INTRODUCTION

Why Educate Consumers?

The arena for consumer activity in the United States has developed into a highly complex "free market system" which demands knowledgeable and competent consumers if it is to function openly, honestly and maintain balance in an ever-changing social environment. This need to educate consumers has been emphasized fand amplified during the past 15 years by the greatest surge of "consumerism" this country has ever known.

The task of educatihg consumers has become an assumed responsibilily of the school, of the commuifity, of govemment, of business, of industry, and of a myriad of loose network of varied and diverse activities and efforts which surprisingly embrace some common goals and basic conceqns.

What is Consumers', Education?

Consumers' education, as defined by the U.S. Office of Consumers' Education, is "an effoit to prepare consúmers' for participation in the marketplace or for situations involving use of resburces, public and private, by imparting the understandings, attitudes, and skills which will enable them to make rational and inteligent consumer decisions in light of their personal values, their recognition of marketplace atternatives, and social, economic, and ecological considerations."

Traditionally-consumers' education: has focused on shopping 'wisely,' managing persohall and fammly finances, plannang and budgeting expendkures. understanding both *ntemal (Values, ǵoals, and relationsships)' and externall (advertising, propaganda) mọtivatoons aland pressures, miaking appropiate consumer decisions, tyoding. pitfalls. of fraud and deception, and fighting back when necessary.

More 'recently emphasis' has been placed on understanding, securng, and usinghtuman resources such as heath .care, Medicare and Mésicald. education. welfare and Social Şecurity beenefits, colmmùnity services, governmental protective and enforcement 'agenctos. and the fike..

Another purpose of consumers' education is to prepare consume to function tr the broader policymaking decisions which may not directly mpinge on the individual or farmly unit Consumer issues. such as energy. utiltiles, housing, advertising: product safety. and regulatory agencies are stressed. The goal is to belp individuals carry out the role of consumer/citizen with enthusiasm and confidence. but also with logic, farness, and, responsiblity.

How'Does Consumers' Education Happen?

 1 . The. process of consumers educatior/takes place in both formal and informal setings: in efementary and secondary"schools it may be presented, as a separate course, as. -units of study, in éxisting courses, or in fully integrated. inferdisciplinary programs. At the postrecondary level, in ebmmunty colleges, universities. and' adulf education proCgrams, consumers education is, designed both for consumers and for consumer educators. Many varriations, such as intemships and toooperative efforts involving education: government'business. are recent innoyations in higher education.:frifórmally, consumers eduaation is accomplished through communty programs, coouriseling, consumer information, the 'media, 'respóns̈ble' manuiacturess and retailers.. and , a - varrety of agènces and orgañizizatoons. Activites are generally tallored to the speccial needs and interests of the sporisoning agency and/or the target population.

Dewsinning and conducting consumers' education activities. etther formal ( (n school) or informal (out-of-school). requires careful planning. Fọcusing primartly on those whis are exploring the field, or entering it for the first time, this booklet is meant to be a source of guidance and !mmediate reference.

Personal and Family Financial Management

Managing financiateresources is basic to consumers' education. It requires competerice in recordkeeping, using banks and bankifig services, using but not abusing credit, recognizing risk and usingoinsurance to the best ädvantage. practicing deferred gratification and preparing for emérgencies with a savings program, and letting resources "work for you" through investments. Good financial management culminates in a finàncial plan-a budget-which greatly enhances the probability of reaching consumer goals.
