms. Effective needs assessment is vital because adult ESL learners who feel they are not learning what they need to know in English class are more likely to drop-out than to express their discontent. Eliciting need assessment information from Limited English Proficient (LEP) adults and applying that information to course planning presents a challenge. Traditional questionnaires written in English may not be appropriate or effective for all learners, particularly those with limited literacy skills. In addition, the concept of participating in instructional goal-setting can be strange to adults from other cultural backgrounds where learners expect the teacher to set the course objectives.

Needs assessment begins with placement testing to assign learners to an appropriate level. However, within a particular level, the range of skills, interests, and goals within a class may vary widely from individual to individual and from group to group. The teacher, the individual learners, and the class as a whole need to be aware of these differences so that the course can be adapted to the particular group of individuals.

In the classroom, needs assessment provides an awareness of the learners' educational needs and goals as well as an idea of what skills they have already mastered. The process introduces students to the concept of setting goals for themselves and participating in course goal-setting.

Characteristics of Effective Needs Assessment Activities

- * Appropriate for a particular group of students. For example, if reading and understanding the language of a written questionnaire is very time-consuming or impossible for learners, then another type of assessment tool should be chosen.
- * Serve a learning purpose as well as an information gathering purpose. It is important that neither teacher nor learners perceive needs assessment as a waste of learning time. Effective activities can be incorporated into the class orientation or integrated into lessons. Learners should be actively practicing and using the target language while collecting and analyzing data.
- * Practical in terms of time required and usefulness of the information collected. Many activities do not require a great deal of preparation or processing time.
- * Processed with the group so that both teacher and learners become aware of the expectations of others in the class. When there are differences in expressed needs and goals, then negotiation and compromise must occur.

For learners to understand the purpose and value of needs assessment, the information gathered must be applied in obvious ways during the course so that learners feel that their needs are being met. Adults who feel that what they are learning is vital are more likely to complete a course and continue to seek future educational opportunities.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT TOOLS CHART

This tools chart provides suggested activities for needs assessment. The activities are divided into different types of tools, e.g. those which require written; those which can be done orally. Samples of many of these tools can be found in the appendices.

In the first column of the tools chart, the tools are listed. The logistics column provides suggested steps in implementing the activity. The purpose column provides information on what point in the course of instruction the tool would be most effective. The analysis column provides suggestions for calculating the results, in most cases with the learner's input. The level column suggests the levels that the tool would be most appropriate for. To facilitate your search for appropriate tools, the tools are listed by level below.

LEVEL	SUGGESTED TOOLS
100	Information grids, learner-generated lists, mind-mapping, cut-out illustrations, pictorial questionnaires, topic selection tools, pictorial timelines, learner generated questionnaire.
150	Information grids, learner-generated lists, mind-mapping, cut-out illustrations, written questionnaires, topic selection tools, written timelines, reading/writing samples, learner generated questionnaire.
200 & 250	See tools suggested for 150 (except cut-out illustrations and pictorial timelines).
300 - 550	Information grids, learner-generated lists, mind-mapping, written questionnaires, topic selection tools, timelines, class bulletin boards, diary charts, reading/writing samples, dialogue journals.
550	Individualized Education Plan.
*	Sample tool included following the tools chart.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT TOOLS CHART

Information Grid *	Learners interview each other to complete the grid.	Initial, pre-topic, mid-course, and final information about the learners and their experiences, needs, and preferences.	Results can be tabulated orally or on a master grid on an overhead or blackboard.	100-550
	Topics and headings for grids are generated by the teacher and/or the learners.	Grids can be adapted for various levels by controlling language or using pictures for low literacy learners.	If appropriate to the grid, the group prioritizes skills and topics to be covered.	100-550
Topic Selection	Learners are given: a list or a collection of visuals indicating skills, topics, or subtopics either specified by a curriculum or developed by brainstorming.	Initial, mid-course, or pre-topic information about learners' highest priority needs with regard to competencies, skills, and topics.	Teacher and class become aware of high priority needs. 1. Learner-generated list	1. Small or whole groups generate lists of how they use skills, eg. Where do you speak/write English?	1. Initial and on-going information about how learners use basic skills.	100-550
2. Mind Mapping	2. Beginning with a topical question at the center of a diagram, class brainstorms answers. Responses and more detailed examples are added to the diagram and drawn as branches from the center.	2. Initial and pre-topic information about how learners use basic skills and life skills in a variety of settings and how they would like to be able to use skills.	100-550
3. Cut-out illustrations	3. Learners cut pictures from magazine of things they would like to be able to do with English.	3. Initial and mid-course information about how learners use or want to be able to use English.	100, 150
Learner Generated Questionnaire *	As a whole group, and/or in small groups, learners brainstorm items for questionnaire. Then, learners complete questionnaire individually.	Initial, pre-topic information about how learners use language and would like to be able to use language.	150-550
Written Questionnaires
1. Inventory: list of how skills.	1. & 2. Tools can be generated by teachers or by the learners in a group brainstorming session. Learners complete the surveys individually.	1. INFORMATION GRIDS

Information grids can be used at all levels as teaching, evaluation and needs assessment activities. They can be used with a variety of topics and can be created by the teacher and/or the learners. The following are needs assessment examples.

1. INITIAL ASSESSMENT

A. Getting to know the learners

Name	Native Country	Studied in High School	Studied English Before	Came to U.S.

Instructional Implications: Learning styles, classroom experience, literacy level, mastery of basic survival skills.

B. Survival Skills Assessment: (Do you _____?)

Have a Bank Account	Have a Driver's License	Have a Job	Use Public Transportation (What Kind?)	Have Health Insurance

Instructional Implications: Mastery of Survival Skills

2. PRE-TOPIC ASSESSMENT: Shopping

Where do you shop for food?	Do you buy food on sale?	How do you find out about sales?	Do you use food coupons?	Do you speak English at the supermarket?

Instructional Implications: Mastery of Consumer Strategies

3. MID-COURSE/FINAL EVALUATION: Likes and Dislikes

	Textbook	Small Group Work	Roleplays	Civics
Like
Dislike

Instructional Implications: Students' perception of instructional activities, learning styles

Suggested Instructional Steps: (Depending on the learners' level:)

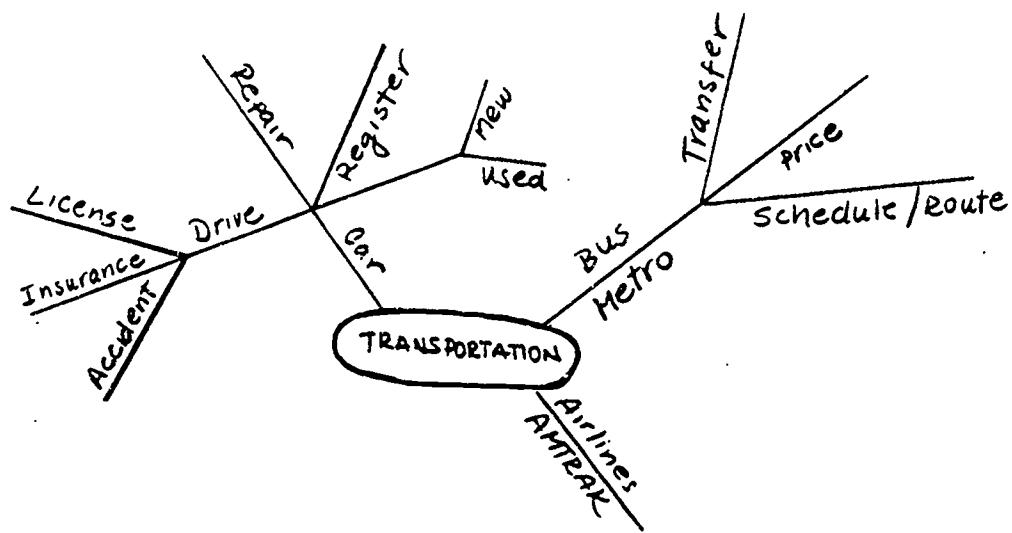

- Practice/teach the questions that learners will need to ask. The boxes can contain complete questions or cue phrases.
- After doing an example using yourself or a learner, learners interview each other and record answers.
- Depending on the class size, results can be tabulated on a master grid on the blackboard or tallied orally.
- Follow-up: Depending on the learners' level, processing questions of varying difficulty can be asked.

MIND MAPPING

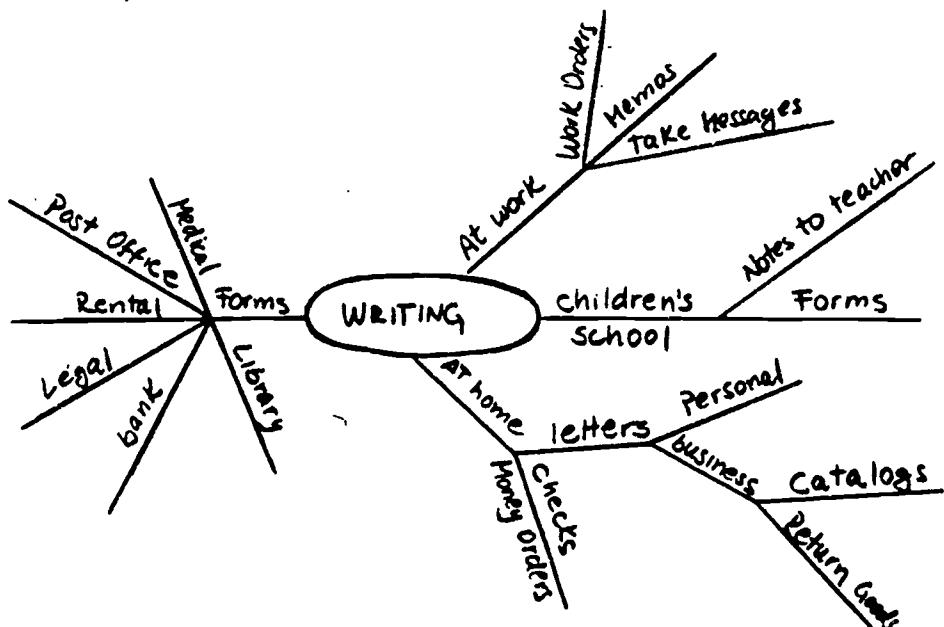

Mind mapping is a very versatile needs assessment tool. It can be used with beginning, intermediate, advanced, and multi-level classes and at various points throughout the instructional cycle.

Suggested Instructional Steps: Begin brainstorming with one question depicted at the center of a diagram. Learners' responses to central question and more detailed examples are added to the diagram as branches emerging from the center. To finish, a count is taken of those who agree with each response, and the tally is written on the branch. Instructional implications are discussed as a group.

LEARNER GENERATED QUESTIONNAIRES

(Contributed by Suzanne Grant)

Leamer-generated questionnaires have two basic advantages over pre-prepared questionnaires. First, the areas of response are not pre-determined but are generated by the learners. Second, comprehension of the language of the questionnaire is not a problem because the learners themselves generate the language.

EXAMPLE 1: Suggested steps for determine students' reading needs

As a whole group, brainstorm places that students need to read (eg. home, shopping, work, job search, etc). Mindmapping is a good brainstorming technique (see previous sample). Brainstorm one place together to determine what students need to read (bills, notes, etc). Write identified places on tear sheets and post them around the room. Students go to the one that they want to discuss in small groups. In small groups, students brainstorm a list of things that they need to be able to read. One student records. Groups share their answers with the class. Answers are written on the overhead. Students complete the questionnaire individually. The overhead can be xeroxed for each student, or students can copy from the overhead onto their questionnaire to complete the questionnaire. Class tallies the results with oral hand count and discusses how the results will be used. Process can be repeated to determine listening, speaking, and writing needs as well as topic area needs.

THINGS I NEED TO READ: (Low intermediate level class: sample responses for things to read at home and class tally)	Can Do	Want to Learn	Not Important
Newspapers	4	14	1
Letters	6	7	2
Bills	12	2	2
Telephone book	7	7	2
Dictionary	12	4

EXAMPLE 2: Suggested Steps for determining where students need to use English

As a whole group, brainstorm places where students need to use English. Students write places on their questionnaire and then check the language skill areas that they need at the identified places. Classes tallies with oral hand count and discusses classroom implications of the results.

PICTURE QUESTIONNAIRES¹

Picture Questionnaires assist low level learners in prioritizing the places where they want to be able to use English.

Suggested Instructional Steps: Using a visual of a fictitious person, discuss the places where this person needs to use English. As a group, complete a questionnaire for the person. Have students complete the questionnaire individually, indicated X number of places where they need to use English. To process, the class does an oral tally and discusses instructional implications.

TIMELINES²

Timelines assist learners in setting goals and applying the concept of linear time.

Suggested Procedures: Review time concepts (day, date, year, past, present, future). Introduce purpose of timelines. Provide model timeline(s) and check comprehension. Cut model into strips and have small groups put the strips in order. Elicit another model timeline from students (eg. teacher's timeline). Have students draw their own timelines. Discuss why information is important for instructional planning.

ACHIEVEMENT CHARTS

Achievement charts are a self-assessment as well as instructional needs assessment tools. Learners indicate achievements as well as learning goals on a on-going basis.

Suggested Instructional Steps: See Needs Assessment Tools Chart

I WANTED TO USE ENGLISH BUT COULDN'T
WHERE	WITH WHOM	WHAT ABOUT

COMPOSITION

LEVELS: 300-550

Suggested Instructional Steps: Learners read samples written by other learners. Then they answer questions and write a similar composition about their experiences learning English and their needs and/or progress toward goals.

Example 1: Initial (Feliciano's Story)

When I came to the U.S.A., it was so difficult for me because I did not even know a word of English. When I decided to come to school, my dream was to learn how to read in English. I expected to learn how to speak more clear and perfect.

Before I came to class, I could not read in English. But now I'm able to read many things. Conversation and writing is the biggest problem that I have and that I still need to fix.

1. What did Feliciano want to learn in English class?
2. What does Feliciano still need to learn?
3. Write a story about YOU. Tell what was difficult for you about English. What do you still need to learn?

Example 2: Final (Omar's Story)

Actually, in my country, Columbia, I used to read and translate from English into Spanish. But, I was not able to communicate in English. When I came to the U.S.A., I had only a little knowledge of English so that it did not help me too much. In fact, whenever I tried to communicate with Americans, I got stuck. It was not easy because I could not either understand or speak. What made me come to the U.S.A. and learn English was basically professional purposes.

So far, I have taken three courses at Wilson School and I have learned a lot of things during these courses. I have improved my listening, speaking and writing. I think Wilson School has a wonderful learning center and also great teachers.

I'd like to make some suggestions. I think REEP should try to teach more grammar. Besides that, I think the program should be focussed on more academic English instead of Survival English.

I think all the students should take tests all the time in order to follow the students' improvements.

1. Why did Omar need to study English?
2. What has Omar learned at Wilson School?
3. What does Omar think the school should focus on?
4. Write a story about YOU. Tell why you need to study English. What do you think about the program at Wilson School?

LEARNER EVALUATION APPENDIX:

ASSESSING ORAL PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES

- ◆ Learner Evaluation Tools Chart
- ◆ Feedback Form
- ◆ Notes for an Evaluation Activity

697

EVALUATION TOOLS CHART

This tools chart provides suggested activities for evaluating individual learner achievement of oral performance objectives. All of the activities are teaching activities as well as/and should not be used for evaluation until learners are familiar with the technique. Most of the activities can be adapted for use at any level and with multi-level classes. These techniques are particularly effective in large classes where evaluation of individual achievement is challenging.

The tools are listed in the first column of the tools chart. Samples of the starred (*) tools can be found in the learner needs assessment appendices or the techniques/plans appendices. The technique column describes the technique. The logistics column describes how to set up the activity as an evaluation activity. The example column provides suggestions on appropriate lifeskills contexts.

TOOL	TECHNIQUE	LOGISTICS	EXAMPLES
ROLE PLAY *	In an unrehearsed situation, learners take roles and perform them using practiced language.	Several learners may be given roles in the situation if all roles have been practiced. Students not involved in the role play can complete a checklist analyzing their classmates' performances. Students can generate the checklist themselves.	* telephone conversations * ask/answer questions about a housing ad * job interview * small talk
SIMULATION *	A role play in which the classroom set-up replicates a specific location.	Several pairs can perform simultaneously. Teacher circulates, observes, and evaluates individual learners. See role play.	* grocery store aisles * lost and found * post office
INFORMATION GAP *	Each learner is given different information and must communicate with others to get all necessary information in order to complete a task.	Teacher observes individual pairs while the whole group moves through the activity. Students may be seated back to back or with a manila folder placed between them so that they can not see each other's information.	* maps * schedules * floor plans (house, store)

LINE DIALOGUE*	Two lines face each other. In one line, each person stays stationary with a cue card and asks an appropriate question. In the other line, each person responds and then moves on.	Teacher stands at one end of the lineup and observes individual pairs while the whole group moves through the activity. One line could also be seated while second line rotates, e.g. telephones.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * prices * health/housing problems * returning merchandise * personal ID
LEARNER TO LEARNER INTERVIEWS *	Learners ask each other questions necessary to fill out a form, information grid, or questionnaire. Appropriate when students have practiced both asking and answering questions.	Many interviews can happen simultaneously while the teacher observes different pairs. Teacher may take one of the roles and circulate along with the students.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * personal identification * occupations * likes/dislikes * opinions
CONTACT ASSIGNMENT	Learners are given an assignment to accomplish outside of classroom/school environment. Learners must show proof of accomplishment.	Activity needs to be carefully structured so that it is clear who has/has not accomplished the task.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * leave a message * buy a fare card/ticket * call a recorded message to obtain information * obtain a library card
DEMONSTRATED PERFORMANCE*	Learners perform tasks according to directions. Tasks are not context-dependent. Total Physical Response (TPR) tests receptive skills.	Learners may be organized into small groups or teams with one person performing at a time. In practice rounds, team members act as coaches. In final rounds, no assistance is allowed.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * follow instructions from doctor/supervisor * produce correct changes * take a telephone message
APPROPRIATE RESPONSE	Given short situations or social formulae, learners produce appropriate responses.	The same situations may be given to several learners and each must produce plausible response. All learners may be asked to stand and once they have given an appropriate response, they may sit down.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> * You are leaving class early -What do you say? * Your co-worker looks sick -What do you say?

FEEDBACK FORM: EVALUATING ORAL LIFE SKILLS

This form can be used as a self-assessment tool when planning evaluation activities and assessing the effectiveness of an activity. Answer each question, indicating how this was achieved or citing examples.

PRE-VOCATIONAL TRANSITION ESL COURSE FOR ADULTS

INTRODUCTION

The Employment Training Center (ETC), located at the Career Center, is part of the Adult Education Division of Arlington Public Schools and has provided vocational training to eligible unemployed and underemployed Arlington County youth and adults for over 25 years. The Center is a federally funded program with multiple funding sources and offers free training to diverse populations in the areas of Office Skills, Electrical Trades, Printing and Early Childhood Training. The Center is a full-service program which includes outreach/recruitment, counseling, skill training, job placement and follow up and has bilingual counselors and instructional aides (Spanish and Vietnamese) on staff. ETC's job placement rate currently averages over 80% as the center continues to provide quality training for the workplace.

The Pre-vocational Transition ESL Course for Adults is a product of ETC's participation in the National English Literacy Demonstration Project, which was funded by the United States Department of Education, Office of Adult Education.

When learners complete the pre-vocational track at the Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP) and/or have met the criteria needed to transition (see Entry Level Descriptions, Appendix A), they can enroll in this specially-designed pre-vocational ESL course. When learners transition from REEP to ETC, a learner portfolio transitions with them. This portfolio includes a history of classes taken, test scores, writing samples, REEP progress reports, and a learner needs assessment survey. This portfolio assists the ETC teacher in adapting the course to meet learner needs.

The main purpose of this course is to help transition students from REEP to the Employment Training Center or some other vocational-related training by enabling learners to increase their English language skills before entering a job training program.

At the end of the 120 hour course of instruction, learners are evaluated as to their readiness for one of the four job training programs that ETC offers: Office Skills, Electrical Trades, Child Care, and Printing. This evaluation consists of the teacher's evaluation of classroom performance (see Appendix B) as well as ETC's regular intake assessment measures (see Appendix C).

USING THE COURSE

This course was designed for 120 hours of instruction. Classes meet for three hours a day, five days a week for eight weeks.

Course Objectives

Upon completion of this course, students will have:

- developed skills for succeeding at work
- acquired competencies needed to get jobs, to keep jobs, and advance in jobs
- improved speaking, reading, and writing skills
- improved cultural awareness needed to understand how the workplace function; to learn their jobs well and advance; to get along with fellow employees and supervisors, and adapt comfortably to new demands.
- increased job-related vocabulary
- improved comprehension and clarification techniques

Suggested Use of Class Time

Each class session of three hours will be divided in the following manner. The first one and one-half hours will be spent working in the main text, Speaking Up at Work. Following a short break, the remaining one and one-half hours will be spent working on writing, reading, speaking and listening, using either the regular text or supplemental material and the CCC Lab as is deemed appropriate by the instructor. Reinforcement of telephone skills and reference skills will also be taught during this period.

Instructional Materials

The main text will be Speaking Up at Work (See Appendix D for Objectives to be covered and supplemental resources). The computer assisted learning lab (CCC) is used by the students on a daily basis to improve skills in the following areas:

- Listening, Comprehension and Reading (Reading Network)
- Vocabulary & Reading (Reader's Workshop)
- Grammar (Fundamentals of Learning)

Students are encouraged to keep track of their own progress and scores, but computer generated weekly reports and teacher evaluations are included.

Books and other resources are available for teachers to expand the lessons in the regular text if reinforcement is needed. Suggested books are listed in the bibliography on the following page. Additional resources include:

- AV: Overhead Projector, VCR, TV, Telephones
- Telephone books
- Newspapers: News for You, The Washington Post, The Arlington Journal.
- Maps
- Searching Jobs through Vocabulary (See Bibliography)
- Computer Assisted Learning Lab (CCC)
- Columbia Pike Public Library (adjacent to the Employment Training Center)

Intake Assessment Procedures:

The intake/assessment team at ETC uses a comprehensive system for assessing trainees' vocational aptitudes and skills, English language proficiency, and career interests. Work experience and amount of interest in specific trade is, of course, a major factor in the appropriate placement of a trainee in the Early Childhood, Office Skills, Electrical Trades, or Printing courses. Aptitudes for a specific skill area may be measured by tests such as the Dvorine Pseudo-Isochromatic Plates (for detection of possible color-blindness) or the ETC clerical test. Microtower, VITAS and VALPAR work samples may be administered to assess the following aptitudes: finger dexterity, measuring, numerical, spatial and form perception. In addition, the Test of Adult Basic Education (TABE), an achievement test, is given. The subtests include: Math Computation, English Language Vocabulary and Reading Comprehension.

The TABE test results are used as one tool to place appropriate applicants into the BVT program and recommend others to more appropriate programs. These scores are also used to place trainees in the appropriate instructional component of the computer-assisted lab once they have started the program.

The structured interview/intake process at ETC is also a very important part of assessment for it gives staff an evaluation of how potential trainees communicate verbally, how they follow directions; and whether they are motivated enough to follow through on the intake/assessment process to seriously pursue training. All these results are then used as the basis for developing an Individual Service Strategy for each trainee upon acceptance into the program.

PRE-ACADEMIC ESL TRANSITION COURSE FOR ADULT LEARNERS

Introduction

Marymount University, located in Arlington Virginia, is an independent Catholic university of 4100 men and women of diverse faiths and cultural backgrounds. Founded by the Religious Order of the Sacred Heart of Mary, Marymount follows an international tradition of providing quality educational services for its student body which currently comprises students from 67 nations and 33 states. One of Marymount's special services is its Intensive English Program, which offers four levels of English language instruction for those international students who are admitted to the University but whose English skills need further development. Marymount has in place a full range of ESL courses and a proven track record in second language teaching.

As part of the National English Literacy Demonstration Project funded by the United States Department of Education, Marymount and the Arlington Education and Employment Program (REEP) developed and implemented a transitional program of ESL instruction to provide pre-academic skill preparation for adult learners. Before participating in this project, Marymount was unable to serve a large percentage of adult immigrants and refugees in Arlington because these learners do not meet eligibility requirements for acceptance into the University often due to a lack of academic training and skills. Because REEP offers ESL classes which address the needs of a wide range of ESL adult learners, it cannot offer the intensive series of university academic preparation classes that some REEP students would like to pursue. The Department of Education grant gave Marymount and REEP the opportunity to develop and deliver the type of transitional academic courses that are needed to bridge the gap between REEP's English program and the skills that are necessary for admission to college and university programs.

Description of the Transition Academic Project

1. A coordinated system and program now exists between the two institutions (REEP and MU) to identify potential candidates for the MU pre-academic course. Candidates must have completed the highest ESL level offered at REEP, meet the entry level descriptions (Appendix A), have good class attendance records there, receive at least an intermediate level ESL placement test score on the Michigan Test, and have an oral interview which assesses motivation and capacity to complete the pre-academic program.

2. Selected candidates enter an ESL pre-academic course held at Marymount which consists of 120 hours of instruction taught by trained ESL professionals (All instructors have at least a MA Degree in the ESL field). The course usually meets M-TH from 6-9 PM for 10 weeks. This allows us to accommodate those students who have full-time jobs. Class size is a maximum of 15 students.

3. One of the purposes of the transition course is to give the students exposure to a college/university type program of studies. For this reason the course is taught by two different instructors following a typical MW/TUTH schedule. Homework is assigned and corrected by the instructors. As indicated in Appendix B, the texts used have varied from session to session as we became more familiar with the needs and level of the students.

4. The course content focuses on all basic academic skills - writing techniques and mechanics, academic reading and vocabulary development, study skills (testing, note taking, library use, etc.) and TOEFL preparation. Students also receive special presentations on college application and admission procedures, financial aid, major curriculum fields and college life management for the returning adult. Students take the Institutional TOEFL exam at the end of the course as a further transition step to college admissions. See Appendix B for major topics covered and texts used.

5. All costs of the program are paid for by the grant funding. The students receive all instruction, texts, and testing materials free of charge.

Project Goals

The goal of this project is for the students to achieve a high enough competency in English after finishing the Marymount transition course so that they may begin full-time academic work or a combination of ESL classes and regular academic courses at an institution of higher learning. In this way, the students do not need to exhaust their limited financial resources or financial aid in several semesters of entry level ESL classes. Within the scope of Marymount University's Intensive English Program, this would mean that a student coming out of the transition course would place at the very least into Marymount's advanced Intensive English level which allows a student to take two regular academic courses along with ESL instruction and that they should score 500 or better on the TOEFL exam. Appendix A describes the competencies that were expected of students at entry into the transition program and the competencies that were to be achieved by the end of the course. See Appendix C for Progress Reports.
