

- 'Cantigas de Santa Maria,' Hispanic Literature 19. Lewiston, NY: Edwin Mellen, 1993. Chapter 3, "Maternity," examines the roles that Mary played in assisting childbirth as portrayed in the Cantigas.
- Shatzmiller, Joseph. "Femmes Médecins au moyen âge: Témoignages sur leurs pratiques (1250-1350)," in Histoire et société. Mélanges offerts à Georges Duby, vol. 1: Le couple, l'ami et le prochain. Aix-en-Provence: Publications de l'Université de Provence, 1992, pp. 167-75. Discusses the range of women's medical practices.
- Shatzmiller, Joseph. Jews, Medicine, and Medieval Society. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1994. Pp. 108-112 discuss Jewish and Christian women practitioners.
- Thomasset, Claude. "Le corps féminin ou le regard empêché," Micrologus: Rivista della società per lo studio del Medio Evo latino 1 (1993): 99-114. A sampling of views on women from several medical writers.
- Weiss Adamson, Melitta. "A Reevaluation of Saint Hildegard's Physica in Light of the Latest Manuscript Finds," in Margaret Schleissner, ed., Manuscript Sources of Medieval Medicine: A Book of Essays, Garland Medieval Casebooks. New York and London: Garland, 1995, pp. 55-80. Recent discoveries of two complete manuscripts of the Physica (a book describing the uses of herbs and other medicinal products) plus several fragmentary copies (two in German translation) significantly expand our knowledge of the medieval influence of Hildegard's medicine.
- Whitaker, Elaine E. "Reading the Paston Letters Medically." English Language Notes 31/1 (1993): 19-27. Surveys references to medicine in letters of Margaret Paston (15th cent.) and her female relatives.

NEW BOOKS AND SERIES

June Hall McCash. The Cultural Patronage of Medieval Women. Athens: Univ. of Georgia Press, Spring 1995.

Ruth Evans and Lesley Johnson. Feminist Readings in Middle English Literature: the Wife of Bath and All Her Sect. London: Routledge, August 1994.

Pegasus Library of Medieval Women: Medieval and Renaissance Texts and Studies is now the publisher of what was formerly the Focus Library of Medieval Women, under the general editorship of Jane Chance of Rice University. The series makes available significant works by and about medieval women, on such topics as theology and mysticism, medicine and science, history and hagiography, in a variety of forms, including poetry, visions, autobiography, sermons, treatises, and letters. Each work or selection is accompanied by an interpretative essay and explanatory notes, as well as other helpful materials, including often a brief biography and chronology.

A New Series in Gender Studies from Longman:

Longman Higher Education is pleased to announce a new series on the History List— Women and Men in History. General Editor for the Medieval period is Dr. Trish

Skinner (affiliated to University College London for the academic year 1994-5). They seek manuscripts from first-time authors as well as more established ones in three rough categories:

— books focusing on specific themes, for example: Wives, Widows and Heiresses in Medieval France or Labour and Gender in Spain or The Rise of Feminism in the West.

— books which focus on the role of women in a key period or region, for example: Women in Renaissance Italy or Women under the Third Reich.

— books which have their origin in detailed research work (usually Ph.D. theses). The theses will be developed so that they shed light on significant, wider issues. For example: Female Prostitution in London 1730-1830 or Marriage and Motherhood in Carolingian France or The Women of Greenham Common or Sexuality in Victorian England.

If you are interested in knowing more about the series, or would like to submit a proposal, please contact: Dr. Patricia Skinner, The Wellcome Institute, 183 Euston Road, London, NW1 2BE; phone: 071 611 8561/ 021 427 6694

MFN BOOK REVIEW GUIDELINES

1. Short notices (2-3 manuscript pages)

Short notices are primarily descriptive. They summarize with some detail a book's content and approach, and address the kinds of inquiries and disciplines for which the study will be useful. Short notices avoid long expositions of a book's shortcomings and arguments with a book's critical method.

2. Review (5-6 manuscript pages)

Reviews are both descriptive and evaluative. The MFN editors find that the most useful reviews carefully describe a book's material, methods and arguments. Reviews evaluate the book's critical implications. They may also debate its critical assumptions and discuss its place in its disciplines(s) and its significance for scholarship.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

MFN is pleased to report that our subscription list continues to grow. Many thanks to all those who have expressed an interest in the Newsletter. A list of recent subscribers will appear in MFN 20, Fall 1995.
