ABSTRACT

This is a compendium of almost 700 16mm films about Africa. The guide lists existing resources that are readily available in the Midwest to educators in elementary and secondary schools, colleges, universities, and communities. Selected were films being distributed by nonprofit educational, religious, and commercial distributors; films from African embassies and United Nations missions; documentary and feature films; and films of both very high and low quality. Stereotypical, insulting, or biased films are included as illustrative of differing political orientations and conflicts in Africa. Chapter one lists the films by topic which some college-level Africanists use, and it offers some evaluation of films. Chapter two lists available films by title and provides multiple sources for each by code along with their 1974 prices. Descriptive information and appropriate grade level are provided if known. Chapter three lists film distributors by state and gives their addresses and assigned codes. The document concludes with an annotated list of sources of information about African films.

INTRODUCTION

In our attempts to involve students in the realities of Africa instead of stereotypes about the continent, this Program has sought good audio-visual materials. As more and more secondary teachers include Africa in their curricula, the demand for these films increases. We consider the dissemination of good films about Africa of very high priority.

This compendium of 16mm films about Africa is a first attempt to survey the existent resources readily available in the Midwest to educators in schools, colleges, universities, and communities. It has been undertaken as one of the outreach services of this African Studies Program.

The catalogue includes all known 16mm films about Africa currently being distributed by non-profit educational and religious as well as commercial distributors in the Midwest. Films which are available only from non-Midwestern distributors also were included -- primarily from African embassies and UN missions for feature films and for films on Southern Africa. The catalogue includes both documentary and feature films as well as films of both very high and very low quality. We have not excluded films known to be highly stereotypical, insulting to African peoples, and biased in political content -- such as those of the South Africa Information Service -- believing that teachers may even use bad films to illustrate political orientations and conflicts in Africa.

An initial chapter suggests films which other Africanists find useful in their own instruction.

For each film, we have combined information from the varying descriptions provided by distributors. The suggested levels of usage have been taken from the comments of the distributors and do not reflect our judgments.

Perhaps of greatest use will be the listing of multiple sources for the same film and the 1974 prices charged by distributors. These prices, of course, are subject to change.

We would appreciate comments about this catalogue from those who use it, critiques of individual films which educators find to be particularly useful or especially poor for particular audiences, and addresses of distributors we may have omitted. These will be utilized for a revision if the catalogue proves to be useful.

A number of persons have worked on various stages of this large project, including Sheila Gerzoff, Patricia Andrews, Deborah Foster, Joseph Munoo, Bruce Mann, Marylee Wiley, and Steve Baier, who organized it in the final form.

Funding for the preparation and production of this material was provided through grants from the U.S. Office of Education through the NDEA Title VI Program for Language and Area Studies Centers.

David Wiley, Chairman
African Studies Program

Guide for the Use of Listings in the Catalogue

Whenever available, information on the date of production, running time, and whether the film is black and white or color, sound or silent, is given after the title of each film. Recommendations about the age or grade level for which the film is appropriate, supplied by film distributors, are in the upper right hand corner of each listing. Abbreviations referring to the distributors for the films appear at the end of the listing and use postal codes to indicate the state in which the distributor is located, so that users may quickly find the distributor nearest them. Distributors' addresses appear in the last section of the catalogue. OH-2, for example, refers to the second distributor listed alphabetically under Ohio. WI-5 refers to the fifth distributor listed in Wisconsin.

The abbreviations used in the catalogue are the following:

min	minute	I	intermediate (grades 4-6)
mm	millimeter	J	junior high (grades 7-9)
col	color	H	high school (grades 10-12)
b/w	black and white	C	college, junior college
K	preschool and kindergarten	A	adult education, general adult
P	primary	R	religious

I. RECOMMENDATIONS ON FILMS ABOUT AFRICA

In January of 1974, the African Studies Program of the University of Wisconsin sent a questionnaire on films about Africa to Africanists teaching in midwestern colleges and universities. Those who received the questionnaire were asked to recommend films, to list those which they felt should not be shown to American students, and to list films suitable for each of the fifteen learning goals listed below. Along with the questionnaire was a list which included all of the most commonly shown films on Africa, although it was not nearly as complete as this filmography. The teachers who responded represent the disciplines of history, sociology, political science, anthropology, geography, music, art, and linguistics. The following evaluations are based on information from the questionnaires returned to the African Studies Program. The films listed as "highly recommended" in the first category are those films which respondents mentioned most frequently.

S. Films which are not recommended:

Those responding to the questionnaire listed the following films as dated, biased, technically poor, or superficial. Some of them, however, may be used by skillful teachers to illustrate colonial or racist attitudes.

Africa and Schweitzer (paternalistic, expresses non-African attitudes)
Africa in Change (dated)
Africa: South Africa
African City
African Storyteller
Africans All (superficial, misleading)
Backward Civilization (The Berbers of Northern Africa) (dated, poor narration)
Black and White in South Africa (twenty years out of date)
Bura: African Sculpture Speaks (Africans depicted as simple, fearful people)
Desert Nomads (simplistic narration)
East Africa: Ends and Beginnings
East Africa: Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda (bias toward white settlers)
Giant People, The Watusi (out of date, simplistic, superficial)
Hausa Village (dated, incomplete explanations)
Leopoldville
Liberia, Africa's Only Republic (dated)
Life of a Primitive People
Les Maitres Fous (suitable only for a knowledgeable audience)
The Man in the Blue Helmet
Medicine Men of Africa
Nawi (lacks action)
Negro Kingdoms of Africa's Golden Past
Nigeria: Giant in Africa (soft on colonialism)
Problems of Emerging Nations (blatantly offensive, simplistic)
Pygmies of Africa (paternalistic and dated)
This is Tanganyika
Tropical Africa (contains biases and no African views)
Tropical Forest Valley
The Vicious Circle
Yesterday's Worlds: the Nile
White Africa

The following films, while listed as objectionable by some respondents, were frequently recommended by others.

A Luta Continua (dull)
Ancient Africans (simplistic)
Cows of Dolo Ken Paye (easily misunderstood unless put in proper context)
Gentle Winds of Change (dated, technically poor, characters move too rapidly)
Omwale: The Child Returns
Third World Festival

South Africa's policy of enforced segregation of non-whites is presented through interviews with supporters and opponents of apartheid: Minister of Justice Balthazar Vorster, Chief Albert Luthuli, and liberal editor Patrick Duncan. Scenes of the South African economy, society, and apartheid system provide an excellent overview of the nation. This film is unique because it contains several interviews with white South African government leaders stating in person their apartheid policy. These statements no longer are made publicly. In addition, original scenes of the famous Sharpeville massacre are reproduced. In spite of its age, the film remains an excellent summary of the South African problem for those not familiar with Southern Africa.

ADDITIONAL SOURCES OF INFORMATION ABOUT AFRICAN FILM

The Black Experience in Children's Audiovisual Materials, The New York Public Library, Office of Children's Services, 1973, 32 pp, paperback, 1.00 (available from Office of Branch Libraries, New York Public Library, 8 East 40th Street, New York, 10016).

A selective and annotated listing of records, cassettes, films, filmstrips, and multi-media kits on the Black experience--primarily in the USA; however, includes many materials on African culture of special relevance for teachers interested to link the Black experience in the USA and in Africa.

Film and Audio-Visuals on World Development, Canadian Council for International Cooperation, (75 Sparks St., Ottawa, Ontario, K1P5A5), June, 1973, 62 pp (in French and English), paperback, 2.00.

A good listing of films, photographs, slides, multi-media and videotapes on world development--people, children, agriculture, health, education, population, relief, environment, and individual country studies. Primarily from Canadian sources. Good annotations and details on films. Listing of major Canadian distributors of these materials.

Africa Projected: A Critical Filmography, by Jane Martin, Walter Adams, and Harold Weaver, Waltham, Massachusetts: The African Studies Association, 1972.

The results of three ASA-sponsored film evaluation conferences in Boston in 1971 are reported. Suggestions for organizing film conferences are reported. Evaluation criteria and results are presented for 21 of the most important films about Africa.

FAO Film Loan Catalogue, 1973, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 1973.

This 188 page catalogue is oriented primarily to assisting nations in agricultural development with films on fisheries, poultry, pigs, etc. However, it also includes listing of films on international development, nutrition, rural institutions and services, environmental conservation, and other topics of general interest. Most films are of non-USA origin.

Black Film: A Selected List (prepared by the New York Public Library for the Black Film Workshop, New York Public Library, June 2-6, 1970, and revised January, 1971).

Includes listing of twenty-one films about Africa. *

Guide to Films on Africa, Barbara Brown, compiler (World Affairs Council), 70 Newford Street, Boston, MA, 1971). *

Africa South of the Sahara: A Resource and Curriculum Guide, Barry K. Beyer and Percy Hicks, (Thomas Y. Crowell, 1968).

Includes a study of professional literature on the subject, guidelines for setting up courses, a survey of student attitudes and understandings about the region and its peoples, pre- and post-tests to measure what students know, and how attitudes have changed a result of study, and a fully annotated listing of more than 600 written, audio, and visual classroom materials dealing with Africa, including a separate listing of those most highly recommended. A directory of agencies, embassies, and trade organizations representing Africa south of the Sahara provides a highly useful resource for curriculum enrichment. *

Black and Afro-American Art: Sources for Visual Materials (Albany: New York Education Department, Division of Humanities and Arts, 1970).

Gives sources for visual materials on Afro-American art, sources for slides, films, and film strips, names and addresses of publishers of books on Afro-American art, film libraries in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts, addresses of producers and distributors of films and film strips, and names of companies producing audiovisual aids for Black Studies programs. *

Films on Africa (prepared by the African Studies Program, Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana, 1971).

Describes, but does not evaluate, films about Africa in the Indiana University Audio-Visual Center and the African Studies Research Collection. *

Teaching African Development with Film, Norman J. Miller, American Universities Field Staff Report, East Africa Series, Vol. X, 1 (January, 1971).

Contains bibliography of literature on African films and annotated list of films on African development. *

African Film Bibliography 1965, arranged by Warren D. Stevens, Occasional Paper No. 1 of the Committee of Fine Arts and the Humanities, African Studies Association. Bloomington, Indiana: African Studies Association, 1966.

Films on Africa, U.S. National Commission for UNESCO, Washington: U.S. Government Printer (1962 O-612215), 1962, paper, 10 pp.

A very brief listing of 32 films with lengthy annotations and distributors available in the early 1960's.

Lifelong Learning, (Periodical), Extension Media Center, 2223 Fulton Street, University of California, Berkeley, California, 94720.

A good journal for finding recently created African films and audio-visuals on international development, multi-cultural studies, and general social studies topics.

*Annotations asterisked were taken from Jane Martin, et al., Africa Projected: A Critical Filmography, Waltham, Mass., 1972, pp. 5-6.

Aid to Media Selection for Students and Teachers, compiled by Yvonne Carter, et al., Washington: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1971 (Catalogue No. HE 5.234:34045, 1.00).

A general teachers aid to assist in finding books, periodicals, and some audio-visual materials (5 pp), including a very useful bibliography of bibliographies on multi-cultural teaching materials, primarily focused on the Black American experience.

Audio-Visual Resource Guide, 9th Edition, Nick Abrams, ed., New York: Friendship Press, 1972, 477 pp., 8.95, paperback.

A large compendium of films available in the USA. Focuses primarily on religious films (compiled by National Council of Churches), but also includes many films on African art, culture, history, and contemporary affairs. Includes a list of film distribution centers by state.

Educators Guide to Free Social Studies

Materials: A Multimedia Guide, 13th Edition, 1973 (annual), compiled by Patricia Suttles, Randolph, Wisconsin: Educators Progress Service, Inc., 1973, 656 pp., paperback, 10.50.

This large volume lists some materials available for the study of Africa without cost. However, the educator should take great care since most of these materials are free because they espouse the economic or political interests of a large company, a particular government, or some other interest group.
