ABSTRACT

This collection of language activities for the Hispanic adult English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) student emphasizes real life vocabulary and skills. It is addressed to the student, except where a facilitator is needed for dictation exercises. Nonetheless, an instructor's help is necessary for the manual's use. Vocabulary lists in Spanish and English are on these topics: emergency phone calls, arranging for and maintaining utilities services, applying to purchase or rent a home, and applying for a job. A blank job application and lease form are included. Short paragraphs, written by former ESL students, on such topics as drugs, aging parents, disciplining children, and the differences between food in the United States and Puerto Rico also appear. They are intended to stimulate discussion and form the basis for activities in pronunciation, comprehension, writing, and making inferences.

Acknowledgements

I acknowledge with gratitude the enthusiastic support and participation of the Centro Pedro Claver ESL class who were so very generous to share their stories, culture and love with me. Their commitment and energy established an exciting atmosphere for creative education.

I especially want to thank Jose Gonzales for his role as assistant facilitator throughout the year.

A heartfelt thanks to Elvina Seward, Center for Literacy instructor, Jeanne Smith, The Center for Literacy Education Director and Azi Ellowitch, curriculum developer, for their technical assistance, reassurance and energy which significantly added to the quality of content.

I wish to express my gratitude to Beverly Boatman, Lillian Rosario and Richard Wells for the valuable roles they played in production of this manual. Beverly Boatman patiently word processed the manual with great care. Lillian Rosario proofread the Spanish sections. Richard Wells took the photographs and arranged for the production of the final copy.

Funding for CPC classes was provided through the Job Training Partnership Act and ARA Services. Many thanks to these funders.

I also wish to thank Centro Pedro Claver for providing the site for the ESL classes and the board and staff of the Center for Literacy for their commitment to quality education. Finally, I would like to thank the Pennsylvania Department of Education Division of Adult Basic Education for funding the development and production of this manual.

Dedication

I dedicate this manual to the students at CPC, whose commitment to learning inspired a new approach to teaching English as a Second Language.

How This Project Came About

The idea for this manual emerged at the Center for Literacy's program for Hispanic adults located at Centro Pedro Claver (CPC). CPC is a vital community services center situated in the heart of one of Philadelphia's largest Hispanic neighborhoods. Since 1984, CFL has offered classes two days a week in beginning and intermediate English to Hispanic adults at this site.

One day, as a teacher new to the Hispanic community, I asked my students, "Do you read English?" The answer I received was: "Un poquito" (a little bit). Next, I asked: "Do you write English?" The answer received was, "Un poquito" (a little bit). Then asked, "Do you speak English?" the students answered, "Yo no hablo Ingles" (I don't speak English). However, I soon understood that the students understood all my English questions. They could understand English but they couldn't or wouldn't speak English.

Later, I gave the students a writing assignment to answer the question, "Why don't you speak English a little bit?" they answered in complete sentences combining some English words with Spanish words. Their responses to the question fell into two categories: the fear category and the lack of confidence category. "I'm afraid people will laugh at me because I don't speak good English" and "I don't speak English because I don't pronounce the words correctly" were the most common responses. From this questioning and writing process emerged the challenge and task of designing curriculum materials for Hispanic students that would help them be less afraid to use English and begin to build their confidence. The process of writing I Don't Speak English. . . But I Understand You helped many students learn English in a way that was comfortable for them.

This goal was achieved by implementing a learner-centered participatory approach which validated, rather than negated Spanish, the student's primary language. While ESL is often taught without using the students' first language, we discovered that the adults in this program felt better when they had the assistance of their native tongue. Validation of a people's language validates the people themselves. The population for whom this curriculum was written are a devalued and fearful people due to low socio-economic status, inferior living conditions, drugs and crime in their neighborhoods, and overall low self-esteem. Many of these students had lived in Philadelphia for years without learning English, remaining isolated and confined to their communities. By allowing them to use their own language in the classroom, they felt at ease and acknowledged as a people. Later, when comparing English and Spanish, students had a point of familiarity, and a reference with which to compare newly learned language skills to previously known language skills. Through this process, students' knowledge of English vocabulary, grammar, usage and pronunciation was greatly improved. Students were more willing to try to speak English and less afraid, overall, to begin to become members of the English speaking world.

The themes in this manual emerged from issues that students either brought directly to the ESL classes, or when reading about the subject, reacted to with strong interest. These themes provided an opportunity for the development of the ESL skills and activities in the manual.

The stories written by the students were generated through pictures, reading codifications, and brainstorming activities. (see references p.74)

The vocabulary reflects the words, and pronunciations that students identified as difficult. Many of the language exercises developed when the class engaged in correcting their own writings. Some Spanish translations may differ due to the diversity of the class and because Spanish dialects vary according to the students' birthplaces.

How To Use This Manual

This manual is not meant to be the only resource used in an ESL class for Hispanic adults. It is meant to be supplemented with additional materials. Except where the facilitator is indicated for the dictation exercises, the directions in the book are written to the student. The instructor's help is necessary, however, for completing all the exercises. Throughout the use of the manual it is recommended that students compare English and Spanish vowel sounds, suffixes and grammatical structures.

This manual can also serve as a catalyst and a model for students and teachers to develop new materials. Pictures, readings and discussions can generate new themes for students to write about. Students can read each other's writings. Together, with their instructor, they can identify what gives them the most difficulty when trying to learn English and begin to focus on these difficulties in their studies. Whenever possible activities should combine speaking, listening, reading and writing. In this way stronger areas (usually listening and reading) support weaker areas (usually speaking and writing) when learning ESL.

Donde Nosotros Necesitamos Hablar Ingles
Where I Need To Speak English

I think it is very important to know how to speak English on the telephone, in case of emergency.

I need to speak English to report fire, to call for police, to report gas leaks, and to call the doctor.

If you make a call to Puerto Rico, you must speak English because the operators speak English.

Las Casas
Houses

Las Casas en Puerto Rico

Houses in Puerto Rico

The housing in Puerto Rico is not the same as United States.

The weather is a tropical one.

We do not use glass windows.

The houses do not have heaters and do not have chimneys.

In Puerto Rico houses are built with cement blocks.

Most of the houses are separate and have only one floor.

Only the government makes houses of two floors or more.

Some people pay rent for these houses, but it is cheap.

VII. Comprehension - Please write your answers. Use complete sentences. You may use the story to find the answers.

1. Name 3 materials used to make houses.

2. How are houses in Puerto Rico different from houses in the United States?
3. Who builds houses with more than one floor and why?
4. Is housing cheap or expensive?

VIII. Discussion

How else is housing in Puerto Rico similar/different from housing in the United States?

Las Casas en Puerto Rico y Los Estados Unidos

Houses in Puerto Rico and U.S.

The houses in Puerto Rico are different than United States because they are made from cement blocks.

Many are made from wood and their roofs are made from zinc.

Some houses have two stories.

There are apartments from the government for people of low income.

There are houses expensive too.

The houses in Puerto Rico don't need heaters because our climate is warm.

Our island is tropical.

In U.S. the houses are made from bricks outside and inside they are sheet rock and thin wood.

The houses need heaters because several months are cold.

Even though our island has four seasons, we feel only one.

There are houses expensive and inexpensive too like in Puerto Rico.

Christmas in Puerto Rico

In Puerto Rico, we celebrate Christmas for two weeks.

On December 24, we celebrate "Noche Buena". (The Good Night).

The family comes together to sing Christmas songs and to play tropical instruments.

At twelve o'clock we give presents.

On December 25th, we go to church to celebrate the birth of Jesus.

On January 6, we celebrate Three Kings Day.

This day is for the children.

The children get ready for this special day on January 5 by cutting grass and putting it into a little box.

They hide the box under their beds.

In the morning, the boxes are gone and the kids find toys.

The kids believe the three kings' camels eat the grass, the same as Santa Claus eats the cookies.

Everybody is very happy.

I love Christmas in Puerto Rico.

Students of low resources participate in this program.

As assistant teacher, I was a helper in the third grade.

It was a great experience.

I finished the university and got my B.A. in social work.

I started to fill out applications everywhere, but I couldn't find a job.

One year later I found a job as a history teacher in a high school in Liza.

I taught Puerto Rican history to five groups of tenth and eleventh grades.

It was only for two months.

One year later, in 1987, I decided to come to the United States for a new life, but the language was different.

Now I'm studying English at the Lighthouse and Centro Pedro Claver Schools.

I need to learn a lot of English to find a good job as a social worker.

I've already filled out some applications in different places (hospitals, government offices, etc.).

I still haven't a job.

even though I have a Bachelor's Degree.

What We Do With Our Children

In our family, our children need to learn more about how to be quiet, obedient, and quick to follow their teacher's instructions.

They need good behavior and peacefulness.

Parents have no place for harshness in our family.

As parents we should dearly love our children.

We should also express this love through teaching.

Also as parents we should teach the word of God.

We need to show them the power of education.

The children need to honor their parents and respect them.

The parents and children need a good personal relationship.

Ways of Disciplining My Child

I try to talk very firmly to him once or twice, if that don't work I will give him a good spanking.

Sometimes I might strike him once or twice with the fly swatter.

That works but when I really feel that he needs a good punishment I remove all of his favorite toys from his room and put them in the basement.

I also don't let him watch his favorite T.V. programs and sometimes I may also show toward him less affection.

That works most of the time.
