

New state offices set for construction; downtown redevelopment underway

by Mary Washburn

Ground will be broken within the next two weeks on a new state office building to be built west of campus, according to John Puisha of the state architect's office.

As part of the San Antonio Redevelopment Project, the $11.8 million structure will be located between Second and Third streets, near San Antonio Plaza.

The contract for the building was awarded Sept. 4 to the R.B. Lathrop Construction Co. of Emeryville.

The company must obtain an insurance certificate before construction can begin.

Puisha explained that the certificate is a "routine" step that all construction companies must complete to insure that they will be able to perform the work they contracted to do.

The building will house 22 state agencies presently scattered throughout the county, Puisha said.

Offices of state senators and assemblymen from the area will also be located in the new building.

Puisha calls the building a "unique project" built to look like "a part of the city" rather than a "sterile government office."

The building is also designed to be "energy efficient," according to Puisha.

The city of San Jose plans to construct a parking garage on San Carlos Street adjacent to the offices.

According to Larry Benson, senior civil engineer for the city of San Jose, a $3.7 million contract was awarded for the project last June, but construction will not begin until after the first of the year.

The city purchased the land from the Bank of America, Benson said, but the portion where the garage is to be located was leased back to the bank at the site of an existing branch office.

The lease will run out at the end of 1980, and construction of the garage will begin after that, Benson said.

The contract was awarded to the Overaa Construction Co. of Richmond.

The city will lease 125 stalls of the five level, 575 stall facility to the state for its offices. The remainder of the parking spaces will be open to the public.

No special arrangements have been made with the university for student parking, Benson said, but a student could park there as a member of the general public.

A federal office building, to be located one block west between First and Second streets, is still in "schematic design," according to assistant city manager Frank Taylor.

The federal offices will take up three-quarters of the block bordering on San Carlos, according to Leon Donnhue of the Federal General Services Administration.

To date there are no specific plans for development of the dirt parking lot across from the Old Science Building, according to Jan Miller of the San Jose Redevelopment Agency.

The lot, covering two blocks from San Carlos to San Fernando between Third and Fourth streets, is also part of the redevelopment project.

The Downtown Working Review Committee was set up by the mayor in July to develop a "master plan" for the city, including "guidelines for the San Antonio project," she said.

The committee's recommendations would be taken into account by the city in planning the use of the land, Miller said.

However, the city must wait for a private contractor to submit a development proposal before it can do anything, she said.

Residential use of the land has been discussed, Miller said, "but that is not set in concrete."

More students seeking bank loans this year

by Mary Apanasewicz

The number of students receiving guaranteed bank loans is expected to triple this semester, according to John Bradbury, associate director of SJSU financial aid.

Bradbury estimated that by the end of this semester, the number of students who received guaranteed bank loans will have increased from last year's figure of 1,157 to over 3,000.

The number of basic grants distributed is expected to increase from last year's total of 3,300 to about 4,000.

Bradbury said the number of students who receive other forms of financial aid like work/study, Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG), Cal-grants and scholarships should remain steady at 6,000.

Bradbury said the increase in the guaranteed bank loans is due to the fact that more people are aware that financial aid is available.

"Because of the economy, people find it necessary to seek outside assistance," Bradbury said. "Student financial aid is an attractive alternative."

The "attractive alternative" does have its problems, however. Some students don't get their checks on time or don't get as much money as they had hoped for a variety of reasons, including mistakes on applications, computer error, and student failure to meet one of the numerous federal regulations governing the financial aid program.

Bradbury said the financial aid program is "overly regulated." He said he does not like the fact that the department has no say in whether or not students can get a grant.

According to Bradbury, federal regulations dictate who gets the grants, how large the grants are and even the number of units a student must carry to be eligible for a grant.

Elevator plans stalled for disabled students

by Anne Papineau

University efforts to install an elevator in the Men's Gymnasium, making the second floor accessible to the handicapped, appear swamped in state budget red tape.

In April, the SJSU environmental health and safety office submitted a $500,000 proposal for installation of the elevator, according to Ron Montgomery, environmental health and safety officer.

The elevator bid remains stalled in Long Beach, pending the approval of the California State University and Colleges Chancellor's office.

"We've lobbied very hard for it," Montgomery said. The proposal calls for installation of an elevator in the Men's Gymnasium, as well as construction of a bridge between the gym and the PER Building. Wheelchair-bound students would then have access to the second floors of both these structures.

At present, wheelchair-bound students are unable to reach the upper floors of the PER Building or the Men's Gymnasium, which houses a swimming pool and weight room.

Montgomery said he cannot estimate when word will be received on the project, adding that delays in the passing of the state budget might have postponed consideration of the SJSU elevator.

An electric lift now makes the first floor of the gymnasium open to wheelchair users.

Mary Rogers, SJSU Disabled Services Coordinator, said a wheelchair-accessible locker room with showers was installed in the Men's Gym last spring.

"We don't necessarily have to make buildings accessible," Rogers said, "It's programs that have to be made accessible."

If his office doesn't receive project approval within the next month, Montgomery said, SJSU will re-submit its request for funding of the gymnasium elevator.

The next step in the project would be to select an architect, according to Montgomery, then the project would go up to bid before contractors.

Disabled student airs frustrations about campus barriers

by Sandy Kleffman

When Ron Thayer decides which classes to take during a semester, he thinks about more than meeting the requirements of his electrical engineering major.

Thayer considers where a class will be held and the location and type of elevators, restrooms, water fountains and ramps in that building. He thinks about the availability of parking spaces, the amount of time he will have between classes and which door he must use to enter and exit a building.

He attempts to assess his strength and endurance.

"Not just your mental faculties have to be good," said Thayer, a quadriplegic who uses a manual wheelchair to move around campus. "You have to be in good physical shape also."

"If you can barely handle making it to class, then you'll be too tired to study at the end of the day and you will fail your classes," he added.

Thayer broke his neck in a car accident in 1971. His legs are paralyzed and he has limited use of his arms and hands. He uses a manual wheelchair rather than an electric one to keep the muscles in his arms developed and strong.

Thayer is a member of the CSUC advisory committee on disabled student services. The 15-member committee makes recommendations about such things as barrier removal and special equipment for the disabled.

At times, Thayer forgets to think about the possibility of architectural barriers before going somewhere.

"Then sometimes I'm disappointed," he said.

An architectural barrier is anything which makes a structure inaccessible to a disabled person. For Thayer, this includes buildings which have stairs but do not have elevators or ramps.

"Before there were elevators in some of the buildings, we had to change the location of certain classes if a student in a wheelchair wanted to take them," said Mary Rogers, disabled services coordinator.

Last year, five new elevators were installed to make buildings accessible. These were installed in the Music, Journalism, Administration, and Speech and Drama buildings and Faculty Offices.

Some of the older buildings on campus remain inaccessible.

"The only place that is accessible in the Men's Gym is the gym floor itself," Thayer said.

The swimming pool and weight rooms are on the second floor. The only way Thayer can get up to the second floor is to be carried there.

"Having been carried, I don't really like it," he said. "A lot of people have gotten back injuries from lifting people."

"I take my P.E. classes at De Anza because nothing is accessible here," he added.

The structure of many of the older buildings on campus makes improvements difficult and costly, according to Rogers.

The stairway leading to the pool area in the Men's Gym is too narrow for lifts and thus major construction is needed, she said.

"It will require the tearing out of a wall to install an elevator," she added. "It's a question of money."

Another common problem for students in wheelchairs is water fountains which are too high. The fountains on campus have been lowered, so that disabled students no longer need to carry jugs of water with them.

But it's impossible to please everyone, Rogers said. Soon after the water fountains were lowered, a disabled student came to her and complained. He had a back problem and could not bend down to the lower fountains.

Rogers stressed that not all of the approximately 300 disabled students on campus are easily identifiable.

Last year, a student called her and complained about someone using a handicapped parking space who did not appear to be disabled. The person was a Vietnam veteran who had lost both his legs. He was able to walk so well with his artificial limbs that the student assumed he could not possibly be disabled.

Special parking permits are issued for the handicapped spaces on campus. There are not enough of those spaces, according to Thayer, who has missed several classes because he has been unable to find a place to park.

The problem is aggravated by people who use handicapped spaces and are not disabled, Thayer said. He has seen unauthorized students, faculty and University Police parking in handicapped spaces.

When Thayer sees such a person using a space without the special disabled permit, he leaves a note on their car explaining why he needs an extra-wide space to get his wheelchair out of the car.

Thayer does not like the term "handicapped students." He prefers the phrase "students with a disability."

"We're students first," he explained, "and disabled second."

Tours, clinics starting

Get a head start; Library offers help

Students can get an early start in preparing for research and other assignments requiring library use by attending library tours during the next two weeks.

The tours will be given every two weeks throughout the semester at 10:30 a.m., 1:30 and 2:30 p.m., according to Edith Crowe, tour coordinator. Tours begin in the lobby of the library and last from 45 to 50 minutes, she said.

A continuing service from last semester will be a library lecture given to English 1B students during the semester, Crowe said.

Basic Library Instruction is given to those classes, since most students are required to take the course, she added.

A slide lecture with a tape describing library usage is available on an individual basis in the Media Services Department of the library on the second floor north wing.

Later in the semester, the library will be offering term paper clinics to help students locate reference materials and learn the basic format of putting together a term paper.

Term paper conferences are also available by appointment on a one-to-one basis, new Library Director Maureen Pastine said.

These conferences will enable a student to receive help from a librarian who is knowledgeable in the area of the topic chosen by the student, Pastine said.

The Library Education and Assistance Program (LEAP), provides these services. LEAP also offers a one-unit course in library resources, Libr. 1/100 (1 for lower division students and 100 for upper division students). Sign-up for this class is Library North 608.

The class meets once a week and covers use of periodical indexes, abstracts and the card catalog. Students will also learn how to conduct a literature search and to develop research strategies, Pastine said.

Response to the course has been positive, and a lot of people recommend it, Crowe said.

Computer searches on topics difficult to research manually are available on a select basis, Pastine said.

Librarians at the general reference desk, located on the second floor central, can conduct these searches.

Pastine also wants students to be aware the librarians are located on the second floor north in government documents, the general reference desk and the science reference desk, on the second floor south.

She said students should never feel hesitant to ask a question of the librarians.

The library hours are: Monday-Thursday, 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 5 p.m. Exceptions to these hours will be posted in the library for holiday and vacation periods.

Hours for the Reserve Book Room are Monday-Thursday, 8 a.m. to midnight, Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, noon to midnight.

Handicapped students reap many benefits

A Braille typewriter, a motor driven wheelchair, exercise equipment and a telephone for the deaf are some of the new pieces of equipment received by the Disabled Services Center this fall.

The center is designed to aid SJSU students with permanent or temporary disabilities. These include impaired locomotion, impaired sight or hearing and severe cardiovascular, respiratory, or glandular conditions. Eligibility can be established by the student's physician.

The center is at the Office of Student Programs and Services in the Old Cafeteria Building near the Spartan Pub. The center is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. They can be contacted at 277-2971.

According to Disabled Services Coordinator Mary Ellen Rodgers, the center helps 250 to 300 students each semester. The numbers vary because some of the disabilities are temporary, she said.

Some of the services provided by the center are housing, transportation and financial assistance, special media materials such as the new equipment received this fall, and health services such as physical therapy.

In addition to the help provided by the center, Disabled Services has lists of other helpful organizations in the area.

Students can get an accessibility map of the campus from the center. The map shows curb ramps, elevators, and special parking facility locations. Wheelchair accessible telephone and restroom facilities are also included on the map.

Rodgers said the reason so much more equipment was purchased this fall than usual is the funds were finally available.

During most of the center's eight-year history, the available funds were needed for constructing ramps and other facilities needed for special access.

Rodgers said that "just about everything" in the way of special equipment is located in the Disabled Services Office with the exception of the exercise equipment.

Use of the exercise equipment can be scheduled through the Human Performance Office, PER 119, at 277-3134.

Center prepares graduates for upcoming examinations

There are a variety of services offered to students at the Testing and Evaluation Center.

Students who plan on going to graduate schools can obtain information and test applications on the graduate examinations. Requirements for the examination should be verified with the department of the university a students wishes to attend.

Credit-by-Exam enables all undergraduate students to challenge any course offered at SJSU. Forms for this can be obtained in the testing office. Students who wish to challenge a class must obtain approval from the department chairperson and the class instructor. The examination must be administered by the third week of school.

The testing center is in the Administration Building, room 218. They are open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at 277-2964 or 277-2965.

Alternate modes of transportation

More than one way to commute to SJSU

The difficulty of finding parking spaces and the cost of fuel are forcing many SJSU students to steer away from driving their cars.

Brian Ashley, SJSU junior, said he takes the bus because he doesn't have to "hassle the freeway traffic" and it allows him extra time to "cram for class assignments and exams."

The Santa Clara County Transit System has extensive service throughout the Santa Clara Valley. Buses stop every 15 to 30 minutes at the bus stops surrounding SJSU. The No. 22 bus line has 24 hour service from Eastridge to Menlo Park.

Bus schedules and other bus service information is available in the Student Union. Bus fare is 35 cents. Riders can purchase daily passes for $12 and 22-ride passes for $7 can be purchased in the S.U., room 235.

Commuters coming from north of San Jose have the option of taking the train. Southern Pacific Railroad has commuter trains which service the area from San Francisco to San Jose from 5:05 a.m. until 10 p.m.

SJSU train riders can take the No. 64 bus from the Southern Pacific Station at 65 Cahill St. (off Santa Clara Street) to the corner of First and Santa Clara streets. From there they can walk or take connecting buses 21, 22, 63, 81, 83 or 87 to the university.

The amount of the train fare depends upon how many miles one travels. For fare and schedule information, call Southern Pacific at 297-4561.

Although the Bay Area Rapid Transit does not have trains running in San Jose, commuters can take a No. 3 express bus from the BART station to First and Santa Clara streets for 75 cents.

The BART trains operate from 6 a.m. to midnight. Fares for BART, like Southern Pacific, vary with the number of miles traveled. For more information, call (415) 793-2278.

For students who want to conserve fuel and money and continue to use the automobile, Santa Clara County Transit provides a carpool matching service. This service is integrated with the program operated by RIDES for Bay Area Commuters.

All SJSU students should have received a ridesharing information sheet with their priority add/drop forms. If not, carpool information is available at the S.U. information center.

To obtain a matched list of commuters who travel to and from the same area, fill out the ridesharing information form and put it in the box at the S.U. information center.

For more information about ridesharing, call Leisure Services Coordinator John Cognetta at 277-3994, or talk to someone working at the S.U. information center.

For the students who carpool or drive their own car, parking near SJSU is available for 50 cents a day in the garages on Seventh and Tenth streets and the dirt lots on Fourth Street.

If a student is lucky, free parking on the street is available. Beware, however, of parking meters and how, when and where they work. San Jose has strict parking laws that if bent slightly can cost anywhere between $5 and $50.

On-campus parking permits are available to faculty, disabled and resident students for $18 per semester. Night students can purchase parking permits for the same cost that allows them to park anywhere on campus after 4 p.m. For $18, aeronautic students can get a campus parking permit and a decal that enables them to park at the municipal airport.

For more information about parking permits, call the University Police Traffic Management Unit at 277-3843.

For SJSU cyclists, bike lockers are rented for $10 per semester plus a $5 key deposit. Because the demand for bike lockers on campus is so great, there is a waiting list. For more information concerning bike lockers and the waiting list, go to the customer service desk in the Spartan Bookstore.

The more adventurous students probably have their own individual answer to alternative transportation. Sophomore Lori Wallace roller-skates to school every day.

Of course, if a student really wants to conserve fuel, avoid parking problems and get some exercise at the same time without spending any money - they could always walk.

Ellie Gioumousis puts her bike into one of the bike lockers that were purchased to promote this sort of commuting.

Counselors offer advice on life SJSU service helps to ease the 'tension'

At the beginning of every semester, students face a variety of hardships and heartache. Dr. David Newman, former Counseling Services Director, wants students to know there is help when the need arises.

"We're good consultants in survival," Dr. Newman said of his counseling colleagues. "Students can come in with just about any problem. We have a highly diversified counseling service."

Counseling Services offers personal counseling for individuals, groups and couples. Help is available in interpersonal relationships, sexuality conflicts, substance abuse, feelings of insecurity and depression and loneliness.

The counseling staff is professionally trained in counseling and clinical psychology. The staff offers educational and career counseling to help students select majors and plan ahead for the future.

This area is particularly helpful in tackling such school time dilemmas as test anxiety, lack of concentration, fear of failure, procrastination and daily stress.

Other areas include crisis counseling, international student advisement and counseling, special interest groups and workshops, referral services and consultation services. The first few weeks of the semester new students are faced with miles of paper work to fill out and have numerous deadlines to meet, Dr. Newman said.

As the semester rolls along, he said, students begin to come in with more personal problems.

"Most of our staff is prepared to deal with personal problems as well as school problems," he said. "If we can't help students then we will refer them to another area of the campus or in the community that can provide assistance."

Dr. Newman said that approximately $72 of every student registration fee last year went to pay for student services, such as counseling. Therefore, he added, students should take advantage of what they're paying for.

"The students own us, in a sense," he said.

Counseling Services is located in the Administration Building, room 223. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Downtown health clinics provide variety of services

There are many downtown health clinics which can possibly be of use to students.

Some of these clinics accept Medi-Cal, some charge the competitive price and some charge by the sliding fee scale. The sliding fee scale assigns a lower charge to the lower income patients.

Planned Parenthood, located at 18 N. San Pedro St., is a contraceptive clinic. It offers educational method discussions and group or individual rap sessions dealing with various methods of contraception. Everything is done on a confidential basis.

Planned Parenthood is state funded by the office of family planning. Fees are decided by the individuals' income. The phone number is 287-7526.

Services include: a drop-in counseling program, pregnancy testing, abortion referrals, marriage and family counseling and vaginal examinations.

The Women's Community Clinic, 696 E. Santa Clara, is a privately-funded, non-profit organization. Fees are charged by the sliding fee scale. The phone number is 287-4322.

This clinic offers a complete family medicine program. It also offers birth control and pregnancy counseling, clinical abortions, sex and group therapy, assertiveness training, gynecology and infertility counseling. All records are confidential.

There is also a special class offered at this clinic called "Parent Sex Education." This is for parents who want to learn how to teach sex education to their children.

The Family Practice Clinic, 25 N. 14th St., is affiliated with San Jose Hospital. It is funded by various federal grants. It does accept Medi-Cal patients. Prices are slightly lower because it is a training program for budding family physicians. The phone number is 293-9685.

This clinic offers a complete family practice program, from obstetrics to senior citizens. If it cannot help you, it does have an extensive referral service.

The Dental Health Care Center, 552 W. Santa Clara St., is a full dentistry clinic. Prices are generally competitive with the community. However, it does accept Medi-Cal patients, and offers a 10 percent discount to senior citizens. The phone number is 293-0820.

The full dentistry program includes; restoration, x-rays, dentures, bridges and endodontistry. Dental work is done in-house except for dentures and bridges, which are sent out to be done.

Customers must pay cash on the first visit. If there is a lot of work to be done after the first visit, then payment terms can be negotiated.

If none of these clinics have specifically what you need, you might give them a call and take advantage of their referral services.

Stacks of books rise to meet subject title cards hung from the Spartan Bookstore ceiling. The cards guide students through the canyons of books to find the texts they need.

SJSU Bookstore has books, special services

The SJSU bookstore is the largest shop in the Student Union, and to most, it's the most important.

With few exceptions, the bookstore carries all the text books for every class at SJSU. And although many books don't arrive in time for the first day of school, 96 percent of them do, according to bookstore manager Ron Duval.

When the books aren't on the shelves on time, it could be because of any number of reasons, Duval said. Sometimes the orders were held up in the mail or in the publishing house; other times the book is out of print. No matter what the problem is, the bookstore will inform the instructor and will attempt to find a quick solution.

Aside from ordering text books and trouble shooting when they don't come in, the bookstore offers many services.

Check Cashing: The bookstore will allow students to write checks for $10 more than the student's purchase.

Special Book Ordering: Students can order books which the bookstore usually doesn't carry. If the student knows the title, author and publishing house, and is willing to pay in advance, the bookstore will figure out the price and will have the book sent directly from the publisher to the student's address.

Film Developing: The bookstore also offers a film developing service. Students can drop off film near the customer service desk in the bookstore.

Football Ticket Selling: Customer service in the bookstore now sells tickets to students for Spartan home games. The tickets cost $3 each.

Used Book Selling: Although most of the textbooks for sale in the Spartan Bookstore are new and expensive, the bookstore management is planning on buying more used books in the future. Because students as a whole only sell 10 percent of their books back, the bookstore hopes to buy used books from wholesalers.

Refunding: The last day the bookstore will refund 100 percent of purchase price is September 19.

Buying Back: During the last week of school and during finals week, the bookstore will buy back all text books that will be used next semester. The bookstore usually pays around 60 percent of the original price.

A kaleidoscope of film, theater and gallery events awaits visitors and students at SJSU.

Women host open house

An open house will mark the beginning of activities for the SJSU Women's Center this fall.

The event will be tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The purpose of the center is to serve as a meeting place for the women of the campus community, to introduce the staff to interested parties, and to distribute information about the center's scheduled programs and events for fall, according to resource coordinator Linda Gonzales.

The center is in Building U, room 202, just off San Carlos street near Duncan Hall at 277-2047. Since 1972, it has sponsored many special programs such as self-defense and women's legal rights workshops, disco dancing classes and support groups for such groups as lesbians, battered women and single parents.

Some of the facilities available at the center include legal and psychological referral services, a drop-in center where students can talk, relax, study or eat their lunch, a job file and a women's issue library of over 1000 volumes.

The center is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The center has many activities planned for the fall besides the open house, according to Gonzales. On Sept. 16, the center will begin a feminist film series co-sponsored by the International Center. The first film will be "Some American Feminists," and will be preceded by a wine and cheese party. The film will begin at 7 p.m. at the International Center at 360 S. 11th St.

The Women's Center will also be sponsoring a tear gas certification class on Sept. 23 from 5 to 8 p.m. in the S.U. Almaden Room. Advance registration is necessary for this class through the Associated Student's Business Office. The fee is $15 per person.

Another planned event is a reception titled "In Honor of Women Rising," which will honor women who have been promoted on campus.

Guests of honor will be Women's Studies Coordinator Jo Sprague, Library Director Maureen Pastine, Humanities and Arts Dean Arlene Okerlund and Shari Selovar, co-director of the alumni association.

The reception will be held from noon to 2 p.m. at the International House on Sept. 29.

Rental services available for $

Housing difficult to locate but persistence pays off

With the vacancy rate - the percentage of rental properties that are vacant at any one time - varying between .7 percent and .8 percent in San Jose, a feeling of discouragement is just about inevitable.

But do not despair. Although the vacancy rate is extraordinarily low, the annual turnover rate is 50 to 70 percent, according to Donni Grotte, government relations director for the Tri-County Apartment Association, 480 N. First St. in San Jose. There are plenty of opportunities to find housing, she added.

However, if burrowing frantically through the classified ads looking for a place to unpack one's typewriter has begun to pall, one alternative might be a professional rental consultant service.

A rental consultant service is designed to help people find housing who "don't want to take the time" to search on their own, according to Joe Darosa, owner of the Home Rental Service, 1666 McKee Road, Suite 6.

For a fee, the service will provide a listing of rental properties in the client's area and price range. Phone numbers for the landlord or manager of the apartments are also included. Calling up the apartment and arranging an appointment is the client's responsibility, according to all of the consultant services interviewed.

Price, duration of contract, and refund policies vary from service to service. The Home Rental Service charges $25 for two months of services. These services include a new list weekly, a partial refund in case of dissatisfaction and advice on deposits and rules.

Darosa said his company obtains listings from the classified ads as well as getting notification of vacancies from the landlords directly.

The Rental Center, 2444 El Camino Real in Santa Clara, charges $35 for a 90 day service which includes an updated list twice a week.

Rentall, 4400 Stevens Creek Blvd. in San Jose, charges $36 for three months of service. Rentall features photostat copies of computer printouts of the vacancies in the area, according to Kimberly Brant, landlord services coordinator. The listings are updated daily, she said.

Help for SJSU homeless

Possible antidotes for those apartment-hunting blues can be found at a variety of agencies in Santa Clara County.

The major campus housing agency is the housing division of the Department of Student Services. The agency has an off-campus housing adviser on duty from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

However, a student's primary resource should be the classified ads in the local newspapers, according to Maria Josue, department secretary.

"The student should try looking independently for at least a week," Josue said, adding that her department will be "barraged with students for the first few weeks of school."

If a student does have considerable difficulty in finding an apartment after the first week of independent searching, they can come into the office and talk to the housing adviser, she said.

The adviser will provide information about the prices and availability of housing in different areas of the valley, housing options available to the student and county transit system maps for students who do not have their own transportation.

According to Josue, any student still hoping at this late date to get into the dorms should probably give up that idea.

The department begins accepting residency applications for the fall semester in April, and the dorms are usually filled up by July, she said. She added the reason for the quick fill-up is her office receives 5,000 applications every fall for the 1,788 available places in the dorms. Some of those places are filled by returning dorm residents, who are automatically reserved a spot. The overflow is put on a waiting list.

Other housing options which can be considered are rooming houses, where students can rent a bedroom. All of the rooms share a bathroom and some come with kitchen privileges. The rooms start at a minimum of $100, Josue said. Notices concerning rooms for rent and roommates are posted on a bulletin board in the Student Union, Josue added.

Another resource for finding housing is the Housing Service Center of San Jose, 380 N. First Street. The center does not place people in housing, but they do provide listings of rental possibilities free of charge.

None of the agencies in the area have resources to provide emergency housing. Josue suggested a student who doesn't want to pay the high cost of a hotel room might want to stay at one of the area campgrounds. The closest ones are in Livermore and Morgan Hill.

While coordinators discuss plans for the coming year, students look over job possibilities with head coordinator Alice Campbell in the main lounge of the Women's Center.

Special labs improve skills

Students who have problems in English, reading or math can take advantage of the skills labs at SJSU.

The Writing Lab is available to anyone who has a problem in English, according to Laboratory Administrative Assistant Virginia Hearn.

The lab staff offers advice in writing resumes, business letters or theses, she added.

However, three-quarters of the people who use the lab are from English 1A who have been referred to the lab by their instructors, Hearn said.

Students can get no higher than a D grade in English 1A if they don't finish their work in the lab, Hearn commented.

Work at the lab is prepared by the staff and can be brought home.

"It's very open-ended to meet individual needs," she said.

Tutors are mainly English graduate students. They are available to offer assistance in the lab.

Instructors are very supportive of the program which is beginning its sixth year, Hearn added.

The Writing Lab is in the Education Building, room 229 at 277-3149.

The lab is open Monday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday and Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., Thursday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Reading Lab is designed to help students, staff and faculty who want to improve their reading skills, said Reading Lab Director Norma Spalding, associate professor in the Special Education Department.

The lab's functions range from helping foreign students bring up their reading levels to helping students who want to increase their reading speeds, she said.

Students can either use the lab through class requirements or by dropping in, she added.

The lab work given to students is based on their reading needs which are determined by a test given at the time students sign up for the lab.

Most of the program is self-paced so students can work on their own, Spalding said.

The lab first opened in 1963 and now works with about 1,000 students a year, she said.

The Reading Lab is in the Education Building, room 231, at 277-3597.

The lab is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Unlike the writing and reading labs, the math lab is a drop-in clinic staffed by upper classmen in the major. Students bring their own work to the lab.

The emphasis of the lab is on lower division math classes including calculus, analytical geometry, finite math, trigonometry and algebra, according to math instructor Al Halteman.

The math lab is in MacQuarrie Hall, room 234, at 277-2411.

The lab is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Many groups dedicated to aiding minority students

SJSU has many programs geared toward assisting minority students.

Educational and career counseling, international student advisement counseling and workshops are offered to minority students.

The AKBAYAN, a Filipino organization, is geared toward establishing a better understanding and appreciation for the Filipino Community and Filipino student.

The Black Business Students Association, organized at SJSU last semester for the first time, is geared toward assisting black business students in educational and career counseling.

The Black Student Union is also an organization designed to help alleviate problems faced by minority students. The organization's purpose is to help students stay in school. They offer various types of counseling.

For Mexican-American students there is an organization called the Chicano Alliance. It is a support group for Chicanos, Latinos, and Hispanics.

Chicanos in Medicine provides activities, events and services which will develop the organizational, managerial, and administrative skills, as well as maximize learning experiences for Mexican American students affiliated with health.

The Chinese Christian Club at SJSU is geared toward helping Chinese students. There is also the Chinese Student Association, which provides various types of services for Chinese students for adapting and living at SJSU.

Another service offered to minority students is the Russian Club. This organization is also offered for consultation services.

The Vietnamese Student Association, Il Circolo Italiano, Indian Inter-Cultural Club, Iranian Student Association, La Cosa Nueva, La Raza Pre-Law Association, Lebanese Cultural Club, Nusantra Club, O.A.S.; (Arabian Cultural Organization), Pan-African Student Union, Portuguese-Brazilian Club, and the Chicano Business Students Association are all groups aimed toward counseling and handling problems of the minority student that may arise in school.

The various programs at SJSU for minority students also include such programs and services such as the Disabled Student Association. Its objective is to be an aid for disabled students on the SJSU campus by means of education, employment, and accessibility. Its functions are to serve as an advocate for the rights of the disabled, serve as a referral agency and hold activities.

The Gay Student Union is also offered at SJSU. One of its objectives is to provide a social atmosphere.

Although there are many programs and services offered to minority students, no brochure or booklet is available. Students must go to the various programs individually to receive service.

Penny Terry, director of student programs and services, said that one major brochure outlining all programs and services available to not only minority students but all students would be helpful.

Minority students who need assistance or who are interested in finding out about the various programs at SJSU can go to Student Programs and Services for individual brochures depicting the various programs offered.

Add/Drop ends on Sept. 19

The Add/Drop Center will be open for program changes until Sept. 19.

The center is on the upper level of the Student Union and will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. this week, and 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. next week. On both Fridays, the center will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Student identification will be required to pick up an add/drop form. These include a Campus Service Card, add/drop student receipt, student study list, acceptance notice for new students or a valid California Driver's License.

If a class is dropped before Sept. 19, there will be no course entry on a student's record.

Drops from Sept. 22 through Dec. 5 will only be allowed for serious and compelling reasons. The instructor and department chairperson must approve the drop request.

Drops will appear as a "W" on a student's permanent record.

Drops after Dec. 5 will only be granted for accident cases or serious illness. The instructor, department chairperson and school dean must approve the reason.

If a student does not officially drop a class, they will receive an "F," "U" or "NC" on their permanent record.

Students leaving the university should be certain to officially withdraw from their classes, otherwise an "F," "U" or "NC" will be on their record and cause disqualification upon a student's return.

If a student changes their mind after officially withdrawing from the university, they must contact the Student Record Maintenance Unit regarding withdrawal cancellation procedures.

Ombudsman Charley Whitcomb serves to mediate student-administration complaints. He is available by appointment at 277-2262.

Two committees work to protect students' rights

Students who feel they have been treated unfairly by a member of the faculty, administration or staff, may complain to one of two committees.

The Academic Fairness Committee handles complaints regarding course grades and evaluation of class performance.

Other complaints involving violation of student rights are head by the Student Grievance Committee.

Students at SJSU have the right to know the class requirements and to be graded only on academic performance (not on other criteria such as attendance).

Students also have the right to disagree with a teacher without being penalized.

Before filing a petition with the Academic Fairness

Committee, students are required to attempt to resolve the matter with the faculty member involved.

If this process fails, the student may then file a petition with the committee and present any evidence supporting a change of grade.

The committee hears the case and makes a recommendation. Copies of the recommendation are sent to the student, the instructor and the department chairperson.

The case is then reviewed again by an ad hoc committee consisting of two faculty members within the department. A member of the Academic Fairness Committee sits in on the deliberations but does not vote.

This ad hoc committee also makes a recommendation. The department chair then makes a decision on the matter and assigns a grade.

Petitions for both the Academic Fairness Committee and the Student Grievance Committee are available at the university ombudsman's office, Administration Building, room 201, at 277-2262.

Dr. Charles Whitcomb, university ombudsman, screens cases for both committees. His office will attempt to mediate disputes for students who do not wish to use the committee process.

More students eligible for aid

Middle income students' eligibility for financial aid has been broadened, according to Donald Ryan, director of financial aid.

"With the passage of the Middle Income Students Assistance Act, three-fourths of our enrolled students are eligible for the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG)," Ryan said.

The Act allows students to apply for financial aid that were previously ineligible because they were in a higher income bracket.

The BEOG is a grant and does not have to be paid back.

To be eligible, a student must fill out a Student Aid Application (SAAC). The BEOG is only available to full-and part-time students, U.S. citizens, students with financial need, and students without a bachelor's degree.

During the 1980-81 school year, grants will range from $200 to $1,800.

According to Ryan, the BEOG is still available. From the time of application, it takes six weeks for the check to arrive.

Another program available is Work Study. Students with financial need are placed in on-campus and off-campus jobs in a field relating to their major, if possible.

In 1979/80, 2,200 students received close to $2 million through the Work Study Program.

"Many job opportunities for part-time work up to 20 hours are still available," Ryan said.

The last aid still available to full- and part-time students is the Guaranteed Student Loan Program. Students must submit forms to be evaluated in order to determine eligibility, Ryan said.

The loan is made by a commercial institution, but is guaranteed by the federal government. An undergraduate can borrow up to $2,500 per year. A graduate can borrow up to $5,000 per year.

Nine months after graduation, the first payment is due on the loan. Interest is paid by the government while the student is in school. When the student begins payments, he assumes the 7 percent interest rate.

For all aid, forms are still available at the Financial Aid Office in Dudley Moorhead Hall, Room 235, or call 277-2116.

Health Center spells relief for students' aches, pains

Treatment of illness and injury is provided free of charge by the Student Health Service to all currently registered SJSU students.

The Health Service at Ninth and San Carlos streets, is funded by the student services fee collected during registration and by general funds from the state of California.

Laboratory work and X-rays required during the treatment of an illness or injury are also provided at no charge by the Health Service.

A pharmacy is on the first floor and prescriptions written by staff physicians are filled at cost. The minimum cost is 50 cents. No medication costs over $3.

Other services are provided for a charge.

An allergy clinic provides testing and immunization. The fee is $1 per immunization and $1 per test.

Pregnancy testing and birth control counseling are provided free of charge. For students requesting birth control services, the cost is $10 for an examination. Pap smears are $3.

Free foot screening is provided by a local podiatrist who volunteers one afternoon a week at the Health Service.

The Health Service is open from 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday. It is closed on weekends and some university holidays.

Students are encouraged to make appointments by calling 277-2222.

A student body card must be presented at the time of appointment. Students who walk-in are seen on a first come first serve basis. Scheduled appointments and emergency cases take priority. Consumer information guides with detailed information on the services offered may be picked up at the Health Center.

Could You Use an Extra $50-$80 a Month this Semester?

There are lots of ways for a student to earn extra money. But most employers require regular hours. And even if your class schedule happens to fit your employer's need, mid-terms and finals often don't. If you're healthy and reliable, in two to four hours a week, being paid on the spot, you can earn up to $80 cash a month! Easily ... on a flexible schedule to accommodate you. Become a blood/plasma donor. Once or twice a week, visit the nearby Hyland Donor Center. Donating plasma is simple and safe. In fact, the donation process, called "plasmapheresis," removes from whole blood the only element it needs -- the plasma. Other whole blood elements, the red cells, are returned to you. Want to know more? Need that cash now? Call Hyland Center for an appointment at 294-6535. Hyland Donor Center, 35 S. Almaden Ave., San Jose, CA.

Freshmen need 48 units

G.E. requirements boosted

Incoming freshmen at SJSU will be required to take eight more units in general education, moving the total requirements from 40 to 48.

According to Dean of Undergraduate Studies Brett Melendy, the additional units are in the basic skills area and are comprised of an upper division writing workshop and one class each in qualitative and quantitative reasoning.

The qualitative and quantitative requirements can be met by taking math, logic or computer science classes.

The goal of the new G.E. program is "to make a coherent, common core," Melendy said.

Students may be able to waive the total 18 units in the basic skills area if they pass a competency exam for each of the courses.

"If the student is competent, there is no use going through the drill," Melendy said.

The general education requirements include 18 units in basic skills: written communication, oral communication, qualitative reasoning, quantitative reasoning and an upper division writing workshop.

The other G.E. areas include humanities, sciences and social sciences, and total from eight to nine units in each area. Three to six upper division units are also required.

Since 1976, there has been a concern among faculty and administration that there was no "in-faculty members and two students, was formed last fall and devised the basic skills courses.

The Academic Senate approved the G.E. program last spring.

The additional required units for general in the majors, but at this time "nobody has come to us and said they've had to increase units in the major," he said.

He added most people recognize the importance of general education.

Melendy said students

additional class in G.E., Melendy said.

The faculty, as well as students, ought to be able to integrate knowledge, he added.

By August 1981 all students will be required to pass an upper division writing exam in order to graduate, Melendy said.

This requirement was originally adopted by the California State University and Colleges system Board of Trustees in 1977. Known as Title X, the requirement says all students must pass an English usage exam in order to graduate.

It was delayed by one year because of the changeover in deans in the Undergraduate Studies Department, Melendy said.

Students can waive the new requirements by taking an exam.

tegrity or common elements" in the G.E. courses, Melendy said. That same year an ad hoc committee was formed to develop a new G.E. program.

A Board of General Studies, comprised of nine education will not necessarily mean an increase in the amount of time spent in completing education, Melendy commented.

The various schools and departments had to do some shuffling of courses should be able to use effectively both their general education skills and those in their majors.

By next fall, all the schools and departments within SJSU are expected to devise interdisciplinary courses which will mean an

Many services available

Center informs students of current job markets

The Career Planning and Placement Center is available for students to select and pursue careers. This on-campus service assists students in getting work experience.

Career Planning and Placement is across from the Student Union on Ninth Street.

The advisers are available to students by appointment only. Appointments are made in Business Classroom 13.

The services offered by the Career Planning and Placement, a part of SJSU's Division of Student Services, are counseling, information and workshops.

Programs include the Summer Jobs Fair, Career Exploration Days and Recruitment Presentations.

Workshop topics include resumes, job interviews, job search techniques and televised practice interviews.

There is also a Career Information Bureau where students can meet professionals in the field of their choice and a Resume Service which keeps alumni and graduating students' resumes on file for prospective employers' review.

Career Exploration Days will be September 23. The event is a way to acquaint students with different types of career opportunities by employers from the many invited organizations.

Informational sessions will be scheduled throughout the semester.

Group helps students reach academic potential

ASPIRE is an academic support program that helps students complete their college education at SJSU.

ASPIRE offers a wide range of educational help to assist students in developing skills. Their main objective is to serve students with academic difficulties.

Some of ASPIRE's staff are SJSU students with different ethnic and cultural backgrounds. They help students overcome academic problems. They also give input to various campus departments.

The SJSU Reading Laboratory and English Skills Program work with ASPIRE in assisting students strengthen their basic learning skills.

The students and staff at ASPIRE work together to build friendships amongst the students. They plan cultural and social activities which broaden cultural awareness.

Participation in ASPIRE is open to any student who is enrolled at SJSU, is a citizen of the United States or a permanent resident, and has academic potential, but has not developed adequate skills to succeed at SJSU and can demonstrate a need for supplemental academic support.

Janet J. Felker, director of ASPIRE, says they mainly focus on students who are already here at SJSU. "Students can apply for ASPIRE in any one of their years at the university," Felker said.

Students interested in participating in ASPIRE should apply in Building 0, second floor or call 277-3554. The ASPIRE Center is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Benefits available for vets

The SJSU Veterans Affairs office's primary function is to be "an advocate for the veteran," according to director Bob Sampson.

The center offers many services to vets interested in educational opportunities or just need to talk with someone.

Sampson estimated there are 1,500 vets currently receiving financial aid at SJSU.

As long as a person served over 181 days of active duty in the military and received a discharge other than dishonorable, they are eligible for educational benefits.

The veteran must apply for the 45-month entitlement within 10 years of the discharge date from military service.

The amount of educational benefits received depend upon the number of units the vet is carrying and marital status. The monthly benefits range from payment of fees only for students with five units or fewer to $311 a month for single full-time students. The amount received per month increases with the number of dependants the vet claims.

Dependants of deceased or permanently disabled veterans are also eligible for educational benefits.

Besides financial aid, the VA office offers tutorial assistance to vets who need help with their classes. The office has a list of available tutors or the student can hire a tutor. The VA office will process the paperwork so the student will be reimbursed for the cost of the tutor.

Counseling services are also available to the veteran. Sampson said that because he and most of the workers in the VA center are Vietnam vets they "can relate" to the feelings and problems of other veterans.

The VA office offers educational counseling and does some counseling with alcoholics, drug addicts and others with personal problems.

"The office here is not equipped to handle extensive, in-depth personal counseling," Sampson said, "but we are affiliated with counseling centers downtown that offer that service."

The people at the VA office also offer initial counseling for veterans that are non-students.

The VA office is located in Bldg. O on San Carlos Street. The office is open Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. For more information, call 277-2486.

ABC picks Spartans

by Jerry McDonald

Saturday night at Spartan Stadium, 15,975 fans showed up looking for excitement. None went home disappointed.

The excitement didn't escape ABC sports, either, for they have chosen this Saturday's SJSU-Washington State clash as a regional telecast on their college football schedule.

As a result, the Spokane scheduled game was moved from a night game to the afternoon time of 1:50 p.m.

"The NCAA decides who is eligible to be on TV, and ABC has the final say," Assistant Athletic Director Tom Beckett said of the selection.

"I think they chose this game for a few reasons," he continued. "One, Washington State is a Pac-10 team still eligible for the Rose Bowl. Two, Spartan Coach Jack Elway used to coach at Washington State, which adds interest, plus the fact that our team is exciting and explosive to watch."

Anyone who saw the Spartans 28-14 win over Santa Clara would be hard-pressed to disagree.

The offense picked up where it left off last year, with a passing game that

Spartan linebacker Cheyenne Tuufuli (62) intercepted this Bronco pass and returned it 48 yards to set up the Spartans final touchdown.

would make Woody Hayes shudder with disgust and a running attack led by the spectacular Gerald Willhite that will keep defense's honest.

Sophomore quarterback Steve Clarkson did his best to make Spartan fans forget Ed Luther by completing 21 of 46 passes for 290 yards and two scores, including a 36 yard rainbow into the leaping hands of Mark Nichols as the first half clock ticked to zero.

Much had been made of the debuts of Clarkson and Willhite, who is replacing Jewell Thomas, now of the Los Angeles Rams.

Willhite had worried observers late last year by undergoing knee surgery, but his 154 yard rushing performance and seven pass receptions for 54 yards dispelled any doubts about his health.

The junior tailback also gave Spartan fans an extra thrill by flipping through the air in a perfect somersault after his first of two scores.

Unfortunately, Spartan

fans will see no such acrobatics again. "Coach told me not to do it anymore," Willhite said. "He said it is against the rules."

But all the credit shouldn't go to the Spartan offense.

"I thought the defense showed a lot of poise, emotion and togetherness," Elway said. "Of course we need some work, but you always need that."

The important thing was that we came up with a few turnovers that turned the game around."

Free safety Ken Thomas thwarted one Bronco drive in the second quarter with an interception of a Dave Alfaro pass, and Gill Byrd stepped in front of another Alfaro offering when the Broncos were on the San Jose 12 yard line and threatening to tie the game.

The final crushing turnover for the Broncos came after a Clarkson pass was intercepted on one of his only poor throws of the night. Santa Clara quarterback Mike Heinrich, who had been giving the Spartan defense fits with his running, cut loose a pass that was intercepted by linebacker Cheyenne Tuufuli.

Tuufuli then lumbered 48 yards on the return, setting up the final Spartan touchdown, a 10 yard run and dive by Willhite.

Olympia Gold Soccer Classic brings third place to Spartans

by Joe Aseo

The SJSU soccer team came out smoking Sunday and beat Santa Clara University 1-0 in the consolation game of the Olympia Gold Soccer Classic at Buck Shaw Stadium.

Seattle-Pacific University beat Chico State on a 4-1 shootout in overtime to take the championship after the teams tied 0-0 in regulation time.

Soccer coach Julie Menendez shook up the starting lineup Sunday as he moved Simon Chafar from midfield to forward, Joe Pimentel from forward to midfield and Gonzalo Sandoval from defender to midfield. Pimentel scored on a line drive kick past Bronco goalkeeper Jeff Carroll 48:27 into the game after Carroll stopped a shot by midfielder Javier Margarito.

The changes made a definite improvement over Friday night. Chafar hustled and passed and kept the Spartans on the move throughout the first half. The Spartans took 13 shots on goal during the game, with Margarito garnering four and forward Guilio Bernardi taking three.

Again, the Spartans played superb defense as defenders Louie Ortega, Mark Tomlin and Rich Azofeifa allowed SCU only 14 shots on goal. Goalkeeper Britt Irvine had a fine day with four saves.

"We played much better today than Friday night. We created scoring opportunities and the players are getting used to their positions," Menendez said.

The Spartans played sluggishly in Friday night's 1-0 loss to Chico State. SJSU passed poorly, as they couldn't hit the open man and there was a definite lack of hustle by forwards Bernardi and Sergio Cardoza. Play was mostly limited to the midfield, with the ball constantly changing hands. SJSU was held to just three shots on goal, while Chico fired off 11.

The Spartans dominated play in the first half of Sunday's game, keeping Santa Clara on the defensive. Defenders Azofeifa and Tomlin roamed midfield at will, with slashing slide tackles to take away SCU opportunities.

Forwards Chafar and his replacement John Hubacz performed well as playmakers in their first appearance at that position.

Standouts for the Broncos included goalkeeper Carroll, forward Mark Hunter, midfielder Mark Abele and defenders Dev Rendar and Tim Fritz. Fritz was credited with three of the 14 shots on goal, and Carroll had eight saves in a busy afternoon. The championship game was a repeat of Friday night's game between SCU and Seattle-Pacific - long. Both games ended in 0-0 ties at the end of regulation time with Seattle-Pacific firing a total of eight shots on goal against SCU, and only five against Chico. A shootout at the end of overtime in both games proved the only salvation for Seattle-Pacific, as they outscored SCU on penalty kicks 3-0, and Chico 4-1.

Income, housing considered

Students may get welfare

by Libby Lane

SJSU students may be eligible for Medi-Cal and food stamps, depending on their income levels and housing situation. Eligibility is determined by the Santa Clara County Department of Social Services.

Applicants for either Medi-Cal or food stamps will be asked to complete a statement of facts for each program. Rules and regulations for each program differ and eligibility is determined separately.

Verification of income is required for both programs. Income includes earnings, loans, grants, veteran's benefits and any parental contributions. Receipts for rent and any other allowable deductions will be requested. Car payments or car insurance are not allowed as deductions under either program.

The Medi-Cal program has established a maintenance figure of $336 a month for one person. After allowable expenses have been subtracted from the student's income, this becomes his net income.

If the net income is below $336, the student is eligible for a Medi-Cal card, which is issued monthly. If the student's monthly net income exceeds the standard, he might still be eligible for a card but would be responsible for a share of cost.

School expenses that are allowed include tuition, fees, books and child care.

Services covered by Medi-Cal are doctors visits, hospitalization, prescriptions and dental care. However, since not all providers of medical services accept the Medi-Cal card as payment, it is the student's responsibility to find a doctor that accepts Medi-Cal.

Santa Clara Valley Medical Center in San Jose takes the Medi-Cal card for all its services.

According to Ann Confer, who supervises eligibility at the Martha Street office, the food stamp program is undergoing major changes in eligibility standards for students. Confer said that under the new rules, many previously eligible students may no longer be eligible.

She said, though, it can't hurt to apply and to let the department make the determination.

The district office that services the campus community is located at 516 E. Martha St. (corner of 11th and Martha streets). The telephone number is 299-3848.

If the student is not living close to campus but lives in Santa Clara County, there are nine other offices available. The phone number to call to find the closest office is 299-1121.

Confer added that they do not take applications over the phone and that the student will be required to make an application in person. She also said that the Martha Street office is extremely backlogged and they are already scheduling appointments into October.

She suggested making an appointment soon or calling other offices.

Planning for new library is made more challenging due to budget restrictions

by Jo Ann Souza

Planning for the new library and implementing a computerized check-out system are the biggest concerns of SJSU's new library director, Maureen Pastine.

However, the new library takes priority, she said.

One of the obstacles Pastine faces is staffing the new building, since the library budget won't allow for any new staff members.

Budget cuts at the governor's level caused funds to be diverted from the library to other areas on campus. Fewer students will be hired because the wages have gone up, Pastine said.

Pastine is in the process of compiling a report detailing plans for the new library, which will be distributed to other areas on campus for review, she said. She preferred not to disclose her plans until other library personnel and faculty have seen them.

"It's a good plan, I think, and we need to build on that," she said.

The current library has expanded as far as it can, Pastine said.

"It was a necessity for us to have that (the new library)," she said.

This campus was extremely lucky to get a library, she said. Pastine doubts whether another school in the California State University and Colleges system will get a new library in the next 15 to 20 years.

When the new library is completed, SJSU will have a two-building operation since all the material from the old one will not fit in the new building, she said.

Pastine predicted that the 1980s will be one of the most financially constricted times for libraries nationwide.

In addition to planning for the new library, Pastine and library staff are working on an "on-line" automated circulation system that will eliminate the need for pink cards when checking out a book.

The new check-out system, which will be computerized, should be ready by February 1981, Pastine said.

Prior to coming to SJSU, Pastine spent three years at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, first working as a reference librarian and then as director of the undergraduate library.

Pastine, who was born in Hays, Kansas, earned a bachelor of arts degree from Fort Hays Kansas State University and a master of library science degree from Emporia State University at Emporia, Kansas.

After Pastine has had a chance to survey the library, she will decide if any different or expanded services need to be offered, she said.

"We have to make the faculty and students aware of what we can offer them," she said. "They (librarians) can answer just about anything."

Counseling director resigns, tired of administrative post

In order to finish his career as strictly a clinical psychologist and counselor, David Newman resigned last June as SJSU's counseling director.

"Primarily," he said, "I wanted to spend my last two years away from the stress that administrators face from day to day."

Newman, who will retire in 1982, has headed psychological counseling here since 1971. When the university merged psychological, vocational and academic counseling in 1974, Newman was named director.

Newman said the last six years have been fun and that becoming a close, personal friend of SJSU President Gail Fullerton and working with the university administration was worth the time and effort.

"But the other aspects of an administrative position become tiresome - worrying about the budget and other matters," he said.

Newman, who received a doctorate in clinical psychology from Ohio State University, thought it only natural to finish his career as a counselor.

"I thought it desirable to spend my last few years acting like a psychologist as opposed to an administrator," he said.

Robin Clyde, SJSU counselor, is presently the interim counseling director. Newman said there is a good possibility that Clyde will be appointed to the vacant post, but said it would be premature to guess at this time.
