ABSTRACT

The handbook contains teacher evaluations of secondary social studies materials used in the Mt. Diablo Unified School District (MDUSD), Orinda, California. The Materials Testing Program of MDUSD is an effort to involve secondary teachers in the process of evaluating social studies materials in certain concept areas: conflict, social change, man's interdependence, power and authority, values, institutions, and self identity. Materials, prescreened first by the Diablo Valley Education Project and then by teachers, were field tested in classrooms. The evaluations on units, games, and multi-media which comprise the major portion of the handbook are edited versions drawn from the original teacher evaluations. Resources through which more information on materials can be obtained are listed. This publication has also been edited into 6 separate guides, any one of which is free; more than one costs $.25. The individual titles are Change, Conflict, Identity, Interdependence, Power and Authority, and Values, all are subtitled Guides to Selected Curriculum Materials on Interdependence, Conflict, and Change: Teacher Comments on Classroom Use and Implementation. INTRODUCTION

MATERIALS TESTING PROGRAM

The Diablo Valley Education Project has worked the last several years in concert with the Mt. Diablo Unified School District to provide a vigorous inservice program for the secondary social studies staff to highlight concerns about conflict, social change, and interdependence.

The program has had three emphases during this time. The earliest phase was to sponsor teacher teams to construct curriculum units. Examples of these early units that are available for classroom use are Environmental Issues by Bruce Borad and Dick Fagerstrom; Military Obligation and the Individual by Steve Bischoff, Ron Clark, Bob Daugherty, Ted McKinnon, and Jennie Nevis; and Conflict Spiral by George Larson and Nelson Shelton.

A second, later focus was the presentation of workshops in the spring of 1972 dealing with materials and techniques that would aid teachers in presenting concepts such as conflict, power, and authority. These workshops indicated the need for the staff to examine new materials in a more organized fashion that would provide teachers with a "hands on" experience with these materials.

Consequently, the 1972-73 program was built to meet the curriculum testing need and evolved into the Materials Testing program. This program involved many teachers from across the school district and has been the most successful offering of the DVEP.

DVEP/MDUSD Materials Testing Program

The Materials Testing Program is an effort of the Mt. Diablo Unified School District and the Diablo Valley Education Project to involve secondary teachers in the process of evaluating social studies materials in certain concept areas: conflict (from interpersonal to international), social change, man's interdependence, power and authority, values and the valuing process, institutions, and self-identity. Also the program makes materials available to District personnel with the hope that teachers can learn of valuable new materials and will be able to benefit from the evaluators' experience in using them. Participants in the program have already found the evaluation helpful in making decisions about purchases for the future; we hope that in formal circulation they will be an even more valuable guide.

Overview of the 1972-73 Program

Over 70 teachers (40 intermediate and 31 high school), working in teams in every MDUSD secondary school except the continuation schools, have been involved in testing materials. (See list of participants on the following pages.) Four "site" schools participated more extensively in the program than the others: Loma Vista and Pine Hollow Intermediate Schools, and Clayton Valley and Pacifica High Schools. Though participants put most emphasis this year on evaluating some 39 curriculum units, they also tested 8 games and 5 multi-media kits.

Several items need further testing, either because teaching time was too short to provide a comprehensive try-out or because too few evaluations were obtained to give a substantive recommendation. There will be an opportunity in the fall of 1973 to test these materials further.

Continuation of the Program

Our 1972-73 experience has shown that a materials testing program can offer real rewards in terms of teacher identification, and testing of social studies materials according to criteria agreed-upon by District department chairmen:

- (1) Improvement of District social studies coordination of materials purchases,
- (2) strengthened teacher evaluation skills, and
- (3) departmental cooperation arising from the joint effort.

The momentum created by this year's program demonstrates that teacher evaluations do get results. For example, several supplementary film and filmstrip resources previewed by participants in connection with curriculum units have been purchased by the District and County media centers as a result of teacher recommendations.

The Mt. Diablo District will continue the Materials Testing Program in 1973-74 as a service to teachers, retaining the key steps involved in such a program:

- (1) teachers' choice of materials at inservice workshops,
- (2) preparation for teaching materials with the assistance of program staff,
- (3) testing, using program-loaned materials,
- (4) evaluation in written and oral form,
- (5) pooling and dissemination of evaluative information by program staff.

Because a major effort was made during 1972-73 to get caught up with available social studies material, it will be possible to maintain the Materials Testing Program with a smaller budget allocation in the coming year.

CAUTIONARY NOTE

The evaluation process that led to the production of this book is a novel one. Unlike other evaluation schemes which depend upon the judgments of "outside experts," this process depended upon the decisions of teachers who field tested the materials in their classrooms. There are advantages and disadvantages to this process of teacher evaluation which should be weighed by the reader of this book. To aid this analysis, several facts about the DVEP/MDUSD evaluation process should be known.

1. The materials offered to the teachers in the MDUSD were pre-screened by the Diablo Valley Education Project staff. Many materials were rejected as questionable or unsatisfactory and were never shown to teachers. Consequently, the materials evaluated in this book are not a representative cross-section of what is available in the social studies field.
2. These selected materials were in turn selected by teachers who felt the materials would be stimulating and useful in their classrooms. In other words, the testing teachers were already biased in favor of the materials.
3. The sample of testing teachers for most materials was quite small as the priority for the program was placed on involving many teachers with many materials rather than on having a large number of teachers testing only a few materials. One of the most useful outcomes, beyond the favorable recommendations, was the detailing by individual teachers of ways in which they could tailor materials to meet their own classroom strengths and needs.
4. The evaluations presented in this book are edited versions drawn from the original teacher evaluations. The DVEP editorial staff tried hard to capture testing teachers' agreements and disagreements. It was apparent quite early in the process that we could not include every individual teacher evaluation. If we had, this book would have been three times larger than it is in its present form. The individual teacher evaluations are on file at the DVEP office for anyone who wants to follow up an edited evaluation in this book.

How To Use This Book

STEP 1

Select an appropriate index, found on the pages immediately following:

- (A) By Key Concept
- (B) By Topic or Process
- (C) By Suggested Course Placement

STEP 2

Find interesting titles in the proper evaluation section:

- (A) Units
- (B) Games*
- (C) Media

STEP 3

Acquire more information on promising materials from one or more of the following resources:

- (A) People--Contact the testing teachers who are listed on the Evaluations and Staff Reports.
- (B) Files--Copies of teacher guides and student texts are on file in two locations: MDUSD Professional Library, 1936 Carlotta Drive, Concord and the DVEP office, 50 Vashell Way, Suite 300, Orinda.
- (C) Original teacher evaluations--Appearing in this book are composite evaluations summarized from several teacher evaluations. If you want to see an original evaluation, consult the files at the DVEP office. Teachers often submitted tests and assignments that are not included in the edited version of their evaluations.

Key Concept Power and authority, change

Authors Mehlinger and Patrick

Publisher Ginn and Co.

Availability Ginn and Co.
2550 Hanover
Palo Alto, California 94304

Cost Student book $2.60 per volume; Teacher's guide $4.20

Teaching time Each volume requires a semester

Level 12th grade

Activities Readings, discussions, simulations, role plays, assignments

Testing teachers Bruce Borad, College Park High, 10th to 12th grade

Comments This is a very ambitious text book as it attempts to break the stereotypical ways in which the typical government course is presented. Rather than cataloging the various institutions and analyzing certain issues that arise from those institutions, Mehlinger and Patrick look at government both constitutionally and extra-constitutionally through the use of power (the authors use the term "influence" rather than "power"). Some of this material looked good to the testing teacher and some not; consequently this material needs more evaluation before a recommendation can be made.

I. Basic description and testing circumstances

A. Testing teachers and dates:

Bruce Borad, College Park High, 11th grade, 28 students, one semester, spring, 1973.

B. Portion taught: All X Part _____

C. Focusing concept: The role and function of official and unofficial political decision-makers.

D. Subconcepts: Decision-makers are legislative, administrative, judicial, mass media, political parties, lobbyists.

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: Must carefully review each lesson.

B. Supplementary materials needed:

A set of accompanying materials from the publisher used and tested by Bruce Borad:

worksheets	fair
tests	fair
films	very good
overhead transparencies	fair to poor
simulation games	very poor
The Game of Napoli

III. Motivation

A. The evaluating teacher found "the material much more self-motivating than most of the other material available in the field." (B.B.)

B. Good use of pictures in the text.

IV. Abilities required

A. Reading level: very high, 11th or 12th grade, at least.

Activities Dilemma situations for class discussion

Testing Teachers Jim Adams, Ygnacio Valley High, 9th and 10th grades

Comments The book contains 53 dilemma situations for student choice-making. The dilemmas tend to get more literature-oriented the further you get into the book. However, the social studies teacher should not be put off, because some of the stories are quite appropriate, such as an excerpt from Earth Abides by George Stewart. The book is quite attractive with numerous cartoons reprinted from the popular media.

I. Basic description and testing circumstances

A. Testing teachers and dates:

Jim Adams, Ygnacio Valley High, 9th and 10th grades, 34 students, 4 weeks and 2 days (not taught daily, however), March-April, 1973.

B. Portion taught: All _____ Part X

pgs. 91, 96, 101, 106, 103, 111, 114, 117, 122, 124, 243.

C. Focusing concept: Values: love, marriage

D. Subconcepts: sex and morality, roles, loyalty, honesty, wealth, greed, infidelity, responsibility, divorce.

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: approximately 6 hours.

B. Supplementary materials needed: This material was used as a supplement to the course text Patterns of Life: Human Growth and Development. Various dittoed materials.

III. Motivation

A. The material was self-motivating and did not require continual motivating activities by the teacher.

B. "Some change in use of the material might be desirable, ie. the role-playing of situations described and small group improvisations of same. This is a break in the discussion-writing techniques used in the book." (J.A.)

Testing Teachers Walt Perry, Oak Grove Intermediate, 8th grade

Comments This appears to be an excellent unit for introducing the basic principles of democratic government in a way that helps students to experience these principles at work rather than treating them abstractly. Unit I relates well to students' own experience, as it teaches various forms of government; whereas Unit II on functions of conflict relies mostly on historical case studies to teach the functions conflict performs.

Suggest supplementing the readings and discussion with films and simulations. Choose carefully the questions to be focussed on. A great many are provided and students tire of too many chores in relation to each reading.

B. Portion taught: All _____ Part X

Pages 1 - 60. Most of Unit I, part of Unit II and none of Unit III.

C. Focusing concept: The underlying principles of the U. S. Government, how they operate and how they affect U. S. citizens and leaders. The functioning of the U. S. political system.

D. Subconcepts: Conflict: its institutionalization, functions, inevitability, sources, limits, resolution. Functions of governmental institutions. Differences between authoritarian and democratic political systems.

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: 10 hours

B. Supplementary material needed:

film: Due Process of Law Denied, available from CCC-EMS.

simulation game: The Road Game, available from DVEP.

simulation: Constitutional Convention, The Game of Negotiation, available from DVEP.

III. Motivation

A. The testing teacher found this material to be self-motivating and not requiring continual motivating activities by the teacher.

B. Unit I "grabbers": The readings themselves contained funny names and humorous statements which intrigued many (especially the poorer readers) and turned off a few.

Unit II: the factual primary sources appealed to all, but especially to the brighter students.

C. "As long as the teacher is able to be accepting of student responses that are divergent at times, self-motivation seems high." (W.P.)

John Millar, Pacifica High, 9th grade
Ron Remington, Pacifica High, 9th grade.
Nelson Shelton, Pleasant Hill High, 12th grade.
Ernie Spencer, Clayton Valley High, 12th grade.

Comments This is a difficult unit dealing with complex ideas in a fairly rigorous manner. It requires much reading, assumes some prior background in European history and Russo-American relations. It is well worked out, however, and with teacher provided motivators such as films, simulations and filmstrips (some of which are difficult to obtain), this can be a rewarding unit to teach and result in student understanding of the nature of international conflict and how such conflict need not inevitably lead to war.

1. Order supplementary films and filmstrips well in advance. They are essential to the success of the unit.
2. Get help from experienced teachers in presenting Gas Station, Chicken, and the Road Game as written instructions for these are difficult to follow.
3. Provide additional background or cut down the readings, depending on background of your class.

Comments This book presents readings, each expressing a different life style. The readings are diverse and useful; for example, "The Christian's Commandments" juxtaposed to "An Atheist's Values". The reading is at times difficult, so probably this unit should be reserved for seniors or an exceptionally mature class.

B. Portion taught: All _____ Part X

Students chose readings and teacher made certain requirements.

C. Focusing concept: Various life styles, values, beliefs of people

D. Subconcepts: Everyone will come to a point in life when he "decides" on or "drifts into" his own life style. Many people adapt variations or combinations of life philosophies.

II. Preparation

Activities Readings, inquiry and inductive exercises, debate.

Testing Teachers Ron Clark, Linda Gregoriev, Barbara Stromberg, Clayton Valley High, 9th grade.
Suzette Ferguson, El Dorado Intermediate, 7th & 8th grades.

Comments This unit attempts to take the student through the process and procedure of American criminal law. It has readings interspersed by short case studies or vignettes. Testing teachers felt that if a teacher were to go directly through this material, it would not be too successful for maintaining class interest. However, if a teacher were to add "grabber" activities, the book would serve as an excellent informational base. There is only one teacher's guide to the series, and this guide is generally not too helpful in suggesting extra or alternative activities. The last part of the book is rather inadequate in dealing with "America's crime problem".

Testing Teachers Ken Stierna, Oak Grove Intermediate, 7th grade.
Jack Kennett, Clayton Valley High, 11th grade.

Comments This pamphlet is designed for supplementary use to a course in development, world history, or world politics. It contains a series of charts, diagrams and data which could be inserted into the above courses. The sections are as follows:

1. International and National Violence
2. The Cost of Arms
3. Population Growth
4. Pollution and Depletion of Natural Resources
5. The Rich-Poor Nation Gap
6. Rapidity of Change
7. International Cooperation
8. Interrelationship of Problems and the Future

A teacher would be well served to have a class set in his classroom or make a series of transparencies for his overhead to draw upon whenever a need arose. Caution: Don't attempt to use this as a prime text for the students.

Recommendations Recommended unit: 9th and 12th grades

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

- I. Basic description and testing circumstances
- A. Testing teachers and dates:
Jack Kennett, Clayton Valley High, 11th grade, 34 students, several days, February, 1973.
Ken Stierna, Oak Grove Intermediate, 7th grade, 80 students, 2-4 class periods, December, 1972.
- B. Portion taught: All _____ Part X
Jack Kennett: pgs. 1 - 12
Ken Stierna: 7/8 of the book
- C. Focusing concept: Importance of conflict resolution
- D. Subconcepts: violence, population growth, resource depletion, change, rich-poor gap, arms and strategies for peace, militarism.
- II. Preparation
- A. Time required, suggestions: "Perhaps 2 hours extra to include material in proper context for introduction to conflict unit." (J.K.)
- B. Supplementary material needed: Age of Megaton filmstrip kit-DVEP, Limits of War-AEP unit book, Violent Conflict in American Society by Ightzin, Chicken and Gas Station simulation games-DVEP.
- III. Motivation
- A. For better students, the material is self-motivating, but generally it requires continual motivating activities by the teacher.
- B. "This material will only aid in motivation if used in conjunction with other types of material relating directly to the concepts you are working on. Lends itself well to inquiry." (J.K.)

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

- V. Goals and objectives
- A. "To provide up-to-date information bearing on present day conflict sources." (J.K.)
 - B. "To enable students to list reasons for conflict resolution and list and explain sources of conflict." (J.K.)
 - C. "To create an interest in doing something about preventing crises like these." (K.S.)
- VI. Evaluation of student performance
None
- VII. Teacher recommendations
- A. The evaluating teachers felt that the material held interest for better students, that it did not provide adequate teacher guidance (The teacher's approach is important.), and that it developed concepts somewhat clearly. Too abstract for 7th grade level, however.
 - B. The teachers would teach it again, being cautious not to over-use. "Be selective in choosing pages which provide data relating directly to your objectives." (J.K.)
 - C. "Let students be more selective and follow their interests. Have students write a paper about their pessimism or optimism about the future. Include involving exercises such as role-playing." (K.S.)

Comments	Teachers saw this unit as excellent material for teaching the variety of aggressive behaviors man is capable of, their relationship with meeting human needs and some alternative behaviors which people can use in solving frustrating situations. There was some initial negative reaction from parents because they thought their students were in a history class bringing home psychology and sociology problems, but this criticism was answered and the students greatly enjoyed the unit. There will eventually be a problem as to where this book should be introduced, as all five sections of it cannot be taught during the same year. Sections I and II might be taught in 7th grade, III and IV in 8th grade, and V in 9th grade if it could be articulated.

STAFF REPORT

The style of the unit is such that it needs to be broken up at certain points and other kinds of activities done.

Supplemental materials required are a problem because they are not readily available. Neither are some of the audio-visual required.

Recommendations

Recommended unit, Parts I and II, 7th grade

This excellent book on aggression requires that the first section be done first and could probably be done at 7th, 8th or 9th grade. Thought needs to be given as to the sequencing and grade level placement if this is to be adopted throughout the district.

Ron Remington, Pacifica High, 9th - 10th grades, one class, two months, February - March 1973.
Peter Roberts, Foothill Intermediate, 7th - 8th grades, one class, two months, March - April 1973.
 - B. Portion taught: All _____ Parts _____
The evaluating teachers varied.
 - C. Focusing concept: Understanding human needs, feelings, frustrations and ways to direct behavior away from negative aggressive action toward positive, constructive action.
 - D. Subconcepts:

Aggressive behavior is a universal phenomenon. Frustrations are also universal; they often lead to a negative display of aggressive behavior. Many ways in which people act to reduce frustrations are means of hiding a problem. Some solutions to frustrating situations bring some immediate relief but have negative long-range effects. There is always a variety of ways to deal with frustration. (H.H.)
- II. Preparation
 - A. Time required, suggestions:

Inservice preparation plus one hour per day. Much time spent finding supplementary readings and materials.
 - B. Supplementary materials needed:

Classroom sets: Coping, Who Am I?, Encounters, Guiding Our Development, Maturity: Growing up Strong
Filmstrips: Let's Talk About Flying off the Handle
Films: Mr. Finley's Feelings, Eye of the Beholder
Game: Generation Gap, available at DVEP
- III. Motivation
 - A. "A Problem for NASA" simulation is a must.
 - B. Role-playing exercises were very successful. Students enjoyed solving problems in this way.
 - C. Working in groups and holding class discussion were more successful than individual exercises.

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

- D. "There was a great deal of interest in the songs that were presented for interpretation and discussion. The discovery of one's own self and feelings served as the number one 'grabber' throughout the units and kept the learner interested." (R.R.)
- E. "I found that using the short stories as a means of introducing the basic concepts rather than as a follow-up was extremely valuable for students who get easily bored with theoretical discussions." (H.H.)

Cost Student readings $1.65; 'map' game $.95

Teaching Time 4 - 7 weeks

Level 11 - 12

Activities Readings, charts, graphs, discussions, role-playing, projects.

Testing Teachers Suzi Hunnell and Joan MacLellan, Foothill Intermediate, 7th grade.

Comments Both testing teachers agreed that the reading level was too advanced for their 7th grade classes. (It seemed to be about 11th - 12th grade.) The readings themselves appear to be truly representative of 'opposing viewpoints'. The four ecological controversies raised are 1) Population Controversy (authors include Paul Ehrlich and Pope Paul) 2) Nuclear Radiation Controversy (Seaborg) 3) Air Pollution Controversy 4) Religious, Political and Economic Consequences of the Ecology Controversy.

What makes these books atypical is the 'map' games. Each game supports a group of 5-7 students in a decision-making process about the readings. These games could be used after using other ecology materials, or perhaps a teacher's home-brewed unit. The game accompanying the 'Ecology Controversy' is 'Facing the Ecology Crisis.'

Comments This unit has been authored by local teachers. It is a very ambitious undertaking because if it is used in its entirety, it could become a full semester course. The unit consists of four sub-units, which are as follows:
Unit A. Interdependence of Man and His Environment. Unit B. In Conflict (various views as to how man should use his environment). Unit C. Adjudication as a Method of Conflict Resolution (a mock court trial about Disney and Mineral King). Unit D. The Creation of International Law (a simulation of a conference about the use of the seabed).

Comments This is a U.S. history course with a difference. It approaches our history with a focus on the evolutionary growth of power for the individual from the time of being subject to the King to the time of being citizen in the Federal Constitution. Many "grabbers" are incorporated, such as role playing a town meeting or simulating early trade in the Empire Game. The testing teachers were most enthusiastic about these materials, but all noted certain difficulties with the readings, which are often original source materials. Because of the fresh insights into our history, the teachers felt that the readings were not a serious obstacle to widespread use of the series.

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

I. Basic description and testing circumstances

A. Testing teachers and dates:

Shella Abdallah, Riverview Intermediate, 8th grade, 70 students,
3 1/2 months, spring, 1973.

Roberta Hatlestad, Loma Vista Intermediate, 8th grade, 115 students, 13 weeks, December 1972 - February 1973.

Ron Redding, Loma Vista Intermediate, 8th grade, 115 students, 13 weeks, December 1972 - February 1973.

Brenda McNeely, Pine Hollow Intermediate, 8th grade, 70 students,
2 months, spring, 1973.

B. Portion taught: All _____ Part _____

Shella Abdallah: Emergence of the American, Parts 1, 2, 3
We the People, first half, pages 7 - 31.

Roberta Hatlestad and Ron Redding: Emergence of the American and Making of the American Revolution

C. Focusing concept: Pertains to the development of the American nation and the history of Anglo-American political development. Emphasis on the uniqueness of the American experience.

D. Subconcepts:

- . The American as a political animal, emerging from the Englishman.
- . The development of the democratic system in America, its first failings, its struggles and its ultimate acceptance by the American people.
- . How a group of people adapts and survives in an unfamiliar environment.
- . The necessity of laws and rules in an unorganized society.
- . Methods and escalation of protest in an unfavorable environment.

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: approximately an hour daily

B. Supplementary materials needed:

Synopsis of American History

The Stamp Act Crisis: Prologue to Revolution

"Good films available from Contra Costa County EMS on the Pilgrims, life in colonial America and the depression. There seem to be few supplementary materials available on the problems faced by very early colonists in terms of power structures or division of the land. There is a big gap between the period of early Pilgrims and the 18th Century colonial life." (S.A.)

III. Motivation

- A. The material was somewhat self-motivating, but the readings could become tedious.
- B. Special techniques and "grabbers" in the unit:
 - Sudbury Town Meeting
 - The Game of Empire
 - worksheet--What Happened at Lexington, April 19, 1775?
 - record--The Dream and the Reality
 - activity--Frank Duncan
- C. The wood cut prints and photographs added a great deal to the presentation of this unit.
- D. High reading level resulted in some student frustration.
- E. In some sections, (first part of the Emergence of the American, Part 3, for example), the teacher must do a great deal of filling in and explaining.

IV. Abilities required

V. Goals and objectives

- A. "Present concepts in such a way that helps students think historically and politically about the origins and the nature of their own political system." (S.A.)
- B. "Examining differing ideologies of incentives for settling a new world, how the disaffected in a society find a voice, why coercion is applied by a state against a subordinate group within it, the nature of development of a democracy, and the necessity of alternative behaviors." (R.H., R.R.)
- C. "Provide students with an opportunity to examine primary sources and make their own judgments based on evidence." (S.A.)
- D. "Maximize student involvement. Set up a situation in which there is student interaction and participation and minimum teacher presentation." (S.A.)
- E. Attempt to show students that history is one person's interpretation of what has happened in the past and that they, too, are capable of making an intelligent interpretation of history. A real effort to involve students in decision-making processes. (S.A.)

VII. Teacher recommendations

- A. Except for the real disadvantage of the high reading level which sometimes hindered the attainment of the goals and objectives, the materials held high student interest, provided adequate teacher guidance and developed concepts clearly.
- B. Teachers would use these materials again but would provide more background resources and role-play and listening activities.
- C. Try to break up the readings with active exercises.
- D. "Introduce new concepts and continually reinforce materials previously covered. I see this unit as a continuum, each part is very important to the series." (S.A.)
- E. "Allow time between units for break. Weekly check of comprehension of material." (R.H., R.R.)
- F. "I would try this unit again at the beginning of the year to allow more time. Beautiful for a complete comprehension of the development of American democracy." (R.H., R.R.)

Activities Readings, questionnaires, role playing, surveys, discussion

Testing teachers Dewitt Glasgow, Irvington High, 10th grade, (Fremont Unified District).
Jack Hubbs, Brenda McNeely, Marvin Tauber, Pine Hollow Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades.

Comments

- (1) This booklet got a very mixed reaction from the testing teachers. They both liked and disliked this unit.
- (2) Some activities went well in the classroom and others died a terrible death.
- (3) The reading is quite difficult for the age groups in this testing bloc.
- (4) Teachers felt that kids particularly in suburbia need to break their own stereotyped thinking. It is too bad that this booklet didn't always do this.

Recommendations

- (1) Teachers select only some of the activities from the booklet, ones in which they feel comfortable.
- (2) That teachers who do not have a background in statistics avoid several activities.

Recommended unit: placement 12th grade.

- C. Focusing concept: Stereotypes
- D. Subconcepts:
(1) Stereotypes distort our perception of reality.
(2) Selective perception acts as a filter in our minds.
(3) Stereotypes are difficult to change.
- II. Preparation
- A. Time required, suggestions: "2 hours before each lesson." (B.Mc)
"1 hour before each lesson." (J.H., M.T.)
- B. Supplementary materials needed:
Teachers evaluating this material used:
"Man: A Cross-Cultural Approach" (fs)
"Joshua" (film)
"Eye of the Beholder" (film)
- III. Motivation
- A. The evaluating teachers agree that the material was not self-motivating and required continual motivating activities by the teacher.
- B. "These kids are so removed from other races, it's a difficult subject to interest them in. They do not have set stereotypes yet, though -- just vague generalities." (B.Mc)
"Isolated cultural environment of suburbia leaves little focused stereotyping at this age level. Very vague generalization." (J.H., M.T.)

Comments This appears to be another excellent unit book from the Concepts and Inquiry Series (there are 12 units in all). The series was supposedly designed for the 5th through 7th grades but appears to be more appropriate for the 7th through 9th grades. Students are introduced to concepts in the Concepts and Inquiry Series through the use of the phrase "controlling ideas." The controlling ideas presented in Interaction of Cultures are imperialism, culture contact, and nationalism. The content covered deals both with Chinese Imperialism under the Manchus and with Western Imperialism in many sections of the globe.

John Millar, Pacifica High, 10th grade
Ron Remington, Pacifica High, 9th grade
Katy Muus, Helen Murphy, Marj Powell, Loma Vista Intermediate,
7th grade
Ruby Wilhite, Riverview Intermediate, 8th grade.

Comments All testing teachers found this to be an excellent unit on law, rights and responsibilities, the court system and the human changing nature of law. It maintained interest from 7th to 10th grade as well or better than most other materials used by these teachers. It provided a sound framework for both individualized classes and ones taught as a group. It helped students to relate questions of law and authority directly to their own lives. It was especially useful to students who had had unpleasant encounters with the law and police already.

Recommendations

1. Use this unit to teach about law especially with students of low reading ability, but in no way limit to them.
2. Supplement the unit with other media and activities noted in the teachers' evaluation.
3. Precede the unit with activities showing what society is like without law or authority and/or with information on the Constitution as a basis for local law.

Comments The student materials present the concept of life cycle through the cultures of four peoples: the Tiv, Balkan peasants, traditional Chinese and Americans. A complicating factor for students is that the book moves from culture to culture as each step of the life cycles is treated. The material is still in pre-commercial publication form and still is a bit rough.

The teacher's book is not meant to serve as a day-by-day aid to the classroom. Rather, it is a parallel course for teachers on the concepts.

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

- . Have your own goals clearly in mind.
- . Develop some group and class activities to add interest and create motivation.
- . Be prepared that students get confused switching from one culture to another.
- . Decide how you are going to deal with the material on China since it describes traditional, not modern Chinese culture." (S.C.)

Use as a unit for 9th grade culture-anthropology course.

The evaluating teacher would use this material again, in parts.

Testing Teachers Carol Gray, Barbara Williams and Helen Murphy
Loma Vista Intermediate, 7th grade

Comments This unit, Loyalties, deals with problems, issues and values questions that are necessary for adolescents to confront. The book investigates the nature of loyalty itself and then considers the particular problems of loyalties to family, to friends, to ethnic group and finally to country. The reading level is low (4th to 6th) but the tone is not condescending. The testing teachers commented on the high interest level of their students. For teachers who use role-playing, there are many situations presented that lend themselves to role-playing.

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

- I. basic description and testing circumstances
 - A. Testing teachers and dates:

Carol Gray, Loma Vista Intermediate, 7th grade, 60 students (2 classes),
4 weeks, January, 1973.
Helen Murphy, Loma Vista Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades, 30-35 students,
4 weeks, January, 1973.
Barbara Williams, Loma Vista Intermediate, 7th grade, 30-35 students, 4-5
weeks, January, 1973.
 - B. Portion taught: All X Part _____
 - C. Focusing concept: Loyalties are important to our lives and to our society, are expressed in various ways, and are sometimes in conflict with each other.
 - D. Subconcepts: Different loyalties (family, friends, country, ethnic group) and the conflicts they can create. Symbols for loyalty. Need for loyalty.
Constructive and destructive loyalties.

- II. Preparation
 - A. Time required, suggestions: Two hours or so at the beginning of the unit and 15-30 minutes daily thereafter.

 - B. Supplementary materials needed:
 1. Films: (available at CCC-EMS)
Boundary Lines, #2039
The Ha. - Is This War Necessary?, #6657
A Time Out of War, #6606
Is It Always Right to Be Right?, #1269-2
Note: "All are excellent films." (C.G.)
 2. Teacher needs to make a few dittoes of logbook activities.
 3. Students need a folder or composition book to write logbook so as not to use the disposables.

- III. Motivation
 - A. This material was very self-motivating, and the students responded to almost all the readings and activities.
 - B. "The idea of using the logbook as an ungraded project, one where students could freely express their opinions without being judged, worked very well." (C.G.)
 - C. "Most techniques suggested in the guide worked well. Two that were especially successful were the Hunters and the Bear skit (p. 18) and the preparation for
'Breaking the Ranks' (p. 39)." (C.G.)
 - D. Interest was very high for the cartoons. "Made starting class discussion easy and set an atmosphere conducive to further discussions throughout the unit." (C.G.)
 - E. Skits and plays generally very motivating and involving for students.

Testing Teachers Nancy Piedmonte, El Dorado Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades

Comments Making Value Judgments exposes students to the nature of values and the steps to decision-making. Students make choices from several alternatives and then consider the possible consequences of each choice. The testing teacher reported high involvement of her students, but also said she tailored some of the book to be more appropriate for 7th and 8th grade students. The book did provide a vehicle for the pressures and expectations of individuals fulfilling certain roles. There are good opportunities for role reversal activities.

Comments MACOS is a well-conceived, intricate curriculum package. The central question that is raised is 'What makes man human?' To teach MACOS, a teacher really needs to identify the point of view of this curriculum as it will call upon certain types of teacher behaviors. It is strongly urged that interested teachers join an introductory workshop designed on this course (contact Bob Watanabe of the County Dept. of Education).

A. Testing teachers and dates:

Sharon Vogt, El Dorado Intermediate, 7th-8th grades, 30 students, 9 weeks to a year, February-May, 1973.

B. Portion taught: All X Part

C. Focusing concept: The following behaviors make man human: 1) his ability to communicate, 2) his ability to cope with change, and 3) his ability to make judgments shaped by the culture in which he lives.

D. Subconcepts:

- . "The study of the life cycle exposes learning as a principal activity of man.
- . Man's dependency on learning allows for an immense range of adaptive behavior, as evidenced by the differences between cultures and the possibility of rapid changes within a culture.
- . The participation of parents in the development of the young is more complex in man than in any other animal species." (S.V.)

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: Teacher should take workshop before the course and plan to spend one hour per day minimum preparation.

B. Supplementary materials needed:

Activities Inquiry-oriented discussion stimulated by pictures, some graphs, charts, and tables.

Teaching teachers Susan Couch at College Park High and Rita Zwerdling at Valley View Intermediate

Comments The book has a highly stimulating format and easy vocabulary level, but the concepts of stereotyping, perception, and values are difficult. Student reaction to and understanding of behavioral psychology varied considerably in the cases of the two testing teachers. The book's most successful feature is its pictures, which have great potential for inquiry lessons. At its best, the unit does help give students an understanding of attitudes, perception, and stereotyping, prejudice and advertising techniques, and can help bring about positive attitudinal changes.

Recommendations (1) "Read the entire unit and guide thoroughly and write your objectives in behavioral terms. Decide what material relates directly to your objectives and exclude the rest; students get bogged down in the details." (SC)
(2) "Give special emphasis to the pictures." Use pre and post-unit attitude survey. (RZ)

Comments This unit is from a very popular series of titles designed for use in 7th and 8th grade social studies. Each unit is keyed to a particular social science discipline. Man in Culture is, of course, based on anthropological concepts.
Testing teachers felt very differently about the classroom use of this book. Some teachers were laudatory about some of the inquiry lessons, while others reported dismal failures on the same lessons. The most serious complaint about the book has been that "grabbers" are utilized without sufficient followup to really ensure student internalization of the main ideas. The books themselves are attractive and well worth the examining.

Comments This is the ecology oriented book from the series Concepts and Values. The teacher's guide suggests many alternative assignments for students to pursue and it also suggests the way in which the teacher may lead the discussion. The book is divided into two conceptual halves. The first, 'Patterns of Habitat', shows how man's culture affects the way a people use their physical environment. The second, 'Patterns of Balance', demonstrates to the student the potential trade off between convenience and environmental control.

Testing Teachers Jackle Woodruff and Marilyn Garvey, Clayton Valley High School

Comments The teachers had taught this unit last year and had found it difficult to teach. It was easier the second time through, but they found a new focus was required to teach this unit:

1. The emphasis on the details of the workings of the draft, emphasized in the early part of the unit, no longer seemed as relevant to the students.
2. The national choice as to what shape our military defense posture should take became the important part of their classroom discussion.

Recommendations Military Obligation and the Individual probably should not be used in its present entirety. If a teacher wanted to raise the question of a volunteer army, or of universal military training, then this unit book could be used effectively by omitting the opening sub-unit. A class set of materials on the amnesty issue prepared by the World Without War Council is available from the DVEP to supplement the units.

Recommended in part: Part I "The Selective Service System and Conscription in the U. S." and Part II "Alternate Means of National Defense". Applicable pages for the Student Work Book are 1-28 and 1-16 for the Teacher's Guide.

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

I. Basic description and testing circumstances

A. Testing teachers and dates

Marilyn Garvey, Clayton Valley High School; grade 12, 105 students, 4 1/2 weeks
Jackie Woodruff, Clayton Valley High School; grade 12, 105 students, 4 1/2 weeks
December, 1972

B. Portion taught: All _____ Part X (omitted part III D. and skits)

C. Focusing concept: the nature and meaning of the obligation of an American to his country and himself in regard to military service.

D. Subconcepts:

- (1) the nature and meaning of the obligation of an American to his country
- (2) alternate individual responses to military obligation
- (3) National Defense and policies to provide for it

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions:

About an hour per night. Read student material to determine the best method of dividing assignments according to the reading ability of your class. Check for problems with vocabulary words.

B. Supplementary materials needed:

Teacher's Guide - required, see STAFF REPORT
lottery materials - see Teacher's Guide
Country, Conscience, and Conscription - Prentice-Hall, Inc.
skit materials - see Teacher's Guide and Student Work Book
filmstrip: Draft Debate, Guidance Associates

III. Motivation

"Grabbers" for this unit were the lottery exercise, (a class simulation of the National Draft Lottery), draft board simulation, films, and the recruiters' visit. Student interest is not automatic since the termination of the draft. The concept of alternative methods did not seem to be relevant to the students. They needed constant reminding that the draft or an alternate system would affect their lives.

IV. Abilities required

A. Reading level: 10th to 12th grade

V. Goals and objectives

- A. To provide students with an understanding of conscription in general, of the Selective Service system of the United States, of alternative responses to military service, and of alternative means for providing for the national defense.
- B. To bring about a belief that citizens in a free society should explore the nature of their obligation to their country and the boundaries of governmental authority.

VI. Evaluation of student performance

Types	Unit Provided	Teacher Devised

VII. Teacher recommendations

- A. Woodruff and Garvey would present unit again but only in part. Parts that are still applicable are the sections based on providing for the national defense. The teachers also call for an added section on amnesty which is not included in this unit.
- B. Basically, this unit should be placed in the required 12th grade government course.

Darrell Leckliter, Mt. Diablo High, 12th grade.
Laura Mori, Pine Hollow Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades.
Susan Ott, Concord High, 11th and 12th grades.

Comments Teachers used this book and its varied and cosmopolitan readings to focus on a cross-cultural approach to man. Most readings were successful in making students aware of the validity of the different ways other cultures view the life cycle. High student interest was maintained throughout. Selections consisted of a mixture of prose, poetry, songs and other expression. The teacher's guide was commended.

B. Portion taught: All _____ Part _____ Readings are to be selected.

C. Focusing concept: Cross-cultural view of man

D. Subconcepts: Variety of cultures, customs, economic and other systems.

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: 2 hours per week

B. Supplementary materials needed:

Various materials would be helpful to accompany the different sections of the book.
Reading on pg. 84: Film "Automation" available from CCC-EMS
Unit 2: Slides on Japan. Tape of Zen chants and music, such A-V materials available on preview from Sheikh Publications, 5 Beekman St., N.Y., N.Y. 10038.
Last unit: Speakers on kibbutz life and hippie commune life.
Unit on Mexico: Mexican student as speaker.

III. Motivation

A. This book is self-motivating and does not require motivating activities by the teacher.

B. "The stories are good motivators since they are not terribly long." (L.M.)

C. Special "grabbers": book cover, layout, interesting selections.

D. "Students were so turned on that they often read unassigned selections on their own." (D.L.)

Testing Teachers Dick Bristow and Dick Fagerstrom, College Park High, 10 & 12 grades
Grace Townley, Ygnacio Valley High, 12 grade

Comments This unit is concerned with the rapid growth of corporations which have developed multi-national structures in an ever increasing world trade. What impact will these mammoth corporations have upon the world scene? Students and teachers felt the book raised timely questions, questions that had not been asked before in their curriculum. Teachers felt that there were several good "grabber" activity possibilities that would get the unit off to a good start. One, simply enough, was to poll the class to see how many students had parents who were working for a multinational corporation.

V. Goals and objectives

- A. To understand the exponential growth of multinational corporations and their activity.
- B. To explore the role of multinational corporations in the world -- how they affect foreign relations, national ideologies, and host nations' governments.
- C. To realize the present impact and the possible future potential of multinational corporations and to relate that to the students' own futures.
- D. To explore some of the major economic and political issues for Third World, East-West relations, the nation-state system, economic imperialism, and war and peace.

Testing Teachers Suzette Ferguson, El Dorado Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades

Comments This book appears to be an excellent unit from an excellent series, Concepts and Inquiry. There is a strong development of various concepts connected with World War I, the Depression, and World War II. The concepts are listed as "controlling ideas" in the student book. The book is a good base for an International Relations course, but it does need additional treatment to have students examine value questions associated with war. The teacher's guide contains many good suggested activities for students.

Katy Muus and Marj Powell, Loma Vista Intermediate, 7th grade.

Comments This series has been developed by the Oxford Famine Relief Organization (OXFAM) to build awareness within the English child of the plight and the efforts for self-improvement of people from developing countries. Each title concentrates upon presenting individuals from the area who are dealing with and surmounting typical problems indigenous to their nation. With six separate titles, teachers can create different group projects and the possibility of reporting back to the entire class. The separate titles from the series are 1) Botswana (Bechuanaland): This Is a Hungry Year, 2) Ecuador: Learning by Radio, 3) East Pakistan: In the Wake of the Cyclone, 4) Korea: The Aftermath of War, 5) Nigeria: A Boy with Leprosy, and 6) Tibet: Refugees from the Roof of the World.

III. Motivation

A. Testing teachers found students very turned on by the subject matter. "The books are small, full of interesting pictures and easy to read. They focus on individuals within the nation, thereby giving the feeling of a human interest story." (J.K.)

B. Teachers used varying strategies.

Muus: Individualized and made up contracts for students to complete.

Dunn: Comparative approach with students doing a lot of reference work, concentrating on one nation, keeping charts, analyzing problems and possible solutions, making 'speeches', etc. OXFAM books used as a supplement.

Testing Teachers Don Bergamini, Rosemary Kowalski and Myra Redick of Riverview Intermediate

Comments There are four volumes to People and Places. Each contains case studies from cultures throughout the world. Volume I contains cases drawn from sparsely populated groups, while Volume IV deals with the most densely populated peoples. The student materials are very low level and contain exercises which have high dependence on a student's interpretation of photos, maps and drawings, rather than dependence primarily upon the printed word. The message is "people around the world share the same needs; they fulfill those needs according to the environment in which they live." (DB, RK, MR)

Recommendations

- (1) These units are useful for students with low reading abilities.
- (2) The units are useful for geographical skill building.
- (3) The teacher does need to provide additional activities for classroom variety.

VII. Teacher recommendations

- A. Material held student interest and developed concepts clearly. There is a helpful teacher's guide for India; but as of this writing, a teacher's guide for Kenya has not yet been developed.
- B. Review map skills and geographical locations first. Many students think Africa is all one big country.
- C. "Very good, I would recommend this highly. Students were very interested in materials." (B.S.)

Comments

This SRSS unit comes in the usual black/white cover that by itself does not stimulate students. However, the unit does raise interesting questions about conflict and conflict resolution. One warning to teachers: You must prepare yourself for this unit because it does rely heavily on abstractions. There are three parts to the unit, the first two being simulations.

'Dilemma of the Tribes' introduces students to a two-person conflict situation which can be represented by a matrix. Each party to the dispute is mutually dependent on the other's decision with opportunities for the disputants to move to either cooperation or conflict.

The second simulation is 'Resource and Arms.' Students represent nations in a dilemma situation. The nations must decide on either producing military goods for defense or producing social goods for their people - a case of should it be "guns or butter"?

The last section gives a short theoretical discussion of conflict and methods of conflict resolution. Testing teachers have not commented on this section.

I believe that this unit is working in an area of the curriculum where few other materials are available. It deserves further testing by other teachers.

Activities Group exercises in social experiments, discussion.

Testing Teachers Carol Noble, Mt. Diablo High, 11th and 12th grades.
Rita Zwerdling, Valley View Intermediate, 7th grade.

Comments Small Group Processes contains several group experiments which measure how group influences affect the behavior of the individual. Student materials consist of five pamphlets which must be handed out one at a time.

The first experiment is most worthy of note. It is the famous Asch experiment where all members of a group, save one, deliberately give wrong answers to what ostensibly appears to be an experiment on perception. The class, which is observing this experiment, then notes the impact of the group's responses upon the single subject. The other three experiments carry on and extend this theme throughout the rest of the unit.

Warning: Be prepared before you teach the unit. There is also a lot of student data-gathering.

Level 7 - 12

Activities Readings for discussion, role-playing, maps, charts, tables

Testing teachers Linda Gregoriev and Barbara Stromberg at Clayton Valley High; Jennifer Kuenster at Pine Hollow Intermediate; Jim Kroll at Pacifica High

Comments While the stated goal of this unit is to teach about social change, the teacher must constantly focus on this, or the students will see the unit only as a study of China per se. Considerable outside resources are needed to perk up an otherwise dull-appearing format, though the continuous story line of the book and current China crazes are factors in its favor for 7th - 9th graders. The book contains stories told as if by Chinese peasants following the Chinese Revolution, and includes a play and other potential role-playing exercises portraying conflict situations at the village level.

Recommendations (1) Use motivators such as media, short readings, Chinatown trips, speakers.
(2) Provide historical and cultural background before beginning unit.
(3) Guide students to an understanding of the concept of social change.

Testing teachers Don Guenther and Dolores Hegemann, Pacifica High School

Comments This unit book attempts to establish a method and atmosphere of class discussion whereby: (a) Students listen with sensitivity to one another and (b) The issues involved in a discussion are agreed upon by the class. The booklet contains two cases which are the content for the discussion skill building. The first, based on "Billy Budd", is of high interest to students. However, the second case, "John Brown's Raid on Harper Ferry" does not engender the same class enthusiasm.

Recommendations (1) Use the Billy Budd case, page 9 - 16, omit the John Brown case and use a case of your choice for the second content sample. (example: Andersonville Trial)
(2) Instead of introducing 5 discussion skills (see page 18), focus only on sensitivity and issue clarification.

Testing teacher Howard Yank of Alhambra High, Martinez Unified School District

Comments This unit, prepared by the "Law in a Free Society Project," uses landmark case studies to examine the complexities of the decision-making process, and includes a variety of possible approaches to conflict situations. Though the reading level is about eighth grade, the book holds twelfth graders' interest well, if used selectively. Each case can be taught separately. Though the cases lend themselves well to role-playing, "supplemental information for each unit is needed to facilitate a more meaningful role-playing exercise." (HY)

Recommendations (1) Choose the cases that might be of current interest to students.
(2) Convert some sections to research projects because supplemental information is needed.

Each group is composed of five students who are not allowed to talk to one another. Comments This simulation presents a dilemma situation of an "advanced" technological society meeting a more "primitive" culture which is located on a remote island. The scenario presents many opportunities for cultural misunderstandings such as through trade, language difficulties, etc. The objective is that through this conflict process, students will acquire a strong sense of cultural relativism.

Recommendations The testing teachers felt that their students became very absorbed in the game once they got into it. They did warn that a teacher must have a good feel for the strategy of the game; otherwise, the game could easily break down.

Activities Simulation: Students deferred their choices in a dilemma situation.

Testing Teachers Jim Adams, Ygnacio Valley High, grades 9 and 10.
Katy Muus and Marj Powell, Loma Vista Intermediate, 7th grade.

Comments This simulation game is composed of a set of hard ethical choice situations where the student must decide on a course of action. Then he must defend the choice before his peers. "Ethics is a game that could change the way a person sees himself and the world around him." There are 21 dilemmas that come with the game; teachers could be selective about these or add more scenarios if they wished.

Recommendations Recommended game: 9th - 12th grades.

Activities Role playing

Testing teachers John Millar and Ron Remington, Pacifica High, 9th grade

Comments Each player in Ghetto is a poor person in a poor neighborhood trying to improve his life situation. The obvious attempt of this simulation is to have students develop empathy for individuals actually caught up in a ghetto. Some of the urban components built into the game are slum schools, rewards and risks of illegal activities, and family responsibilities. Testing teachers reported that students did not explore one possibility inherent in the game, and that is an operation bootstrap to improve the neighborhood which would benefit all game participants. Another problem is that the game is basically designed for 10 roles, and the teacher is forced with making a device for doubling up on roles or running two or three games simultaneously. Very high student interest has been reported by testing teachers.

Recommendations Recommended game: 9th to 12th grade

Comments This simulation is an elaborate one which attempts to bring students to the realization of the interrelationships and interdependence of the American economy. There does seem to be some trouble with student use of the banking sector, so this calls for extra teacher attention. Both teachers note high student interest in this game.

Recommendations The game appears to be applicable to a wide age range. One testing teacher used it successfully with an adult group. The active participation of the students might make this simulation a preferable way of presenting the concept of the American economic system.

B. Portion taught: All X Part

C. Focusing concept: The ways in which various sectors of the economy function and relate to each other and the basic principles underlying the economy, supply and demand, for instance.

D. Subconcepts:

(1) The purpose of the economic system is to satisfy human wants.

(2) Profits are made by selling finished products at a price higher than the cost of production.

(3) Everyone is a member of a household; raw materials and labor go into manufacturing a product; banks are sometimes needed for borrowing and saving money; retailers buy finished manufactured products and sell to households.

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: Approximately two hours

B. Supplementary materials needed: None

III. Motivation

A. Students enjoyed playing the important roles in the economy

B. The time limits on buying and selling and bargaining

C. The materials themselves: the bell which is used to keep the game going, the money, and the government interference cards entitled Special Event cards.

D. The special technique of having the government compete with sectors which were having problems.

E. At times, the teacher actively participating, for example: purchasing labor or forming a retail store to simulate foreign competition.

Notes: Discussion disclosed that students did not understand the banking sector. The bankers needed help. There was much excitement and high student interest. At first, however, students felt insecure since the game is rather difficult to start (particularly at the intermediate level).

VII. Teacher recommendations

A. McCreary and Townley would present the game again, but they suggest modifying the banker role. Either assign only the "top" students as banker or assign more than one person and perhaps a secretary to each bank position.

B. Students should be guided to see the potential of borrowed money so they

Testing teacher Jeff McCreary, Pine Hollow Intermediate

Comments This simulation is found on pages 21-22 of the Railroad Era booklet. To play the game and run off the needed forms, you not only need this booklet but also the Cases and Controversy guide.
This is one of the few simulations where the teacher has to play a major role in the simulation. The teacher plays the role of the Mine Owner, using monopoly power upon the students who are organized into four railroad teams.

Recommendations

(1) Teachers should use the simulation only if they are willing to play an active, participatory role.

(2) Recommended primarily for the 8th grade U. S. History Class but also applicable for the 11th grade as well. Does a good job of showing why the trusts emerged in the last half of the 19th century and also demonstrates the danger of the existence of monopoly power without regulation.

Comments The Road Game is an excellent and involving simulation. The first phase of the game creates an imaginary 4-nation world which has only one goal, that of building roads. The students have the choice (though this is not explicitly stated) to develop the game into patterns of cooperation or into patterns of suspicion and hostility. The teacher, once instructions have been given, does not act as an arbitrator of disputes. The second phase uses the device of the jury system as a mechanism of conflict resolution while the final part is the discussion of the game by the students.

Comments This is the classic simulation game. It puts students into a three-tiered society where the rich "get" and the poor "don't". The rich receive the power to make rules and then the poor have to make a decision as to what they will do. Powderhorn is the junior version of Starpower and simplifies the wealth counting procedure. The de-briefing is a vital part of the procedure; students need to talk out and act out feelings engendered by this game. If you have played this game before, DVEP has worked out a new wrinkle for the playing of it which is called "Starpower II".

Recommendations The filmstrip does a good job of presenting the theory but teachers should be forewarned that there is some visual monotony about frame after frame of missiles and missile diagrams. Testing teachers suggest breaking the filmstrip up with discussions, even if this means using the media for two days.

This media is a very useful supplement to contemporary International Relations units such as the DVEP's Conflict Spiral.

The filmstrips appear to be of uneven quality, some of which are perhaps too juvenile for 7th graders. Testing teachers suggest being selective in use of the strips rather than using all of them. Some teachers individualized this material and felt in this way motivation for Earth Island was maintained. The media kit did attempt to show the difficulty of making ecological decisions consistent with some of the 'necessities' to which we have become accustomed. In this sense, it is not polemic as some of the other ecology materials now being sold are.

- A. The evaluating teachers would teach parts of this material again. Would suggest using this as part of an environment unit.
- B. "I would connect this unit even more closely with the field of science, develop activity cards to supplement the work booklets and increase opportunities for student involvement in relevant ecology projects." (S.A.)
- C. High interest level for students to whom study of ecology was new. For students who had studied it in lower grades or other classes, interest was low.

Teaching Time 2 days

Level 7th - 12th grade.

Activities filmstrip, discussions.

Testing Teachers Suzette Ferguson and Carl Von Rohr (student teacher),
El Dorado Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades.

Comments This 25-minute filmstrip presents the controversy as to whether the U. S. should have dropped atomic bombs on both Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It offers several viable alternatives concerning the use of the bomb and the possible consequences of each action. The study kit appears to be unbiased and open-ended and leaves the controversy open for student discussion.

Recommendations Recommended media: 8th and 11th grades

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

I. Basic description and testing circumstances

A. Testing teachers and dates:

Suzette Ferguson and Carl Von Rohr, El Dorado Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades; 30 students, one class period, March, 1973.

B. Portion taught: All X Part

C. Focusing concept: Should the U. S. have dropped the atom bomb?

D. Subconcepts:

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: one hour to view materials and plan strategies

B. Supplementary materials needed: None

III. Motivation

A. The material was self-motivating.

B. "The filmstrip was interesting and provocative but somewhat too long and drawn out. The parts during the second half where many opinions were quoted as to whether or not the bomb should have been dropped were too dry." (S.F.)

IV. Abilities required

A. Reading level: 7th and up

B. Skills

Comments	This kit consists of 8 filmstrips (2 parts each) and 8 records. Titles are 1) People, 2) Cultures, 3) Housing, 4) Transportation, 5) Work, 6) Leisure, 7) Religion, and 8) Education. These high quality filmstrips can serve as the basic resource for a unit on the universal needs of man and how they are met in different cultures or as supplementary materials. Either way, print materials on the same themes are needed to make these filmstrips successful. Such materials were not clearly identified in the current testing effort. The first two filmstrips introduce man's physical and emotional needs and as such make an excellent case for universality of man's basic needs. Others on work, religion, technology etc. are better as supplementary resources. Suggestions: <ol style="list-style-type: none">1) Use the introductory filmstrips People and Cultures to establish the point that man has universal needs which can be met in various ways and that no one way of meeting these needs is necessarily better than any other.2) Use the other filmstrips in the series to highlight specific studies of how man meets these needs.3) MDUSD-IMC should obtain extra teaching guides and package the filmstrips in groups of two each with its own guide so that wider use can be made of the filmstrip kit.

I. Basic description and testing circumstances

A. Testing teachers and dates:

Myra Redick, Riverview Intermediate, 7th and 8th grades, 40 students, one month, March-April, 1973.

Rita Zwerdling, Valley View Intermediate, 7th grade, 120 students, 12 weeks, February-March, 1973.

B. Portion taught: All X Part _____

C. Focusing concept: An integrated world view of the physical and emotional needs which men throughout the world have in common.

D. Subconcepts: The ways in which people satisfy these needs vary from one culture to another. Way of life of the developing nations. Man is affected by his environment.

II. Preparation

A. Time required, suggestions: 1-2 hours weekly

B. Supplementary material needed: Can be used to supplement Harcourt Brace Jovanovich books Man in Culture and/or Man's Attitudes. Needs printed material to accompany it or these booklets can be used to supplement the filmstrips.

III. Motivation

A. The material was self-motivating.

B. "The photography in the filmstrips is outstanding; varied pictures placed in excellent sequence in order to develop a point. The accompanying narration is equally well done." (R.Z.)

Man: A Cross-Cultural Approach

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

V. Goals and objectives

- A. To teach students that man's needs are everywhere the same. How he meets these needs reveals interesting differences in adaptation to environment.
- B. "Importance of making children in a homogeneous suburb aware of the fact that 2/3 of the world is non-white." (R.Z.)
- D. "Emphasis on values of every culture having merit; things may be different but not inferior." (R.Z.)

VI. Evaluation of student performance

Types	Unit Provided	Teacher Developed
test		X
written vocabulary work	X

VII. Teacher recommendations

- A. Material does hold student interest, provide adequate teacher guidance and develop concepts clearly.
- B. "The entire kit could use an over-all series of readings directly related to each topic using the exact vocabulary and countries cited in the filmstrips. Nevertheless, the kit fits in very well with the new 7th grade text, Voices of Emerging Nations." (R.Z.)
- C. The kit should be broken up, making each filmstrip available separately with its accompanying teacher's guide. The separate filmstrips could then be interspersed throughout a semester or year of teaching.

Also available from MDUSD-IMC.

Cost Kit $99.00 (which includes filmstrips $6.00 each and Teacher's Guide $1.02)

Teaching Time Two weeks (if done in one block of time, which is not recommended)

Level 7th grade

Activities filmstrips, role-playing, debriefings

Testing Teachers Carol Gray, Loma Vista Intermediate, 7th grade.

Comments This filmstrip kit provides open-ended dilemma situations for students to either discuss or to role-play and then discuss. The teacher's guide gives particular support to the role-playing process. The testing teacher indicated that the dilemmas were very appropriate for 7th grade students. The rationale for this approach to value clarification is that by role-playing, several alternative behaviors become identified with the possible consequences following. This allows students to test behaviors and values in a relatively safe psychological climate.

Values in Action

TEACHERS' EVALUATION

V. Goals and objectives

- A. "The development of positive social values through the examination of alternative ways of behaving in specific social situations.
- B. Opportunity to explore various short-term consequences resulting from behavior chosen.
- C. To encourage the students to develop specific values and use these in determining their own behavior." (C.G.)

VI. Evaluation of student performance

Types	Unit Provided	Teacher Developed
teacher observation		X
discussion		X

written work		X

VII. Teacher recommendations

- A. Material held high student interest, provided adequate teacher guidance, and developed concepts clearly.
- B. Introduce role-playing before beginning the filmstrips.
- C. Use material over a fairly long period of time rather than all at once.
- D. Could use the filmstrips in conjunction with written case studies which involve decision-making and conflicting values.
