ABSTRACT

This volume of resource listings is intended to assist state and local administrators of vocational special needs programs, special needs educators, counselors, researchers, policymakers, and others in locating resources for developing or improving programs and services for youth and adults with limited English proficiency. Materials listed in this guide include 85 publications; 21 newsletters; 2 journals; 22 agencies, associations, and organizations; 18 centers for educational information and services; 9 clearinghouses; 3 computer-based information networks; and 7 databases. The entries are categorized by the following cluster headings of the common components of exemplary programs: program administration, curriculum and instruction, comprehensive support services, formalized articulation and communication, and occupational experience. Resources on general literature and model programs and practices are also included. For each entry, an annotation, the price, ordering information, and address are provided. Listings are indexed by title and by author. (KC)

Discrimination: Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 states: "No person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance." Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 states: "No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance." Therefore, the National Center for Research in Vocational Education project, like every program or activity receiving financial assistance from the U.S. Department of Education, must be operated in compliance with these laws.

PREFACE

It is estimated that the population of the United States will have increased seventeen percent between the years 1980 and 2000. In that same time period, however, the nation's language minority population is expected to increase by thirty-two percent. The number of school-aged children from non-English language backgrounds is expected to increase at more than twice the rate of children in the general population (Lara & Hoffman, 1990). These trends represent an important educational challenge: providing both youth and adults who are limited English proficient (LEP) with the vocational and academic skills that will enable them to succeed in the nation's rapidly changing economy. Vocational education answers this challenge. This second volume of Students with Limited English Proficiency: Selected Resources for Vocational Preparation is intended to assist state and local administrators of vocational special needs programs, special needs educators, counselors, researchers, policymakers, and others in locating resources for developing or improving programs and services for LEP youth and adults.

Materials contained in this document include publications, newsletters, journals, agencies, associations, organizations, centers for educational information/services, clearinghouses, computer-based information networks, and databases. The entries are categorized by the following cluster headings of the common components of exemplary programs: program administration, curriculum and instruction, comprehensive support services, formalized articulation and communication, and occupational experience. Resources on general literature and model programs and practices are also included.

This guide is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of all available resources. Materials are included which are representative of the field. For each entry, an annotation, the price, ordering information, and address (whenever possible) are provided. Resources should be ordered directly from the publisher listed in each annotation.

To avoid duplication, many entries appearing in the first Technical Assistance for Special Populations Program (TASPP) resource guide on limited English proficiency were omitted. Entries for organizations and centers for educational information/services were updated in this volume due to numerous address changes. For a comprehensive listing of entries, the first volume of the resource guide on limited English proficiency will be helpful.

TASPP has also developed resource guides on teen parents, transition, at-risk youth and adults, the unique needs of rural and urban students with disabilities, and the Perkins Act of 1990. These as well as both volumes of the resource guides for LEP materials may be obtained through the National Center for Research in Vocational Education, Materials Distribution Service, Western Illinois University, 46 Horrabin Hall, Macomb, IL 61455, (800) 637-7652.

PROGRAM ADMINISTRATION

Accommodating Change and Diversity: Multicultural Practices in Rural Schools
Ford Western Taskforce. (1990, July).
Manhattan: Kansas State University, Rural Clearinghouse for Lifelong Education and Development.

This document explores ethnic diversity in rural communities. Five case studies of multicultural reform in rural schools are included. Multicultural practices used in rural schools, resources, and contacts are described. mcw (96 pages, $12.00)

Bilingual and Special Education: Procedural Manual for Administrators
Vasquez-Chairez, M. (1987).
Sacramento, CA: Resources in Special Education.

The limited-English proficient (LEP) special education student presents special problems to program administrators attempting to comply with two different sets of legislation. This manual gives practical information on how to identify LEP students for special education and procedures to follow for these students, from referral to placement. The author suggests various methods of providing services for LEP students with special needs based on the services required. Also included is a parallel of bilingual and special education laws. sck (74 pages, $15.00)

Bilingual Education and Bilingual Special Education: A Guide for Administrators
Fradd, S. H., & Tikunoff, W. J. (Eds.). (1987).
Austin, TX: PRO-ED.

This book presents a collection of articles for school district administrators responsible for LEP students, including those students who require special education services. Topic areas addressed include legislation and litigation, instruction and instructional leadership, reducing bias in assessment, program planning and development, and teacher development. sck (335 pages, $28.00)

Career-Vocational Education Special Populations IMPACT Plan: An Approach for Planning School Improvements

Feichtner, S. H., & Apolloni, T. (1990, August). Rohnert Park, CA: Sonoma State University, California Institute of Human Services.

Sonoma State University
California Institute on Human Services
1801 E. Cotati Avenue
Rohnert Park, CA 94928
(707) 664-2416

The purpose of the Career-Vocational Education (C-VE) Special Populations IMPACT Plan is to facilitate the efforts of secondary schools and Regional Occupational Centers/ Programs (ROC/Ps) to plan improvements in their career-vocational education programs/activities consistent with the 1990 reauthorization of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act. This planning guide helps local school personnel (administrators, vocational educators, core academic instructors, and specialists who are concerned primarily with services for special needs students) determine specific improvements which can be made in their schools' vocational education programs/ services in order to better serve special populations.

The following is a seven-step process, recommended to be used to ensure success in implementing the IMPACT Plan: (1) designate a site facilitator, (2) create a site planning team, (3) complete the IMPACT Plan Self-Assessment Checklist, (4) prepare a draft C-VE Special Populations IMPACT Plan, (5) review the draft IMPACT Plan and identify necessary revisions, (6) revise the IMPACT Plan, and (7) begin implementing the IMPACT plan. Appendices include checklists, quality indicators, the C-VE Special Populations Plan Form, and resources for assisting with plan implementation. sck (40 pages, $12.50)

Determining the Costs and Benefits of Bilingual Vocational Training Programs: A Handbook for Local Practitioners and Evaluators

Hanberry, G. C., & Fleischman, H. L. (1989, January). Arlington, VA: Development Associates, Inc.

Program staff are faced with the challenge of documenting the extent to which program goals are reached, showing how programs are contributing to the local economy, and justifying their actual existence. This handbook presents a basic method for determining the specific costs and benefits of local bilingual vocational training programs. The handbook also includes practical guidelines for identifying and documenting program resources, costs and benefits, as well as instructions and worksheets for calculating

This manual provides guidelines for local school district personnel in interpreting and ensuring compliance with New Jersey's Bilingual Education Act as amended in 1991. It includes a program summary, identification and exit of eligible participants, program description, special services for LEP students, program implementation and evaluation, as well as appendices and forms for the Program Plan and Evaluation Summary and English Language Services Plan. jeb (163 pages, no charge)

Hispanic Youth—Dropout Prevention Report of the Task Force on the Participation of Hispanic Students in Vocational Education Programs

Idaho State Division of Vocational Education.
(1990, July).
Boise, ID: Author.

State Division of Vocational Education
650 W. State Street
Boise, ID 83720
(208) 334-3216

To study the reasons Hispanic students were not enrolling in and completing vocational education programs, the Idaho State Board of Vocational Education appointed a task force of Hispanics, industry representatives, and education leaders from across the state. Members of this project participated in the National Institute: Building Linkages for At-Risk Youth and Adults Through Vocational Technical Education. Designed for the purpose of developing statewide program improvement plans, the Institute was sponsored by the Technical Assistance for Special Populations Program (TASPP), a service program of the National Center for Research in Vocational Education, University of California at Berkeley.

This publication highlights the activities and the Action Plan of the Task Force seeking to answer the question "How can vocational programs help secondary level

Hispanic students continue their education, thereby reducing the dropout rate, increasing students' employability skills, and encouraging students' further education at the postsecondary level?" The solutions agreed upon were grouped into the following five areas and later became the basis of an action plan: (1) school improvements, (2) guidance and counseling, (3) community/ parental/family involvement, (4) prejudice/ discrimination, and (5) student assistance. The Action Plan is detailed in this document and includes the goals and strategies developed for each of the five areas. The Task Force believes the key to the action plan is the development of partnerships among many elements of the community. ztb (40 pages, also available in Spanish; no charge)

A Model Program for Serving LEP Students
Friedenberg, J. E. (1991).
Columbus: Ohio State University, Center on Education and Training for Employment.

This forty-five-minute videotape and accompanying facilitator's guide combine to make a training program for vocational, career, and occupational education professionals who serve LEP learners. Effective for both inservice and preservice training, the program is appropriate for teacher education programs, state departments of education, postsecondary institutions, local education agencies, occupational training programs, and others responsible for professional development and program improvement.

The videotape features an introduction and seven training segments on recruitment, assessment, adapted career-vocational instruction, vocational English as a second language (VESL), counseling, placement, and coordination.

The facilitator's guide contains material for a comprehensive workshop including background information, discussion questions with answers, training recommendations, and trainee assignment sheets with answers. sck (54 pages, $49.50)

American Association of School Administrators
1801 N. Moore Street
Arlington, VA 22209-9988
(703) 875-0717

Designed to help school administrators, teachers, state employees, community college personnel, and others concerned about vocational education, this manual contains essential information about the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act Amendments of 1990. It reviews, explains, and analyzes the key provisions of the Perkins Act, as revised by Public Law 101-392.

Organized in two parts, Part 1 gives a general overview of the Perkins Act, outlining its (1) significance, (2) major themes, (3) legislative history, and (4) organization and format. Part 2 walks through the Act's specific provisions, topic by topic. Using lay language, charts, and tables, Part 2 recapitulates the law's essential provisions, explains their significance, analyzes differences from prior law, and decodes unfamiliar terms and references. Each topic is numbered for easy cross reference and divided into subtopics. Individual provisions are marked to show whether they are new, revised from prior law, or similar to or the same as prior law. A glossary is provided explaining common acronyms, abbreviations, and terms used throughout the text. sck (104 pages, $23.50 includes shipping and handling)

Working Together to Support At-Risk Youth
Cunningham, D., Putzstuck, C., & Barbieri, M.
(1987).

Austin: University of Texas at Austin, Extension
Instruction and Materials Center.

The primary purpose of this manual is to provide training for professional and paraprofessional staff to support at-risk youth. It includes sections on education, cultural, and/or social problems; identification process; referral process; counseling strategies and techniques; alternative instructional strategies; adaptation or modification of materials; mentors and peer tutors; community-based and school-based support services; parent support groups; involvement in school activities; study skills; positive self-concept development; motivation; classroom management; and references. ## CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION

Adult Literacy: Programs and Practices (Research and Development Series No. 265A)
Campbell, R. E., & Sechler, J. A. (1987).
Columbus: Ohio State University, Center on Education and Training for Employment.

This study provides strategies to help strengthen the link between basic skills instruction and vocational training. Information provided in the publication will assist vocational educators in the identification, assessment, and instruction of reading, math, and language arts skills. The authors conclude that basic skills instruction intended to prepare adults for entry into vocational programs should be individualized, use performance-based processes, be geared toward student success, use pre- and posttests, be relevant, review and reinforce the skills that are taught, and address individual student learning styles. (107 pages, $8.75)

Bilingual Vocational Education for Immigrants (ERIC Digest No. 49)
Harrison, C. (1986).
Columbus: Ohio State University, ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult, Career, and Vocational Education.

The problems faced by adult immigrants, the use of Vocational English as a Second Language (VESL), activities which may facilitate cultural adjustment, and adjustments which should be made in employment related training for this population are summarized. Additional references are included. (1 page, no charge)

Cooperative Learning with Limited English Proficient Students: Q & A
Jacob, E., & Mattson, B. (1987, September).
Washington, DC: ERIC Clearinghouse on Languages and Linguistics, Center for Applied Linguistics.

Theory and research indicate that cooperative learning methods may provide a way to help limited-English proficient (LEP) students achieve academically and develop the English language skills necessary to function successfully in classrooms. This publication defines cooperative learning, identifies types of

The CVAE Program is a support program for disadvantaged students in all Georgia secondary vocational programs. Disadvantaged students, including limited English speaking populations and migrant populations unable to succeed in a regular vocational program without special support, are enrolled in both a vocational program and CVAE. The program emphasizes necessary competencies for occupational entry and relies on collaboration among math, English, CVAE, and vocational instructors to reinforce basic skills for school and work.

Developed to assist local school system personnel in meeting statewide curriculum requirements, the guide promotes a unified effort to develop and utilize competency-based vocational curricula that reflect the expressed needs of business, industry, and the community. The inclusion of broad concepts of work, careers, and family into an occupational skill-building curriculum and the incorporation of employability skills are also emphasized.

The guide provides terminal and enabling objectives, learning activities, instructional materials lists, and estimated hours for each instructional setting. The appendixes include sample teaching calendars, daily lesson plans, sample interlocking activities, information on the identification of students who are disadvantaged, keys to working with potential dropouts and disadvantaged youth, information on criterion-referenced testing, student competencies required by the statewide curriculum act, quality core curriculum for CVAE, Georgia Basic Skills Tests, and suggestions for evaluating the course. sck (416 pages, $10.00)

Different Types of ESL Programs (ERIC Digest)
McKeon, D. (1987, December).
Washington, DC: ERIC Clearinghouse on Languages and Linguistics, Center for Applied Linguistics.

The different types of English as a second language (ESL) programs and the factors which influence their design are summarized in this ERIC Digest. Examples of stand-alone ESL programs discussed in the paper include pull-out, class period, and resource center. In addition, four types of English-plus programs highlighted by the author include bilingual education, structured immersion, sheltered or content-based English, and high intensity language training. References are included. (2 pages, no charge)

English Day by Day
Roddy, M. (1989).
Novato, CA: Academic Therapy Publications.

Designed for adult ESL students, this book stresses the basic language skills of grammar, reading, writing, and pronunciation in the context of real life situations where competency in written and conversational skills and in problem-solving techniques can be critical. This book contains thirteen units, each organized around a life skill theme. Each unit includes vocabulary words, conversation exercises, reading, grammar, composition, pronunciation, life skill competencies, and problem-solving exercises. ztb (300 pages, $12.50)

This training manual was an outgrowth of a personnel preparation grant and was developed in an effort to reach California special education teachers who are receiving an increased number of culturally and linguistically diverse exceptional students into their classes. The goal of special education in serving this special population is to equip students with strategies for success within the core curriculum in order for these students to return to the general education program.

The manual is divided into three sections. The first deals primarily with understanding crosscultural issues such as language and culture. It also includes a framework for the appropriate placement of culturally and linguistically diverse exceptional students in special education. The second addresses instructional issues relative to crosscultural special education. The third section introduces specific instructional strategies for use with the core curriculum in the special education classroom.

The content of the manual was developed from a combination of sources including a review of the literature, the results of a three-year, statewide ethnographic data collection project on effective practices, and practical teaching experiences. sck (136 pages, $25.00)

Recommendations designed to assist educators in developing programs to meet the needs of the diverse students who comprise the school population are provided in this book directed toward educational leaders, including practitioners and university personnel.

The editors outline a rationale for change in the public schools and present a proactive model for identifying student needs and providing the resources necessary to meet those needs. The development and evaluation of goals is addressed along with establishing entry and exit criteria for program participation. developing formal and informal assessment procedures, and organizing instruction for the development of language and academic skills. A recommendation is presented for collaboration among students and professionals as a means of facilitating both the social and instructional integration of LEP and special needs students. Guidelines are discussed for working with culturally diverse students and their parents as well as the issue of evaluation and program modification.

Checklists and forms are provided throughout the book for those implementing a proactive model for school improvement. Additionally, descriptive information is provided in the appendix about some of the more commonly used tests for assessing culturally and linguistically different students in the areas of language, academics, intellectual functioning, and personality. sck (190 pages, $27.00)

The culmination of over sixty hours worth of discussion among more than two-hundred and fifty persons is contained in this monograph regarding the concerns that impact on culturally different postsecondary students with learning disabilities. The unique issues of African-American students, Asian students, students of Spanish-language background, Pacific Islanders, Native American students, and older, non-traditional students are discussed. This monograph is an attempt to summarize the wealth of information uncovered and to begin to formulate both a plan of action and an agenda for further exploration in determining how best to identify and serve the culturally diverse students who represent a growing segment of our service population. sck (22 pages; $17.00 nonmembers, $9.50 members)

The purpose of this resource guide is to disseminate strategies for improving the success of disadvantaged students in the classroom. These strategies will assist career-vocational educators in providing students with the skills wanted by employers, and increasing their effectiveness in teaching academically and economically disadvantaged students and LEP students. Although this publication is directed toward disadvantaged students, the strategies may be effective with other special populations.

Outlined in detail is the California Model Curriculum Standards and Program Frameworks in career-vocational education which reflects the emphasis on vocational-academic integration as mandated by the 1990 Perkins Act. The guide also includes an overview of the educational problems of disadvantaged students (including LEP students) with general suggestions, based on current research, on how to increase their achievement; strategies to promote successful school to work transition through career awareness, career exploration, employability skills training, and work experience education; specific strategies to improve students' performance in reading, writing, mathematics, problem solving/critical thinking, and oral and nonverbal communication skills with examples in all vocational subject areas; teaching strategies and support services that should be provided to ensure the success of disadvantaged students in career-vocational education; and descriptions of programs that show promise for providing quality vocational education to students. A list of resources and references accompany each chapter. The information presented is very specific and designed to be of practical value to classroom teachers and their supervisors. sck (153 pages, $16.50)

The sequence of skill building as developed in this curriculum project should enable LEP students to make the transition from school to work and community living successfully. Language skill building is the thrust throughout all nine modules. The purpose of these modules is to assist students in acquiring the language as well as vocational skills needed to complete the vocational program successfully. Supportive instructional materials for LEP students use the language of the vocational program. The teaching methodology for student activities is derived from the field of English as a second language (ESL). The format is generic in nature and allows implementors the freedom to design curriculum to their settings.

The modules can be used by the vocational teacher as supplementary instructional materials, focusing on related language skills needed to achieve vocational competencies. As a testing and assessment tool to use in general and workplace literacy settings, ETS tests draw on experience gained in the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) evaluation of twenty-one- to twenty-five-year-olds. They are designed for pre-testing and post-testing and measure both proficiency and progress in general and workplace literacy settings. The tests assess functional skills that adults use in everyday life and work—in prose, document, and quantitative literacy—and are free of all grade-level comparisons.

The Prose Literacy test measures the ability to read and interpret materials such as newspaper articles and books. The Document Literacy test measures the ability to use information from maps, charts, forms, and similar documents. The Quantitative Literacy test measures the ability to use arithmetical operations to interpret and use numeric information found in such materials as sales ads. The tests are available in two forms (which contain different test items but measure the same variables) and various configurations within each of the three test areas. Also available is an Administration and Scoring Manual and a Technical Manual. sck (Prices range from $5.25 to $118.15, depending on which configuration is purchased)

Robinson, E. R., & Mastny, A. Y. (1989).

New Brunswick: Rutgers, The State University of
New Jersey, Center for Community Education.

This handbook was prepared as part of the project Linking Schools and Community Services. Through the development of an interagency system to link schools and local human service agencies, the project sought to strengthen the ability of public schools to respond to the interrelated social and psychological needs of children. The handbook describes the intercollaborative process of social problem solving involving public and private agencies, interested individuals, public officials, and policymakers. The outcome sought is an ongoing working relationship between schools and the human service agencies in a community. sck (62 pages, no charge)

Ascher, C., & Schwartz, W. (1989).
New York, NY: ERIC Clearinghouse on Urban Education.

The growth of high school-college collaboration is promoted in this digest as the means to provide equal access to educational opportunities for disadvantaged minority students. Student development, school improvement, and college improvement are discussed separately in answering the question of why schools and colleges collaborate. Collaborative activities, the process of collaboration, and collaborative networks are also discussed. Finally, the issues of control and who really benefits are primary concerns of the process. sck (1 page, no charge)

Ascher, C. (1988, December).
New York, NY: ERIC Clearinghouse on Urban Education, Teachers College, Columbia University.

Collaborations between high schools and colleges are a current way to help urban and minority disadvantaged students make the high school to college transition. This monograph takes a sober look at the collaboratives that are currently operating around the country, and provides a thorough review of the growing body of literature evaluating the process.

Recognizing that collaboratives can provide disadvantaged students with the bridge they need to get from high school to college, the monograph examines their structure and funding. Using the experiences of specific collaborative groups, it describes the roles and activities of both public schools and colleges to help indicate which are most effective and efficient, and to identify the pitfalls that can sabotage the partnership. The monograph is designed for policymakers and administrators interested in forming or joining a collaborative partnership, or in learning more about the process. ## OCCUPATIONAL EXPERIENCE

Industry-Based Bilingual Vocational Training: A Directory of Industry-Based Training Programs for LEP Adults

Thomas, R. J., & Rhodes, P. (1990, March).
Dover, NH: Development Assistance Corporation.

Compiled as part of a larger project to promote the implementation of Bilingual Vocational Training (BVT) in the private sector by developing and working with training partnerships between private industry concerns and educational institutions, this directory of ninety-four training programs has two major objectives: (1) demonstrate the effectiveness of BVT as a model for use in the private sector, and (2) develop a handbook for use by company and educational institution personnel to establish and provide BVT in the private sector. Most of the programs listed are public/private partnerships with the most common types of alliances between public (school) adult basic education (ABE) centers and companies, community-based organizations and companies, community colleges/vocational technical schools and companies, and college/university adult/English as a Second Language (ESL) centers and companies.

The information included in the directory will (1) provide readers with a sense of the types of industry-based programs there are for limited-English proficient (LEP) employees; (2) identify programs with the potential of implementing BVT models and of being nominated as demonstration sites; and (3) provide a list of programs and contacts for the dissemination of the handbook and other developed materials, and for the promotion of the BVT model in workplace settings. While the program status of the entries in this directory may be static in nature, it does provide an accurate picture, quite representative of the overall national trends. mg (111 pages, $11.10 prepaid)

Resource Guide to Work Experience Programs

Hartley, N., & Lehmann, J. (1989, April).
Fort Collins: Colorado Community College and Occupational Education System.

Designed for professionals who will be starting new work experience programs and for those wanting to enhance current programs, this resource guide is also intended to assist local educational agencies in planning, developing, implementing, and evaluating work experience programs. The work experience program is seen as a means to prepare special needs students for employment. It is particularly helpful for students who are not successful in school, may not be looking at postsecondary education, are in need of a job to stay in school, are potential dropouts, or may have difficulty acquiring employment without assistance. Chapters in the manual include work experience programs, teacher-coordinator, vocational assessment, program implementation, placing students on the job, transition, advisory committee, public relations, related legislation, and program evaluation and reporting. The manual design, a three-ring notebook with pages numbered by chapter and page, facilitates the addition of updated materials on a regular basis and is meant to become the coordinator's handbook for implementation of Work Experience Programs. This resource guide was developed to establish written guidelines for the development, implementation, and management of a successful Supplemental Services program serving students who are disadvantaged, disabled, or LEP enrolled in vocational education programs. It provides an overview of the necessary components of a supplemental services program, including recommended practices. In addition, sample forms, brochures, and lists of materials and community resources are included to assist in the development and operation of the program. Since duties and programmatic services are similar at the secondary and postsecondary level, the contents of this resource guide apply to both levels unless stated otherwise, as in the program implementation chapters. The chapters include an overview of supplemental services, definition of terms, legislation, supplemental service coordinator's role and function, vocational assessment, assessment instruments, secondary program implementation, community resources, postsecondary program implementation, advisory committees, public relations, and program evaluation. This manual is designed both for those who will be starting new supplemental service programs and for those supplemental service coordinators who want to enhance their current programs. Examples are included wherever possible to assist the Supplemental Services Coordinator and/or members of the Supplemental Services support team in delivering effective programs within their local school district or community college. National Commission for Employment Policy.
(1990, January).
Washington, DC: Author.

The National Commission for Employment Policy's recommendations on ways to improve training opportunities for Hispanics in programs funded under Title II of JTPA are reported. The report (1) focuses on issues which have caused Hispanics to be underserved by training programs funded under JTPA, (2) discusses the implications for the success of JTPA in meeting its goal of training economically disadvantaged people, and (3) presents specific recommendations for improving JTPA's ability to meet this goal. mcw (89 pages, no charge)

As an inquiry into the education reform movement of the 1980s, this report uses at-risk youth as the frame of reference. The authors define an at-risk youth as one who has left school or is predictably in danger of leaving school without the skills to be a productive and self-reliant citizen and to succeed in today's workplace and hence, in society. An overview is presented of the federal role in education reform during the 1980s and the findings of a survey on how the states have performed. It is estimated that only five percent of state education funds are being used specifically for service to at-risk youth. Furthermore, evidence is presented in this report that some educational reforms actually are harming at-risk youth. The report underlines a belief that the most formidable barriers to assisting at-risk youth do not concern lack of money but failure to perceive them as in need of specific long-term attention, along with resistance to institutional change at the state and local levels, and absence of leadership at the federal level. Recommendations aimed at program improvement for at-risk youth are provided for federal and state levels. (65 pages, no charge)

The Decade of the Hispanic: An Economic Retrospective

Miranda, L., & Quiroz, J. T. (1990, March).
Washington, DC: National Council of La Raza.

Many observers predicted that the 1980s would be "The Decade of the Hispanic." From 1980 to 1989, the Hispanic population grew from 14.5 to 20.1 million persons—8.2% of the total U.S. population. Despite this growth, an economic retrospective of "The Decade of the Hispanic" is sobering. Using the most recent Census Bureau data available, this report identifies seven trends which characterized Hispanics' economic situation in the 1980s: stagnating income levels and continued high poverty, high proportions of impoverished children, no improvement for woman-maintained households, deepening hardship among married-couple families, widening income disparity, significant unequal benefits from education, men's earnings decreasing and women's earnings increasing.

In addition to describing these trends, this report analyzes the most significant factors contributing to these trends and their public policy implications, which include increasing the value of work, improving educational opportunities, enhancing employment opportunities, and reducing employment discrimination. mg (27 pages, $7.50)

Quality Education for Minorities Project. (1990, January).
Cambridge, MA: Author.

This report discusses the specific needs of Alaska Native, American Indian, African American, Mexican American, and Puerto Rican students; presents examples of successful education programs and practices; and underscores the need for leadership, commitment, and wisdom to establish "a new foundation of quality education." Goals for the year 2000 include ensuring children start school prepared to learn; ensuring students are prepared to enter the workforce or college successfully; increasing participation of minority students in higher education; strengthening and increasing the number of teachers serving minority children; strengthening the school-to-work transition; and providing quality out-of-school experiences and opportunities. Recommendations accompany each goal. sck (132 pages; single copies, no charge)

The inner cities of America, their minority student populations, and their public community colleges and universities are the focus of this book. Opportunities for higher education in America's cities have been substantially broadened and strengthened, but the core of the problem remains; too few Hispanics and African-Americans are enrolled in baccalaureate programs and fewer still complete the requirements for a degree. This problem is the central question addressed in this book. Intended for policymakers at the state, city, and institutional levels, this book will also provide administrators and faculty members in colleges and universities with insight into a problem many believe will be the most important issue facing higher education during the remainder of this century.

Descriptions of the barriers to cooperation between community colleges and universities are provided. The book explores the implications of these differences for inter-institutional cooperation and student transfer.

The range of educational and student support practices found in urban community colleges is described in the relation to the strategies for overcoming barriers to successful transfer. The book also explores the university policies and practices that contribute to or impede the progress of transfer students. The book discusses the states' role in improving minority education and what distinguishes those variables which institutions control, from those imposed by the state educational system. sck (244 pages, $27.95)

This book is based on the ethnographic research conducted by the author in her role as "the evaluation researcher" of an innovative program at an alternative high school in New York City. She describes her book as follows: "Low-income urban students of color drop out of high school in proportions of 40-60 percent. And their exodus is represented as if it were quite natural. This text seeks to unearth those institutional policies and practices that enable, obscure, and legitimate this mass exodus. The text 'frames' a political story of urban dropouts from the vantage of life inside and around a single urban high school, as it tells a particular story about low-income African-American and Latino dropouts and graduates who have themselves been 'framed' by an institution that produces and then justifies majority failure."

The author presents the complexities of urban education combining a narrative structure with a rigorous theoretical discourse that allows the reader to both hear the voices of those involved in the dropout situation as well as to have the opportunity to reflect critically on the ideological and material forces that structure the dropout issue as a social problem. sck (313 pages; $19.95 paperback, $59.50 hardcover)

This study analyzes the function of big-city high schools and addresses how the education of the low-income minority youth can be improved. It compares comprehensive (or zoned) high schools, special public magnet schools, and Catholic high schools and identifies school features that motivate these children to learn and develop into mature adults. Finally, it suggests how these features can be made available to urban public high school students.

Section I describes the purpose and process of the study. Section II outlines the importance of improving urban secondary schools and describes the educational problems of inner-city high school students. The third section presents composite profiles of three kinds of schools that were studied—Catholic, special-purpose public, and zoned public—and examines student performance. Section IV analyzes the principal differences among the schools that were studied, highlighting critical similarities and differences in mission, organization, management of student life, curriculum, and instruction. The fifth section addresses the question of generalizability: Can effective features be adapted or reproduced in comprehensive public schools? The final section explores the implications of what was found and shows how school systems can create “focus” schools and assess their effectiveness for disadvantaged students.

Although the study pertains to New York City schools, the results may also apply to any major city’s efforts to make secondary education more effective for inner-city youth. Job (100 pages, $7.50) policymakers with a "snapshot" or "portrait" of the educational status of Hispanics and a discussion of the policy implications of these statistics. This analysis uses the most recent available and reliable data on Hispanic educational attainments from such sources as the U.S. Department of Education's National Center for Education Statistics and the U.S. Bureau of the Census.

The report is designed to provide educational status data in a usable and practical format and context. Snapshot summaries are provided of the educational status, attainment, and literacy of Hispanics at various points in the educational pipeline—grades K-12, postsecondary, young adults, and adults—along with information about teachers and administrators in public and private elementary and secondary schools.

The data and analyses included in this document are designed to help provide a basic understanding of similarities and differences between Hispanics and other major population groups, and within the Hispanic population—an understanding needed by educational policymakers and practitioners in developing programs which meet the specific educational needs of Hispanics in any particular city or region of the country. Such a knowledge base will help prevent the use of "quick fix" or band-aid solutions which ignore Hispanics' educational needs as a whole, as well as differences among Hispanic subgroups. Significant findings include the following: Hispanics are the most undereducated major subgroup in the United States; the educational gap between Hispanics and non-Hispanics continues to widen; regardless of the measure used, Hispanics continue to have the highest school dropout rate of any major group; Hispanics represent a growing segment of the school-age population; college enrollment by Hispanic students and completion are low; and up to fifty-six percent of Hispanic adults can be considered functionally illiterate. sck (114 pages, $15.00)

Statistics on the dropout rate among the Hispanic population are provided in this report, demonstrating how the lower level of educational attainment is reflected in lower median family income in the Hispanic population. It describes the ASPIRA Association's model for intervention in the education and development of Hispanic youth. Called the ASPIRA process, the model consciously accentuates the positive, putting the focus on developing the potential of Latino students—Aspirantes—rather than overcoming their deficits.

Also described in this report are other ASPIRA programs such as Hispanic Community Mobilization for Dropout Prevention, which focuses on parental and community involvement in dropout prevention; Public Policy Leadership Program, an internship program to encourage Latino youth to become active in policymaking and decision making; and National Health Careers Program, to attract Hispanics to enter medical, dental, and allied health fields. sck (24 pages, $3.00)

These authors investigate what can be done to stem the flow of dropouts from American schools. The book is based on a study of fourteen secondary schools serving at-risk students. The authors describe the schools, examining a wide range of schools successfully serving at-risk youth. They present a theoretical framework for understanding at-risk students and their schools, as well as making recommendations for local and state policymakers. The authors address a broad audience by presenting a mixture of research data, theoretical concepts, practical suggestions, and vignettes for introducing reforms and programs to reduce dropout rates. Topics include an explanation of "at-risk," a historical treatment of this issue, and a discussion of the school's role in becoming a support system for at-risk students. sck (275 pages; $42.00 hardcover, $20.00 paperback)

The Technical Assistance for Special Populations Program (TASPP) developed this guide to assist state and local administrators of vocational special needs programs, special needs educators, counselors, researchers, and others serving LEP students.

The guide is part annotated bibliography and part directory, including listings of relevant publications, newsletters, agencies, associations, organizations, centers for educational information/services, clearinghouses, computer-based information networks, and databases.

Included also are organizations that promote literacy instruction, basic academic remediation, job search skills instruction, instruction in coping skills, educational day care, and vocational skills. Some, like the National Council of La Raza, work to improve life for Hispanic Americans; other organizations are concerned with the teaching of English as a second language (ESL), support services to migrant workers, or the use of educational technology in bilingual programs.

Materials are grouped according to the cluster headings of the common components of exemplary programs: program administration, curriculum and instruction, comprehensive support services, formalized articulation and communication, and occupational experience. Background literature and additional resources are also provided. This resource guide is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of all available resources, but rather, materials are included which are representative of the field. For each entry, an annotation is provided along with the price and ordering information whenever possible. An address listing for ordering the publications is included in the appendix. sck (62 pages, $2.50 prepaid)

Three Realities: Minority Life in the United States

Business-Higher Education Forum. (1990, June). Washington, DC: Author.

Prepared by the Task Force on Minorities and the Work Force, comprised of eighteen business and higher education leaders, this report offers insight on the minority progress and problems in the United States. Although the report is concerned with all minority group members, including American Indians, Hispanics, African Americans, and Asian Americans, it relies primarily on data that describe the condition of African-Americans and Hispanics. These two groups make up more than ninety percent of America's minority population. Four major problems limiting minorities' full participation in the nation's economic life are cited: racism, poor educational attainment, the stranglehold of the inner city, and the lack of participation in all aspects of the Nation's economic life. The report has two fundamental goals: (1) to address ways to bring black and Hispanic Americans more fully into our Nation's economic and educational mainstream, and (2) to help clarify the terms of the public debate about minority policy and progress in this Nation. Included is a series of recommendations for public policymakers, colleges and universities, and corporations in the areas of employment, public assistance, out-of-wedlock births, education, affirmative action, hiring and promotion, capital development, and franchising. sck (88 pages, $15.00) of the underclass tend to experience persistent poverty, prolonged welfare dependency, more out-of-wedlock births, and high dropout rates. In addition, there is a greater likelihood that they will either become criminals or victims of crime. Members of the underclass are to be found everywhere in the United States; however, the term is commonly applied to African-American and Hispanic people who are concentrated in urban neighborhoods. "Poor white" is also a common description of members of the underclass. Some experts speculate that the underclass is growing. This study describes briefly the state of research on defining and measuring the underclass. The central goal of the General Accounting Office's (GAO) work, however, is to summarize what is known about policies and programs that might be useful in developing a strategy for responding to the problems of the underclass. GAO groups these policies and programs into three main groups: (1) those that address the persistent condition of poverty, whether by prenatal and pediatric care or by education and job opportunities; (2) those that emphasize social standards and try to confront problems like drugs, welfare dependency, teen pregnancy, and gang violence; and (3) those that address urban spatial concentration via greater opportunities for people to leave depressed areas or urban development.

GAO concludes that the problems of the underclass require a multifaceted approach involving economic development, criminal justice, health, education, job training, social service, housing, and transportation programs. sck (33 pages, no charge)

Workforce 2000: Work and Workers for the Twenty-First Century

Johnston, W. B., & Packer, A. H. (1987).
Indianapolis, IN: Hudson Institute.

The purpose of this study is to furnish information on the job market that can be used in evaluating the adequacy of current public policies and, where needed, undertaking new policy initiatives. Four key trends will shape the last years of the twentieth century: (1) the American economy should grow at a relatively healthy pace; (2) U.S. manufacturing will be a much smaller share of the economy in the year 2000; (3) the workforce will grow slowly, becoming older, more female, and more disadvantaged; and (4) the new jobs in service industries will demand much higher skill levels than the jobs of today. If the United States is to continue to prosper, policymakers must find ways to stimulate balanced world growth; accelerate productivity increases in service industries; maintain the dynamism of an aging workforce; reconcile the conflicting needs of women, work and families; integrate African-American and Hispanic workers fully into the economy; and improve the educational preparation of all workers. While these are not the only items on the nation's agenda between now and the year 2000, they are certainly among the most important. More critically, they are issues that will not go away by themselves. If nothing is done to focus national attention and action on these challenges, they are likely to be still unresolved at the beginning of the next century. By addressing them now, the nation's decisionmakers can help to assure the goal of an economically competitive America that fully utilizes the talents and skills of all its citizens. Workforce Policies for the 1990s: A New Labor Market Agenda. The Possibilities of Employment Policy. (Papers Presented to an Economic Policy Institute Seminar on Labor Market Policy, April 29, 1988)

Marshall, R., & Osterman, P. (1989).
Washington, DC: Economic Policy Institute.

Economic Policy Institute
1730 Rhode Island Avenue, NW,
Suite 812
Washington, DC 20036
(202) 775-8810

The objective of these proceedings was to identify the principles upon which new, more relevant labor market policies might be launched to improve the skills of both today's and tomorrow's labor force. The speakers address such issues as discrimination of educational programs and the delivery system for employment policy. Both speakers point to some of our competitor nations as evidence that human investment programs make a critical contribution to a nation's competitiveness and productivity, yet they differ in their choice of strategic priorities and in their answer to the question of how the next generation of labor market progress should be structured. They look at the systems, institutions, and programs of human resource investment. Endnotes and discussions are included. sck (78 pages, $5.00)

Directory of California Support Services and Programs for Special Populations

Bravo, C. (1991).

Rohnert Park: California Institute on Human Services, Vocational Education Resource System.

Career-vocational education is an important intervention strategy for at-risk students; however, it is not sufficient unto itself. Ancillary instruction, services, and resources needed for transition from school to work or from school to postsecondary education must also be in place. This directory is the result of efforts to identify such services and resources, and lists California Department of Education and Community College programs which provide training, technical assistance, and/or funding needed for instruction and transition of disadvantaged, disabled, and limited-English proficient (LEP) students. sck (80 pages, $14.50)

Minneapolis, MN: Minneapolis Public Schools.

Minneapolis Public Schools
807 N.E. Broadway
Minneapolis, MN 55413
(612) 627-2048

This compendium of research materials about bilingual education contains abstracts of 181 publications and provides an overview of the research conducted by the Equal Education: Student Achievement Department (EE:SA) in administering the Minneapolis Public Schools' program for LEP students. The material is divided into the following sections: demographics, policy (national/state/local), programs, curriculum/instructional strategies, assessment, evaluation/monitoring system, evaluation/staff licensing, basic research, definitions, and institutionalization of the Minnesota program. Within each section, the situations in the program which EE:SA facilitated or responded to are outlined first; abstracts of the applicable research documents are then presented. A glossary of linguistic terms is provided at the end. (94 pages)

Linking Schools and Community Services: A Resource Directory
Mastny, A. Y. (Comp.). (1989).
New Brunswick: Rutgers, The State University of
New Jersey, Center for Community Education.

This resource directory was prepared as part of the project "Linking Schools and Community Services." Through the development of an interagency system to link schools and local human service agencies, the project sought to strengthen the ability of public schools to respond to the interrelated social and psychological needs of children. The directory lists organizations, individuals, addresses, and phone numbers for the following categories: adolescent pregnancy/teen parenting, child abuse and neglect/sexual abuse, child advocacy, dropout prevention, drug and alcohol abuse, sex education, health care, AIDS education, homelessness, mental health, and youth employment and training. sck (80 pages, no charge)

Vocational Education for Special Populations:
Recommendations for Improving State Policy
(MDS-031)

Phelps, L. A., Wermuth, T. R., & Crain, R. L.
(1991, September).
Berkeley: National Center for Research in Vocational Education, University of California at Berkeley.

Three aspects of equity embedded in the Perkins Act are examined: (1) the extent of access which special needs youth and adults have to programs and services, (2) the effectiveness of various programs and services locally received, and (3) outcomes realized by special students participating in vocational education. This is accomplished through summaries of recent studies, related evaluative and empirical literature, and data from longitudinal studies. The study gives primary attention to youth who are disabled, disadvantaged, or LEP in secondary vocational education programs.

A set of general conclusions and recommendations for improving state policy is presented. These recommendations should be of interest to policymakers at both the federal and state level as they examine alternatives for implementing the 1990 Amendments to the Perkins Act (P.L. 101-392). The appendix contains brief summaries of the major studies of effective vocational education programs serving students with special needs. sck (66 pages, $4.00)

Division of Adult Education and Literacy (DAEL)

The U.S. Department of Education's Division of Adult Education and Literacy (DAEL), in the Office of Vocational and Adult Education, has overall responsibility for providing a broad range of services for the education of adults, including those who are disabled or LEP, throughout the country and for promoting the development of adult education resources nationally. Its mission is to provide leadership, direction, and assistance for the States to improve and expand adult education and literacy services; administer the Adult Education Act (AEA); and advise the Assistant Secretary on policies and programs affecting literacy and lifelong learning.

The Adult Education Act (P.L. 100-297 as amended) is currently the major federal program that provides basic education and literacy skills. The program serves adults age sixteen and over or who are beyond the age of compulsory school attendance under state law, and lack sufficient educational skills to function effectively in society.

In addition to administering the AEA, the Division identifies national needs and formulates policies, programs, and procedures necessary to meet the educational needs of adults who lack a high school diploma. DAEL establishes and maintains cooperative and consultative relations with federal, state, local, and private educational agencies, organizations, and associations. Annual regional workshops as well as an annual State Directors of Adult Education Conference are held. DAEL also publishes the ALL Points Bulletin newsletter. Call or write for more information on DAEL activities and resources. mcw

Hispanic Policy Development Project (HPDP)

This nonprofit organization encourages the analysis of public and private policies and policy proposals affecting Hispanics in the United States. HPDP supports high-level policy commissions composed of Hispanics and nonHispanics; conferences, seminars, and debates around central education and employment issues; both lay and professional analysis and evaluation of specific policy options; and policy-analysis competitions open to Hispanic and nonHispanic scholars as well as Hispanic organizations. It seeks to bring its findings to the attention of key groups and leaders throughout the United States, and publishes reports, bulletins, and books based on research and data analysis. sck

National Governors' Association (NGA)

Representing the governors of the fifty states, the commonwealths of the Northern Mariana Islands and Puerto Rico, and the territories of American Samoa, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, NGA's missions are to influence national policy and apply creative leadership to the solution of state problems. NGA's operations are supported by member jurisdictions, and its policies and programs are formulated by the governors. Throughout the year, NGA's staff represents the governors' position to Congress, the administration, and the press; coordinates governors' testimony and other communication with the Congress and the administration on NGA positions; provides the governors with information on federal programs and policies; conducts research; and serves as a means of sharing innovative programs and discussing emerging issues among the states.

The NGA has seven standing committees on major issues: Agriculture and Rural Development; Economic Development and Technological Innovation; Energy and Environment; Human Resources; International Trade and Foreign Relations; Justice and Public Safety; and Transportation, Commerce, and Communications. Policy fields of interest to NGA include agriculture, economic development, education, environment, health, social services, training and employment, trade, and transportation. sk

National Institute for Work and Learning (NIWL)

NIWL, an institute of the Academy for Educational Development, seeks to improve the connections between education and work for youth and adults and to bring into better balance the supply of and demand for critical skills in the workplace. The Institute's primary focus is the pursuit of collaborative efforts among educators, employers, unions, community organizations, and government to resolve work and learning problems. NIWL accomplishes its mission through basic and policy research, action and development projects, program evaluations, information networking, and technical assistance. NIWL has established three distinct program areas for its projects: partnerships for youth transition, worklife education and training, and productive aging. BVT program supports projects which provide occupational skills instruction and job-related English language instruction to LEP adults and out of school youth. Projects are funded on a competitive basis for a two-year period. Eligible applicants are state, local, postsecondary educational institutions; private, nonprofit vocational training institutions; and other nonprofit organizations serving individuals who normally speak a language other than English.

The BVIT program supports projects which provide training for instructors, aides, counselors, and other ancillary personnel in bilingual vocational education programs for LEP individuals. Currently, projects focus on inservice training activities that address a national or statewide need in bilingual vocational education. Projects are funded on a competitive basis for an eighteen-month period. Eligible applicants are state agencies and public and private, nonprofit educational institutions.

Interested applicants should check the Federal Register for grant competition announcements and the necessary application forms. sck

Wider Opportunities for Women (WOW)

This nonprofit organization works nationally and in Washington, DC, to achieve economic independence and equality of opportunity for women and girls. WOW leads the Women's Work Force Network (WWFN) which is comprised of over four-hundred and sixty independent women's employment programs and advocates in forty-nine states plus the District of Columbia. Each year, WOW's Network serves more than a quarter of a million women seeking employment information, counseling, training, and jobs. Through some of its current projects, WOW consults with school systems to improve vocational education opportunities for women and girls, provides staff development to organizations interested in teaching literacy in the contexts of employment or intergenerational programs, and provides technical assistance to the national job training community on nontraditional employment.

Publications on WOW advocacy and research activities concerning vocational education programs for women and girls are available for sale by mail. Contact WOW for a publications list. mcw

CENTERS FOR EDUCATIONAL INFORMATION/SERVICES

The centers and/or offices listed herein provide a variety of information, resources, and referral services concerning issues relating to limited-English-proficient and immigrant students.

ACCESS ERIC

ACCESS ERIC acts as a gateway to ERIC, the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC). As the outreach component of the system, it promotes services and products and acts as a referral service between the system and its users. This service, available toll free, helps education practitioners, librarians, policymakers, researchers, and students keep informed of data offered by ERIC and other education information service providers. The staff answers questions, refers callers to subject-specific information sources, and provides ERIC System publications. In addition, it maintains education-related databases available to the public online through GTE Education Services and in hard copy. jeb

BOCES Geneseo Migrant Center (BGMC)

Since 1968, BGMC has provided a comprehensive program of educational, health care, and family support services to migrant farmworkers from infants to adults. Center staff provide seasonal programs to the workers at various "camp" locations. The Center also conducts research on migrant characteristics and needs, and serves as a major repository and dissemination source for such information. Currently, the Center has been placing its highest concentration of effort on providing services to dropouts through coordinating the Migrant Dropout Reconnection Program (MDRP) in thirty states, plus Puerto Rico. MDRP attempts to increase the number of migrant dropout youth who resume an alternative educational/vocational program and/or secure employment. The Center's publications include Real Talk, the newsletter of the Migrant Dropout Reconnection Program; and Primetime, the newsletter of the Parental Resources for Involvement in Migrant Education (PRIME). jeb

Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSSO)

CCSSO is a nationwide nonprofit organization of the fifty-seven public officials who head departments of elementary and secondary education in every state, five U.S. extra-state jurisdictions, the District of Columbia, and the U.S. Department of Defense Dependents' Schools. The Council seeks its members' consensus on major education issues and expresses their views to civic and professional organizations, federal agencies, Congress, and the public.

CCSSO maintains a Resource Center on Educational Equity which provides services designed to achieve equity in education for minorities, women and girls, and for disabled, limited-English proficient (LEP), and economically disadvantaged students. CCSSO's staff provides technical assistance in policy formulation, develops programs and materials, gives technical assistance in workshop planning and other services needed by state education agencies, holds working conferences, monitors civil rights issues, and trains local on-site trainers to increase the dimensions of this work. CCSSO also publishes a quarterly newsletter, CONCERNS.

CCSSO is responsible for managing and staffing a variety of leadership initiatives to provide better educational services to children and youth at risk of school failure. It conducts projects on topics such as dropout prevention, improving educational services to LEP students, increasing the participation of female and minority students in mathematics and social studies, improving transition programs for disabled youth, school-sanctioned community service, educational equity for juvenile female offenders, and AIDS education. sck

Employment Training Center (ETC)

IBM Job Training Centers

The Job Training Centers are located in urban areas with high unemployment. The programs are designed for economically disadvantaged individuals who cannot afford commercially available training. The centers are operated in cooperation with nonprofit community-based organizations such as the National Urban League, Opportunities Industrialization Centers, SER-Jobs for Progress, and local businesses. Although training is offered primarily in word processing, some centers also offer additional courses such as programming, computer operations, data entry, terminal or personal computer operations, and clerk typing.

Through its Basic Skills/Literacy Support Program, IBM supports basic skills and literacy development at the centers. Disadvantaged persons who do not have the skills to enroll in job training are served through a comprehensive education system, designed to provide training from basic literacy to skills necessary for a high school equivalency diploma.

IBM provides equipment, maintenance, software, equipment-related supplies, and all classroom materials as needed. There is no tuition charge. To learn more about this service or the location of the more than ninety-five Job Training Centers IBM has in place, contact Kathleen Ryan. sck

Institute for the Study of Adult Literacy

In 1985, the College of Education at Penn State established the Institute for the Study of Adult Literacy as a vehicle for using the resources of a major land grant institution to address the issues in the field of adult literacy. The goals of the institute are development and dissemination of a sound conceptual and research base in the field of adult literacy, improvement of practice in the field of adult literacy, and leadership and coordination of a comprehensive approach to the delivery of adult literacy services.

Projects to date have addressed technology in adult literacy, intergenerational literacy, staff development and training, workplace literacy, and special needs populations. sck

Northwest Educational Cooperative (NEC)

NEC is an educational agency which has local, state, and federal grants for training and staff development, consultative assistance, information dissemination, and product development. Selected projects concerning limited English proficiency in vocational education include the Bilingual Vocational Educational Project, Capacity Building for States, English as a Second Language Statewide Service Center, and the Illinois Resource Center. NEC is a source of English language training, vocational counseling, and access to resources.

Other activities of NEC include maintaining a collection of resources pertaining to literacy and coping skills of persons whose native language is not English; making available to agency personnel working with displaced homemakers seeking to enter the job market information through a statewide computer database on child care, job training, housing, social services, job placement, and other services; providing job development services; and providing staff development and technical assistance to professional adult educators serving adult learners. sck

Pacific Region Educational Laboratory (PREL)

As one of ten Office of Educational Research and Improvement's regional laboratories, PREL helps schools improve educational outcomes for children, youth, and adults. This mission is carried out by assisting educators, families, government, community agencies, business, and labor in maintaining cultural literacy and improving quality and equality in educational programs and processes. This is accomplished through forums, research, technical assistance, evaluation, training, information resource activities, and product and procedure development and dissemination. PREL serves children and educators in American Samoa, Commonwealth of the North Mariana Islands, Federated States of Micronesia, Guam, Hawaii, Republic of the Marshall Islands, and Republic of Palau. jeb

Quality Education for Minorities Network (QEM)

QEM serves as the focal point for the implementation of strategies that will help realize the vision and goals set forth in the QEM Project Action Council and Resource Group's report, "Education That Works: An Action Plan for the Education of Minorities."

The goals include explicit inclusion of minorities in school restructuring; broad publication and replication of educational strategies which have been proven most effective with minority youth; the importance of improving education for all students; and minority families and communities taking greater responsibility for the education of their children, for raising aspirations and commitment to success, and promotion of the values of discipline and hard work required to succeed in school, in the workplace, and as citizens. QEM is also concerned with strengthening the school-to-work transition. A computerized database categorizing successful educational programs around the country is also being assembled.

Although its initial efforts will focus on members of groups historically underserved by education (i.e., Alaska Natives, American Indians, African Americans, Mexican Americans, and Puerto Ricans), the QEM Network advocates quality education for all students. Following this initial focus in its early efforts, the QEM Network will expand to include others served who are disadvantaged due to socioeconomic status or language barriers. sck

Resources in Special Education (RiSE)

RiSE provides information and resources for individuals and organizations interested in the education of children with exceptional needs in California. RiSE is sponsored by the California State Department of Education, Special Education Division.

Exemplary program overviews, best practices, current research and reports, materials for staff development, and information on Special Education Division projects and activities are available through the statewide lending library and RiSE publications. RiSE provides reference and referral services from an extensive resources collection, maintains two electronically accessible databases, publishes training and information manuals, and produces a bimonthly newsletter, the Special EDge. A list of publications is available upon request. sck

Technical Assistance for Special Populations Program (TASPP)

TASPP is a service function of the National Center for Research in Vocational Education at the University of California at Berkeley. Housed at the University of Illinois, it is designed to assist in the improvement of vocational education programs for youth and adults with special needs. TASPP's goals are to provide comprehensive resource and referral services to practitioners, researchers, and policymakers working in vocational education with special needs populations at the secondary and postsecondary level; to initiate and support networks of professionals serving the vocational education needs of special groups; and to provide targeted technical assistance on topics or problems crucial to improving the quality of vocational education programs provided to special populations. TASPP activities include conducting workshops; publishing a quarterly newsletter, TASPP BULLETIN, and a topical series, TASPP BRIEF, on critical issues and policy options; and developing appropriate materials for national distribution. sck

CLEARINGHOUSES

The following clearinghouses provide specialized information and technical assistance to teachers, administrators, counselors, policymakers, parents, students, and others interested in the issues surrounding limited-English proficient (LEP) youth and adults in vocational education programs. Available services include information responses by letter, telephone, or electronic interaction; access to a computer-based information network; individualized computer searches; specialized projects; conference presentations; and telephone consultations. Publications include the following: newsletters, bibliographies, monographs, journal columns and articles, fact sheets and resource papers, resource directories, and referral lists.

Center for the Prevention and Recovery of Dropouts (CPRD)

Sponsored by the Intercultural Development Research Association, CPRD functions as a clearinghouse of information on such issues as the magnitude of the dropout problem, the cost of early school leaving, and mechanisms for school and community responses to the problem. sck

Clearinghouse on Adult Education and Literacy
Sponsored by the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Vocational and Adult Education, Division of Adult Education and Literacy, this clearinghouse links the adult education community with existing resources in adult education, and provides information which either deals directly with state-administered adult education programs funded under the Adult Education Act (P.L. 100-297), or can provide support to adult education activities. The clearinghouse responds to requests for information, provides referral services, issues publications, and functions as a "broker" of information services by referring inquiries to appropriate sources. Publications available at no cost include the Adult Education Act and Regulations, fact sheets on adult education, directories on various programs and resources, literacy materials, papers on selected adult education subjects, the Bibliography of Resource Materials, and Special Answers for Special Needs (A Guide to 353 Available Resources). Areas of interest include adult secondary education, workplace literacy, corrections education, computer assisted instruction, adults with disabilities/special learning needs, English as a second language (ESL), family literacy, older persons, staff development, volunteers, homeless, adult education programs, and literacy programs. sck

English Plus Information Clearinghouse (EPIC)
EPIC promotes the concept of "English plus," which holds that "national interest can best be served when all persons of our society have full access to effective opportunities to acquire strong English language proficiency plus mastery of a second or multiple languages." The Clearinghouse's goal is to promote awareness of the language issue and its impact on education and foreign and domestic affairs via disseminating information at meetings, the EPIC Events newsletter, and special mailings; monitoring legislation; and maintaining a library. jeb

ERIC Clearinghouse on Languages and Linguistics (ERIC/CLL)

ERIC/CLL publishes four monographs each year under the series title, Language in Education: Theory and Practice. Issues in the fields of languages and linguistics are covered in the monograph series published as practical guides, state-of-the-art papers, theoretical reviews, and collected reports. The Clearinghouse also develops and disseminates Digests, Minibibs, Ready-Made Computer Searches, and a semiannual newsletter. Information relating to curriculum developments and problems, theoretical and applied linguistics, bilingual education, cultural and intercultural context of languages, commonly and uncommonly taught languages, including ESL, and teacher training can be obtained through the clearinghouse. sck

ERIC Clearinghouse on Urban Education
(ERIC/CUE)

ERIC/CUE collects and disseminates published and unpublished materials for a wide audience of educators, researchers, and professionals in a range of disciplines, and interested members of the general public. The Clearinghouse's areas of concern include the education of urban minority youth, grades three through college, especially African Americans, Asian Americans, and Hispanic Americans; urban schooling; ethnic discrimination; school desegregation; the relation between urban and minority life and school performance; and urban and minority social institutions and services as they relate to education. Publications available from ERIC/CUE include Urban Diversity Series, Trends and Issues Series, ERIC Digests, and Urban Schools Bibliographies. sck

National Clearinghouse for Bilingual Education
(NCBE)

Funded by the U.S. Department of Education, NCBE is a national information center on the education of LEP students. NCBE provides reference and referral services on all aspects of bilingual and ESL instruction. In addition to these services, NCBE offers free access to its electronic information system, which includes three searchable databases and an electronic bulletin board. NCBE's bimonthly newsletter, FORUM, presents news articles and other current information. NCBE's information system and publications focus on the needs of practitioners and individuals or organizations which work directly with practitioners in the education of LEP persons. sck

National Clearinghouse on Literacy Education
(NCLE)

NCLE is operated by the Center for Applied Linguistics as an adjunct to the ERIC Clearinghouse on Languages and Linguistics. Its mission is to serve providers of educational services as a national resource center for information, materials, and technical assistance on literacy education for LEP adults and out-of-school youth. It serves community-based organizations; private voluntary agencies; federal, state, and local education agencies; businesses; unions; correctional institutions; libraries; and many other groups involved in literacy education for this population. NCLE also links the diverse public and private institutions, agencies, and community groups concerned with literacy issues for LEP groups. Two important aspects of NCLE's mission include (1) the establishment of

One product of the Clearinghouse is a directory of literacy programs in the United States serving LEP adults and out-of-school youth. Other new publications address approaches to teaching literacy to LEP adults, workplace literacy for LEP adults, reaching and keeping students in adult literacy programs, cultural considerations in teaching literacy to LEP adults, training literacy volunteers and tutors, biliteracy, and the role of first language literacy in the acquisition of second language literacy. sck

National Dropout Prevention Center (NDPC)

NDPC gathers, analyzes and disseminates information to individuals and groups involved in school dropout prevention efforts. NDPC's mission is to significantly reduce the dropout rate in schools by helping to develop public-private partnerships between schools, businesses, and communities to meet the needs of at-risk youth. NDPC publishes the quarterly National Dropout Prevention Newsletter, A Series of Solutions and Strategies serial, and numerous topical publications. It maintains the FOCUS database on dropout prevention. It also manages the National Dropout Prevention Network, a membership-based organization of over two thousand and five-hundred professionals involved in school dropout prevention efforts. The annual National Dropout Prevention Conference is a major activity of the network. jeb

COMPUTER-BASED INFORMATION NETWORKS /

Computer-based information networks provide instantaneous online communication, electronic bulletin boards, and database services. These networks are an efficient method of communicating with other school districts, agencies, clearinghouses, and institutions of higher education and keeping abreast of the latest legislation, programs, funding, resources, and other pertinent information concerning relevant issues in education.

ADVOCNET

The National Center for Research in Vocational Education (NCRVE), University of California at Berkeley, manages ADVOCNET, a national electronic mail system linking adult, vocational, and technical educators, administrators, and others. The service features message exchanges, bulletin boards, and teleconferencing. The network serves to inform the vocational community nationwide about meetings, workshops, conferences, new products, and other information of special interest.

(800) 762-4093
FAX: (510) 642-2124

ADVOCNET provides access to people and information throughout the nation in a variety of ways which include: communicating with other users effectively; sending messages to many users at once by using mail distribution lists; composing messages on your personal computer and uploading them, or composing messages online; sending data files or formatted documents, even spreadsheets and word processing documents, to other users; accessing news and information services and online database services, including VECM, RIVE, and ERIC; and posting and reading ADVOCNEWS bulletin board items on a variety of subjects. ADVOCNEWS is an electronic bulletin board for the exclusive use of ADVOCNET members. Announcements and requests can be posted in many categories, including meetings, jobs, special needs, new products, legislation, and requests.

All that is needed to access ADVOCNET is a personal computer or terminal, modem, phone line, and subscription through the vendor, BT North America Inc. Technical assistance is available toll free from NCRVE and from the vendor, BT North America, Inc. Online help, an interactive online tutorial, and printed documentation is also available to users. For subscription information, contact BT North America, Inc., 2560 N. First Street, P.O. Box 49019, San Jose, CA 95161-9019, (800) 872-7654. sck

Computerized Information System (NCBE/CIS)
NCBE/CIS focuses on the needs of practitioners or organizations working with the education of limited-English proficient (LEP) persons. NCBE now offers electronic access to its information system at no cost. The NCBE/CIS consists of searchable databases, a bulletin board, and electronic mail. The searchable databases include the NCBE Bibliographic Database (NCBE) which consists of bibliographic citations and abstracts to publications dealing with the education of linguistically diverse student populations in U.S. public schools; NCBE Resources Database (REDB) which profiles research centers, professional associations, advocacy groups, and other organizations involved in the education of, or the provision of services to LEP students; and the Publishers' Database (PUBS) which includes organizations that are involved in the publishing, distribution, or development of materials for use with language minority students. An electronic bulletin board highlights news from federal, state, and local education agencies, conference announcements, and other current information .

Anyone with access to a personal computer and modem can use NCBE/CIS. To obtain an NCBE User ID to access CIS, simply write or call NCBE. All users of NCBE/CIS will receive a new, updated User's Guide with complete directions and help. sck

SpecialNet

The world's largest computer-based information network for education professionals, SpecialNet consists of electronic mail, bulletin boards, and databases. It provides quick and easy communication from classroom teachers to administrators in county, state, and federal offices of education. More than forty national bulletin boards including Independent Living, Litigation, LRE, Program Eval, and Voced Transition are available along with over fifty active state bulletin boards. SpecialNet's databases consist of several types, including specialized databases such as Program Evaluation and topical databases which include archived information taken from many SpecialNet bulletin boards and stored so users can locate information on a specific topic. SpecialNet is available twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, through virtually any telephone in the United States and Canada, as well as seventy additional countries worldwide. sck

DATABASES

Databases, which are generally offered as separate online information retrieval services, provide a wealth of pertinent information regarding special needs populations to interested parties.

EdLINC

EdLINC is a national network offering free services to professionals in resource media, information, library, and service centers. The network is for individuals responsible for finding, recommending, and purchasing new materials, and providing current information on instructional materials and school products (e.g., tests, software, books, multimedia, computer and audiovisual equipment, school supplies). EdLINC is designed to help meet the needs of teachers, administrators, students, and allied educational professionals.

EdLINC provides up-to-date information through the EdLINC Database, a free electronic catalog information service that enables educators to find the most appropriate materials to match their needs quickly and easily. EdLINC also provides a monthly newsletter, a membership directory to encourage member interaction, and its national annual convention. The professional goal of EdLINC is to promote better education through better information. jeb

ERIC

The Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC), sponsored by the OERI, U.S. Department of Education, is primarily designed to provide users with ready access to English language literature dealing with education. It does so through products and services that include databases, abstract journals, microfiche, document reproduction, computer searches, and analyses and syntheses. ERIC maintains the world's largest education database that covers all aspects of education and is accessible in most university, state, and large city libraries in at least one of four formats (1) manual indexes, (2) microfiche collection, (3) online service, and (4) CD-ROM retrieval system. jeb

National Information Center for Educational Media (NICEM)

The NICEM database covers the entire spectrum of non-print media intended for use in the educational field from preschool to graduate and professional school levels and for vocational training. Librarians, media specialists, curriculum planners, educators, trainers, and researchers can select from thousands of programs available representing a variety of producers and distributors.

Subject areas that apply to learning are included in the database. Heavily covered subject areas include vocational and technical education, and guidance and counseling. Special education information is also available. NICEM continues to acquire and collate information from a number of sources, including producer and distributor catalogs for nonprint materials, the Library of Congress media centers, colleges, universities, and libraries.

Research in Vocational Education (RIVE)

RIVE is a specialized database covering ongoing and recently completed projects in the field of vocational education. It also indexes the resulting products and reports. Special emphasis is given to the research, personnel, and curriculum development activities funded under the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act.

(510) 642-3798
(800) 762-4093
FAX: (510) 642-2124

Researchers may avoid duplication of effort by searching RIVE before applying for federal or state funds. RIVE may be used to study trends in funding, such as amount or duration of study. It may also be of use to professionals in the field of vocational education for identifying new developments and projects.

RIVE includes descriptive abstracts of most project proposals. Projects in fields of vocational education are covered including adult education, basic skills education, bilingual vocational education, curriculum development, gifted and talented programs, job placement, personnel development, and rural education.

The database is available through BRS Information Technologies. Many larger libraries subscribe to BRS and conduct searches on request. NCRVE also conducts searches for clients. NCRVE works with state program improvement officers and the federal Office of Vocational and Adult Education to maintain the content of the database. BRS and NCRVE also provide technical support to database users. For subscription information, contact BRS Information Technologies, Inc., 8000 Westpark Drive, McLean, VA 22102, (800) 289-4277. sck

TASPP Computerized Information Base

TASPP has designed a computerized information base exclusively for practitioners, researchers, and policymakers regarding vocational education programs for special needs populations. Custom designed information searches are made available at no charge on topics such as transition, at-risk youth and adults, LEP students and immigrants, teen pregnancy, rural and urban education, and integrating vocational education and academics.

Entries contained in the base are as follows: reference materials including the most recent research reports, monographs, state reports, organizational initiatives program development manuals, journals, and newsletters; organizations, associations, and agencies; centers for educational information/services including curriculum centers, clearinghouses, computer based-information networks, and databases; names and addresses of contact persons in state and national agencies, associations, and organizations; and exemplary programs/practices identified by TASPP staff. sck

Vocational Education Curriculum Materials (VECM)

The VECM database is a comprehensive centralized computerized database of information on curriculum materials. Its development was the result of a cooperative effort by the six Curriculum Coordination Centers (CCCs) of the National Network for Curriculum Coordination in Vocational Technical Education (NNCCVTE) and NCRVE.

Only current vocational and technical curriculum materials that have national availability appear in VECM. About six thousand records of both print and nonprint materials (including about eleven hundred microcomputer courseware entries) are now in the database, and the number is continually increasing. An important recent emphasis has been on the entry of curriculum materials for special needs populations.

Each VECM entry includes the following information about the curriculum product title, date, sponsoring agency, developer, subject matter classification, educational level, intended user, student target population, description of the print or nonprint materials, copyright restrictions, and availability.

The database is available through BRS Information Technologies. Many larger libraries as well as the NNCCVTE subscribe to BRS and conduct searches on request. NCRVE also conducts searches for clients. The CCCs and NCRVE continue to build and maintain the VECM database. All vocational and technical educators are encouraged to contribute information about curriculum materials. For subscription information, contact BRS Information Technologies, Inc., 8000 Westpark Drive, McLean, VA 22102, (800) 289-4277. sck

EXEMPLARY VOCATIONAL SPECIAL NEEDS PROGRAMS

The Technical Assistance for Special Populations Program (TASPP) of the National Center for Research in Vocational Education, University of California at Berkeley, conducts an annual search for exemplary vocational education programs serving students with special needs. TASPP's evaluation process focuses on specific components which research has shown are characteristic of effective programs. Applications providing detailed program descriptions are evaluated for these components by leaders in the field of special needs vocational education. The following entries represent these programs.

Comprehensive Bilingual Vocational Education for Refugee Youth

Operated by the Catholic Charities of Richmond through a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, this program states the following goals: (1) reduce the dropout rate among at-risk, limited-English proficient (LEP) youth, (2) increase students' English language skills to the degree necessary for independent functioning in the United States, (3) provide students training in a vocational area in conjunction with employment acquisition/retention skills, and (4) increase self-esteem and goal-directed behavior among students involved in the program.

This Bilingual Vocational Education (BVE) two-year program includes a half day of intensive English as a second language instruction, a half day of vocational training with bilingual assistance, and three hours per week of training in job readiness and independent living skills. In its first year of operation, the program significantly decreased the dropout rate among LEP students in the two county school systems being served. Chesterfield County's LEP dropout rate decreased from thirty-five to zero percent. Henrico County's LEP dropout rate dropped from twenty to four percent. Preliminary results of an independent evaluation of the program by Virginia Commonwealth University show that ninety-six percent of students contacted who have completed the BVE program are either employed or continuing their education.

Learning Lab for Technology and Applied Sciences

The Learning Lab for Technology and Applied Sciences is the unique provider of academic support services for Santa Fe Community College vocational students. The Lab is also the heart of a network which draws together college and community resources to offer the entire range of support services necessary for students who are academically disadvantaged and those with limited English proficiency.

Identified as exemplary in 1990, the goal of the program is to develop student potential through a comprehensive system of outreach, assessment, advisement, and instruction. During the 1988-1989 academic year, the lab served 1,534 students with special needs, seventy-five percent of whom either graduated or continued their education.

The program strives to eliminate gaps between students' skills and the requirements of the vocational-technical programs. Upon entry into a vocational program, students' skills are assessed, a diagnosis made, and appropriate remediation initiated. The academic prescription, is tailored to individual needs and may include the development of reading, writing, mathematics, science, critical thinking, study and employment skills, and/or the development of language and cultural adaptation skills. Students are served in either individual or small-group instructional settings in a nurturing environment. jeb

Vocational Education Resource System (VERS)

Funded by the Career-Vocational Education Division of the California Department of Education, VERS is a comprehensive technical assistance and information referral system. VERS was identified as an exemplary state technical assistance and information referral service in 1991. VERS assists career-vocational teachers, counselors, and administrators in improving and expanding programs and services for special population students (disadvantaged, at-risk, disabled, or LEP). VERS provides technical assistance to educators in areas such as integration of vocational and academic education, program administration, instructional strategies, fiscal and accountability, and grantwriting. Regional workshops, inservice training, and telephone consultation to educators throughout California are also provided. VERS designs and utilizes a regional computer database and manages the Special Populations Library, offering audiovisual, textbooks, curriculum guides, reports and other publications for loan to educators, especially those working with special needs students. jeb

MODEL PROGRAMS

The Technical Assistance for Special Populations Program (TASPP) receives frequent requests for model programs serving special populations. This listing contains a selection of those models and/or practices designed to assist educational personnel to better serve students with limited English proficiency.

Bell Multicultural High School (BMHS)

BMHS, a fully accredited, secondary school with adult education, is dedicated to providing its students with academic, vocational, personal, and employment-related skills needed to enable them to participate equitably in American society. The students consist of limited-English proficient (LEP) immigrants/refugees and minority youth and adults. The five programs offered are (1) academic; (2) career, occupational, and technical training; (3) after-school dropout prevention; (4) adult and family education; and (5) a center for excellence in languages. Program components include instructional, counseling, and career development. Students are offered academic, career, vocational, remediation, and independent study courses including preparation for the GED exam and world-of-work training. sck

Business Technology Academies

A collaborative effort by Sequoia Union High School District and local businesses, the Business Technology Academies attempt to help youth who are educationally disadvantaged break the pattern of lower academic achievement, inadequate skills, and chronic unemployment. By forming partnerships with local businesses, the program attempts to meet basic academic and vocational training needs of limited-English proficient (LEP) and educationally disadvantaged youth at risk of becoming unemployed dropouts. The program also prepares these students for employment in local businesses.

The academies incorporate a curriculum relating academics with employability skills; smaller classes for individualized attention; counseling services; careful monitoring of student performance; career information through field trips, guest speakers, and a mentoring program; and job opportunities through paid summer employment and senior year work experience. This program will run until 1992. mcw

Coca-Cola Valued Youth Program

The Coca-Cola Valued Youth Program is an instructional program designed to reduce dropout rates among Hispanic LEP middle-school children who are at risk of leaving school. Developed by the Intercultural Development Research Association (IDRA) with support from Coca-Cola USA, this cross-age tutoring program is designed to meet the following objectives (1) reduce dropout rates, (2) enhance students' basic academic skills, (3) strengthen students' perception of self and school, (4) decrease student truancy, (5) reduce student disciplinary referrals, and (6) form school-home-community partnerships to increase the level of support available to students.

The program has recently been approved by the Program Effectiveness Panel of the U.S. Department of Education's National Diffusion Network. In 1988-1990, it was funded by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Bilingual and Minority Languages Affairs (OBEMLA), and in June 1990, the Coca-Cola Foundation funded a five-year grant to expand the program nationally. Schools in Texas, California, New York, and Florida will serve as replication sites. A multimedia training package will be available for other schools wishing to implement the program. mcw

Project M.A.I.N.E.

Project M.A.I.N.E. (Maine Assists Innovators in Nurturing Excellence) is a technical assistance and career awareness program designed to enable Portland's LEP students to improve their English language skills, establish sound career goals, and to pursue these goals whether they call for college education, vocational training at the regional vocational technical center, or high school courses leading to immediate employment upon graduation. The project develops training materials for use in conjunction with adoption of the program; conducts outreach activities to inform potential users about its purposes and about the availability of assistance from the project in its adoption elsewhere; assists others in adoption of the program by providing training and technical assistance to educational personnel in the preparation, implementation, and evaluation of the program at the replication site; and seeks to ensure and improve its own effectiveness by assessing its success in achieving its own objectives and by monitoring and evaluating the adoption of the program at its replication sites.

Student Transition and Retention Program (STAR)

This program originated as one of ten national model dropout prevention programs sponsored by the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Adult and Vocational Education. A basic component of STAR is vocational education, with all students completing a vocational course for the purpose of obtaining secure jobs with a future. In addition, STAR helps students to complete their high school studies. Program objectives include recruiting at-risk students; enrolling, advising, placing, and counseling; providing program outreach; enrolling students in a vocational training course; helping students to find employment; and assisting students in obtaining their high school diploma or GED. The majority of participants are not native English speakers, their first language being Spanish or Vietnamese. Mastery of English is a major program component. A major objective of STAR is to serve as a model for other areas for confronting the problem of high school dropouts. jeb

STATE VOCATIONAL AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION CURRICULUM CENTERS

The curriculum centers identified in this section generally act as research, referral, and resource centers by providing free services to the vocational educators and administrators of each state. The resource center's staff responds to requests in all vocational subject areas including agriculture, business/distributive education, health, home economics, special needs, cooperative education, industrial arts, plus the vocational education concerns of gender equity and guidance. Bilingual and Native American resources are also being added to the resource collection. Specific services available from each center vary, but generally include workshops in curriculum development and use, and the reprinting, production, and dissemination of curriculum and instructional materials.

OERI REGIONAL EDUCATIONAL LABORATORIES

Ten regional educational laboratories were established by the Office of Educational Research and Improvement (OERI), U.S. Department of Education to focus on school improvement throughout the United States. The labs conduct applied research, development, and technical assistance for educators, parents, and decisionmakers. The educational improvement mission of the labs is facilitated through five functions (1) working with other regional organizations to apply research and improve schools; (2) assisting state-level policymakers on the implications of education research and practice for policies and programs; (3) conducting applied research and developing materials, programs, and publications that support the mission of school and classroom improvement; (4) collaborating with other laboratories, research centers, and national associations to extend and enhance related research and development; and (5) developing effective internal management, governance, planning, and self-evaluation, as well as reviewing regional needs and developments.

Appalachia Educational Laboratory (AEL)

AEL serves as the regional educational lab for Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia. To address the goals toward the improvement of professional quality, curriculum and instruction, community support, and equal educational access for all students, the Lab operates the following eight projects: (1) Classroom Instruction program (teachers), (2) School Governance and Administration program (school administrators and school board members), (3) Colleges and Schools program (colleges for teacher education), (4) State Policy program (policymakers), (5) Information Services program (direct services to educators), (6) Community Liaison to Urban Education program (underrepresented groups), (7) Rural, Small Schools program (rural citizens and educators), and (8) Rural Excel program (with State Education Agency and Local Education Agency personnel).

(800) 344-6646 (in WV)
(800) 624-9120 (outside WV)
FAX: (304) 347-0487

Under the Community Liaison to Urban Education program, the concerns, interests, and special needs of underrepresented groups are assessed and addressed in AEL's program and activities.

The Rural, Small Schools program provides information about promising current practices and seeks to set up technology-based networks of local schools with college libraries. The Rural Excel program works with state and local educators to develop, test, and disseminate appropriate new learning materials and processes for rural schools. AEL also operates the ERIC Clearinghouse on Rural Education and Small Schools and publishes The Link newsletter. jeb

Far West Laboratory for Educational Research and Development (FWL)

FWL provides advanced learning and effectiveness for educators, parents, and policymakers through research, applications, and partnerships. Services include instructional development, staff training analysis and design, organizational design, evaluation, research, technical writing, and information dissemination. Products include program guidelines, handbooks, manuals, resource directories, information catalogs, audiovisual materials, curriculum models and materials, institutional designs, conference proceedings, and evaluation and research reports. FWL also participates in research, development, and technical assistance projects on such topics as essential skills, experience-based career education, staff development, and initiatives to improve opportunities for minority and female students. jeb

Mid-Continent Regional Educational Laboratory (McREL)

McREL serves as the regional educational laboratory for Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming. The mission of McREL is to create a community of support among those individuals and organizations interested in learning how to help schools meet the needs of an ever changing society. The key strategy McREL uses is to identify and encourage the use of knowledge that improves education. McREL activities include the dissemination of policy information, product development, networking, training, and technical assistance.

Examples of activities include studies of special populations (e.g., urban dropouts, students in small schools, and Native American and Hispanic youth) to identify potential educational problems; networks of people with common interests in urban schools, equity, and higher education; a state policy and trends database which provides basic information on education issues; and strategies for improving services to small, rural schools. McREL's Equity Center works to increase access to quality education for all students and disseminates information to increase awareness of equity issues and identify successful programs for reducing bias and stereotyping. Acting as a clearinghouse, the Equity Center links a computerized database on twenty major equity issues to potential users.

BUU

Publications include the McREL Update newsletter; Noteworthy, an annual magazine; Heartland, the newsletter of McREL's Equity Center; and Policy Notes, a bimonthly summary of issues relevant to educational policymakers. sck

North Central Regional Educational Laboratory (NCREL)

One of ten regional educational laboratories established by OERI, U.S. Department of Education, to focus on school improvement throughout the United States, NCREL designs its work to meet needs related to educational research and development and provides information and services to a region including the states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, and Wisconsin. Assessment of the needs of educators and policymakers in the region have revealed issues in the following three program areas: (1) improving curriculum and instruction to ensure that all elementary and secondary students acquire capabilities necessary for functioning in the twenty-first century; (2) enhancing the education professions to attract, develop, and reward excellence among classroom teachers, school administrators, and other education professionals; and (3) strengthening school partnerships to broaden participation in educational improvement efforts by parents, policymakers, and community leaders.

NCREL's activities work toward the improvement of education for students in elementary and secondary schools by networking specific groups of educators and policymakers, promoting conferences, and providing specific staff development information and assistance. Activities have addressed rural issues, school restructuring, reading improvement, educational improvement, literacy, policy study and analysis, at-risk students, and rural education. The Clipboard is the newsletter published for NCREL's constituency. sck

Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory (NWREL)

Serving Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, and Washington, NWREL conducts applied research and provides development and technical assistance to educators, parents, and decisionmakers designed to improve outcomes for children, youth, and adults. South Eastern Regional Vision for Education (SERVE)

The mission of SERVE is to provide leadership, support, and research to assist state and local efforts in improving educational outcomes in the Southeast region, especially for at-risk and rural students. SERVE represents a coalition of business leaders, governors, policymakers, and educators who are seeking systemic, lasting improvement in education. The states involved in the consortium are Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

SERVE proposes to address critical issues that are shared throughout the region, work as a leader and catalyst to promote systemic educational improvement, serve as a broker of exemplary practices and state-of-the-art research, and become an invaluable source of information for existing organizations working to promote educational improvement. To improve educational outcomes, especially for at-risk students, SERVE has scheduled the following five annual areas of emphasis: (Year 1) improve math, science, and computer education; (Year 2) provide safe, drug-free schools; (Year 3) increase the graduate rate; (Year 4) improve student achievement and citizenship; and (Year 5) expand adult literacy and lifelong learning.

Examples of research and development activities SERVE will conduct include developing and field-testing a rural school-business partnership model and network; developing site-based accountability models—local measures of effectiveness; studying the effects of incentive programs on reducing dropout rates and on improving school conduct, academic achievement, and attendance of at-risk students; and evaluating the impact of videocommunications and other telecommunications technology on rural school education. SERVE will conduct and disseminate topical research, technical assistance, and other Laboratory products via teleconferences, videotapes, satellite downlinks, public broadcasting, interactive videodisc technology, and through a network of rural education professionals. sck

Southwest Educational Development Laboratory (SEDL)

SEDL has identified a series of six goals: (1) promote effective home-school-community connections that foster success for at-risk students, (2) improve transition from early childhood education to elementary school, (3) promote leadership and facilitate change for education professionals, (4) ensure that state-level
