ABSTRACT

This unit was developed to give students in grades 7-12 a fuller understanding of the Latin American world, which is a growing part of the multicultural atmosphere in the United States. The unit is used currently in the seventh grade gifted Language Arts program at B. T. Washington Junior High School (Florida). The unit includes; (1) basic information on mythology; (2) specific study of the Aztecs, Mayas, and Incas; (3) cultural exploration of Mexico and Peru; and (4) a cross-cultural and literary analysis of three Latin-American short stories. The unit may be done in whole or in part. The myths, cultural exploration, and literature are not interdependent. Due to copyright laws, the short stories and myths are not included in this packet. Only the lesson plans and answer keys are included here. It will be necessary to purchase the following two books if the short stories and mythology units are to be utilized: "Contemporary Latin-American Short Stories" (Pat McNees Mancini) and "Warriors, Gods, and Spirits from Central and South American Mythology" (Douglas Gifford). Syllabus and grading scale

Grading

Any grading scale that the individual teacher wishes to use is fine. The items to be graded are writing assignments. Holistic scoring is, therefore, suggested, especially for the essay on mythology and the cultural oral presentation. Please feel free to create a rubric for this based on the areas or skills that are to be emphasized. Completion grades may be taken on mythology story and short story information. A participation grade may also be given for class discussions of the stories.

Syllabus

1. Basic components of mythology, note-taking
2. Reading of the myths with summaries for each story.
3. Plan and write an essay on mythology.
4. Choose a facet of Mexican culture on which to give an oral report.
5. Read the short stories, answering questions and completing the cross-cultural analysis for each.

Lesson 1 - Mythology

Objective: gain a deeper understanding of how all belief systems operate.

Method: Students take notes on characteristics of mythology and third world nations. Teacher discusses each point as it is presented.

Materials: Use notes provided. "Mythology and Latin-America" pages 1 and 2, and "Hero Myths". Overhead sheets may be made from these pages or use the chalkboard. Photocopying is also an option.

Procedure: Present notes in an oral discussion format, allowing time for copying and asking questions.

Mythology and Latin-America

Third world nation characteristics:

1. small number of middle class
2. very low wages, most live in poverty
3. industries are small or non-existent

Latin-America - basic characteristics

1. historical traditions, both social and religious are prized
2. Nationalism, or pride in one's nation is NOT prized. e.g. There are many conflicts and military coups (takeovers) happening
3. Machismo is very important to the men, A masculinity and superiority over women that they must maintain, therefore women are considered to be less intelligent
4. society is quite varied
 - a. wealthy Spaniards or those with Spanish roots
 - b. a small middle class in the larger countries like Brazil
 - c. many poor people of mixed heritage, mestizo
 - d. many of pure Indian descent who combine their myths with the Christianity the Spanish brought

Third world myths- common ideas

1. anachronism- things in the myths are out of time and place
2. explain natural phenomena, humans submit to the will of gods
3. solving a world problem, e.g. how the world came to be

All Myths of every culture:

1. serve to convey beliefs
2. instill awe and a sense of mystery
3. explain the world
4. provides a symbolic image of explaining the world
5. maintains social order- gives divine justification to social practices and institutions
6. keeps man in harmony with his world and his society by telling him how to behave
7. tells how to interpret, bear, and confront suffering
8. have plots that relate to where the people live

REMEMBER: All belief systems do these things.

These "myths" we read were religious beliefs to the people practicing them. We call them "myths" because they are so far back in history from us and because we have given up nature for science.

WESTERN MYTHOLOGY

1. reflects male dominated society, chief gods are male
2. divisions between man and god(s), man cannot become a god, that is an offense to the gods.
3. male gods triumph over female gods, give birth through the mouth e.g. Zeus- created Athena, goddess of wisdom, from his head Olodumare- from Nigerian myth, vomited up the earth and heavens
God- created light by speaking
4. literate culture- had writing system
5. similar to hunting cultures, aggressive
6. mortality of man
7. aggression/ambition are important
8. hero myths more common
9. kings are human and therefore mortal

EASTERN MYTHOLOGY

1. equality of all gods and of gods with humans
2. female gods dominate
3. mystical oneness of all gods
4. immortality/reincarnation
5. not likely to have hero myths
6. world was created, not pre-existent, distinguish between time before creation and time after creation
7. time is cyclical like nature, therefore we always return/reincarnation
8. man strives to realize the divinity within him
9. Kings are divine and sometimes sacrificed to keep crops/earth alive

PRIMITIVE MYTHOLOGY- non-literate peoples- no writing system

HUNTERS

1. violent death due to magic
2. individualists
3. depend on luck/magic for survival
4. that which dies is reincarnated
5. victim is willing sacrifice
6. rituals ensure that victim is reincarnated
7. male in authority

PLANTERS

1. natural death is part of life cycle
2. communal, give up individuality, share everything
3. depend on gods/elements for survival
4. plants are absorbed by nature
5. require sacrifices, one dies so community can live
6. female in authority

ALL PEOPLES HAVE BELIEFS CONCERNING

1. survival after death, (heaven or reincarnation)
2. sanctuary or sacred area
3. necessity of ritual
4. sacred power of god(s)
5. initiation into religion

HERO MYTHS

1. all cultures/belief systems have them
2. all have same basic plot and therefore the same meaning
3. describe the rediscovery of a lost part of the human personality, courage and bravery can be shared by all those who believe the myth
4. the hero is like a savior, like what we all ought to be

PATTERN OF THE HERO MYTH

1. separation- the hero ventures forth to encounter opposing forces
2. initiation- a victory is won against the forces
3. return- the hero comes back to give his community/culture whatever object or insight he has gained

WHAT MAKES HIM A HERO?

1. He does what no one else can or will do
2. He does it on behalf of his culture or all of mankind
e.g. Prometheus bringing fire from the gods to mankind

Lesson 2 - Myths of the Aztecs, Mayas, and Incas

Objective: Students begin to connect myth information in lesson one with the myths from these Latin-American cultures.

Method: Reading, summarizing, comparison and contrast

Procedure:

1. students read introduction or story
2. summarize plot, climax, resolution being sure to include character's names.
3. students use information on Eastern, Western and Primitive hunter/planter cultures to find items in the story that fit these characteristics. List them by the category in which they fit. If a hero myth exists in the story, determine which events fit the hero myth pattern. Try to list at least 2 items that fit into one of these categories for every story. For each of the cultures, you should have some eastern, some western, and one hero myth characteristic.
4. repeat procedure for each story and the introductions. Stories may be read aloud if time permits.

Materials:

1. notes on mythology
2. stories from Warriors, Gods, and Spirits...
3. story list;
 - Aztec
"Gods of the Aztecs", The Five Suns", The New Sun, Myths of Creation, The Story of Quetzalcoat1, pp. 13-25
 - Inca
The Incas, Children of the Sun; The First Incas, The Legend of The Lake, Ollantay and the Inca, The Girl from the Sky, pp.52-57 and pp.65-73

Lesson 3 - Mythology Essay

Objective: Use the essay form to explain how one of the three cultures fits Western and Eastern mythology as well as the hero myth.

Method: Create an outline of information from which to write the essay, and then create a 5 paragraph essay.

Materials:

1. notes on mythology
2. summaries/notes on stories from the culture chosen. Choose Aztec, Inca, OR Maya, no combinations.
3. prepared outline format on mythology, "Guide for Mythology Essay". One copy for each student to keep.
4. paper for planning and writing.

Procedure:

1. student chooses one of th three cultures
2. find notes about that culture's stories to use with the outline
3. follow outline format, finding the type of information requested
4. write the 5 paragraph essay. Take care to use proper paragraph structure and to use transition sentences between paragraphs.
5. peer evaluate/edit the rough draft
6. revise essay and create a final copy.

This may be counted as an alternative assessment test.

Lesson 4 - Cultural Explorations

Objective: To explore one facet of Mexican culture and share that knowledge with the class.

Methods: Students write coherent paragraphs and read their report to the class while explaining the photographs/illustrations accompanying their area.

Materials:

Note: Before applying information sheet to poster board, please make a master set for copying purposes. You may also wish to laminate the posters once finished.

1. posterboard, glue, markers, illustrations. Use the pictures to create a poster for each cultural area. Include the information sheet with it.
2. copies of information sheets to hand to students

Procedure:

1. allow students to view posters and to choose one area for their presentation. The 22 areas are as follows:

1. Art
2. Crafts
3. Entertainment
4. Society
5. Religion
6. Politics
7. Elections
8. Poverty/The Economy
9. Education System
10. Mexico City

17. Tulum
18. Uxmal
19. Chichén Itzà
20. Spanish History
21. Modern Revolutionary History
22. Peru and the Incas

Note: If there are more than 22 students, allow some to do the same area as another, but no more than 2 per area.

2. Students read and organize information into at least 2 paragraphs. Check for proper paragraph structure and make sure that no information is left out. Illustration information should be put in to the paragraphs where necessary, and not simply glossed over at the beginning of the report.
3. OPTIONAL ACTIVITY - Peer editing can be done to check for paragraph structure and mechanics.
4. Students read paper to class while using the poster as a visual aid.

Note: An oral presentation grade as well as a writing grade may be given with this lesson.

dances from Michoacan, Chiapas, Tixtla, Zacatecas, Tlacotalpan, Tlaxcala, Yaqui indians of Veracruz, Aztecs, and Jalisco

Bull fights - bull is forced to charge and become tired, picadors stab bull in shoulder with long staves, sometimes the horse gets hurt

The banderillas come out and the three men take turns at the bull's shoulder with long picks (in pairs) that must stay in shoulder

noviero stabs bull in shoulder, sword must remain in shoulder bull falls, and is stabbed at base of skull to cut spinal cord meat is fed to the orphanages, the only saving grace of this sport

noviero- no ice fighter, summer season

torero- professional fighter, winter seas

mariachis- music from Jalisco, many groups compete in Garibaldi Square

INFORMATION

RITUALS PREVENT VIOLENCE BUT ALSO KEEP OUT TOTAL DEMOCRACY contentment with system as it is government is evasive, wasteful, devious, corrupt president- all powerful for his 6 year term, no re-election, controls congress, judiciary, governors, PRI political party (Partido Revolucionario Institucional), bureaucracy, economic and foreign policy, military. negotiator between labor, church, army, media each administration redistributes power and privilege PRI members will be picked to fill posts, PRI candidate chosen by president to run in next election advancement= get close to president or his nominee for next president, show loyalty/discipline PRI always wins elections church has pwr because 93% of mexicans are catholic, control festivals, and symbols of unity like Virgin of Guadalupe (gwa-da-loo'-pay) army doesn't have much power, generals get rich illegally, sometimes through drug trafficking government funds opposition parties to appear democratic opposition sometimes gets local or congressional offices Communist party- hero is Ché Guevara (chay gwa-va-ra), often suppressed, members have "disappeared", been tortured, assassinated government works on system of favors / patronage officials seen as thieves, police take bribes, poor get no justice because they can't pay bribes bribes get faster service and favors
PRD- Partido Revolucionario Democracia wants true democracy, original revolution goals, address demands of 45 million in poverty, freedom of unions, press, expression, recovery of social problems, education PAN - Partido Action National- Diego Gevallos, 1988 voted to burn ballot boxes to hide true results of the election corruption gets in way of environmental efforts, but President Salinas is trying, strongly nationalistic unlike other 3rd world nations

INFORMATION

1st televised debate 1994, Zedillo, Cevallos, Cardenas 65% turnout at the polls voting- get ink on thumb to keep people from voting twice Zedillo part of young democratic group in the PRI
PRI= unions, big business
PAN= conservative, Catholic, small business PRD= rural populations, equality of services common to stand in long lines, up to 3 hours in some places because ballots ran out PAN/PRD complained of irregularities
PRD rally in zocalo after PRI victory, claiming fraud, 20,000 people
Cardenas called on President Salinas to resign partly because of 1988 election fraud, urged civil resistance to government Zedillo had 20% lead over all other competitors reports that rural Cardenas supporters were turned away at polls, their names disappearing from register, lack of materials Instituto Federal Electoral - IFE in charge of elections, new agency voting card- color photo, holograph of the Mexican eagle, voter's signature, thumbprint, electronic security strip
PRI always wins- a kind of one-party dictatorship, people afraid to vote for other parties, people won't be interviewed about choices in any place where they can be identified, like home or work, for fear PRI will punish them
PRI - long history of suppressing opposition, especially communists, original candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio assassinated while campaigning, PRI splitting into 3 groups, old members who want no changes, middle aged members who can't decide what's best, and "Democracia 2000", the young men who want more real democracy congress could be only 40% PRI and 60% opposition which makes it harder to get 66% approval for new laws

THE CANDIDATES

ERNESTO ZEDILLO (say-DEE-yoh), 42 of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI). Married with five children. Has a master's and doctorate in macro and international economics from Yale University. Joined Mexico's ruling PRI in 1971 and served as secretary of planning and budget and secretary of education under current President Carlos Salinas de Gortari. Was a key architect of Salinas' economic reform policy. Served as campaign manager for Luis Donaldo Colosio, PRI candidate who was assassinated in March. Zedillo was selected to replace him. Is viewed as the candidate who most represents the status quo. Campaigning on a theme of continuing basic thrust of the Salinas presidency. PROSPECTS: The front-runner. Had 46 percent in a recent nationwide preference poll of 1,526 people.

AP

DIEGO FERNANDEZ DE CEVALLOS, 53, of the conservative National Action Party (PAN). Married with four children. A longtime opposition legislator. Has called for a continuation of free market reforms that revitalized the Mexican economy. But also supports a devaluation of the Mexican currency, the peso, which would aid manufacturing and agriculture but hurt banks and stocks. Has opposed abortion and artificial birth control.

PROSPECTS: Surged in early polls after strong performance in Mexico's first nationally televised presidential debate. In a recent nationwide poll, was favored by only 19 percent.

CUAUHTEMOC (kwow-TAY-muk) CARDENAS, 60, of the center-left Democratic Revolutionary Party (PRD). Married with three children. A well-known opposition politician who is the son of one of Mexico's most beloved presidents. Ran in the 1988 presidential race and he was believed by many to have won, only to have it stolen from him in PRI vote fraud. Draws most of his support from urban and rural poor. Calls for modifications in the North American Free Trade Agreement to aid agricultural and industrial producers who have been hit by U.S. competition. PROSPECTS: Has consistently taken third place in nationwide preference polls.

THE ELECTION

Some details of Mexico's Aug. 21 elections for president and Congress:

PRESIDENCY — Seven men and two women are candidates for single six-year term beginning Dec. 1. Major candidates: Ernesto Zedillo of ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, Diego Fernandez de Cevallos of National Action Party, Cuauhtemoc Cardenas of left-leaning Democratic Revolution Party.

SENATE — Size to double from 64 members to 128, with four members each from 31 states and federal district. Voters will elect 98 and 32 will be holdovers elected in 1991. Entire Senate to be replaced in next election, with members limited to single six-year term, coinciding with presidency.

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES — 500 members, 300 elected directly, remaining 200 distributed among parties in proportion to percentage of vote. Three-year term.

VOTERS — About 47-million of estimated 50-million Mexicans of voting age, roughly 95 percent, registered and 45.7-million have picked up credentials needed to cast ballots.

POLLING PLACES — 97,438, open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

INFORMATION

Chiapas is poorest state in Mexico, not enough land, schools, hospitals 30 million peasants below pverty line mostly farmers in rural areas, grow enough to feed family, a little to sell 70% of the population live day-to-day, hand-to-mouth pneumonia, enteritis (inflammation of the intestines) common due to lack of sewage treatment/clean water, or health care 33 million are considered to be malnourished middle class getting poorer, wealthy getting richer U.S. invested 60 billion dollars in Mexico because of NAFTA (North American Free Trade Agreement) economy- was closed to imports, had high-priced, low-quality Mexican goods, 1980's re-opened economy, increased export dollars current middle class wages are still adequate for consumerist attitudes no unemployment insurance, so people must find other work, lack of good jobs with decent pay, informal jobs and self-employment increase, like street vendors for example 33% of women work somewhere reform schools- mostly filled with kids in extreme poverty, commit crimes to come back for food/shelter, 80% of them return poor, rural people see Mexico City as chance for better life, usually dad goes first, sets job, brings family 30% of families in Mexico City sleep in a single room with the average family size being 5 people large families common- an investment for old age, someone to help earn money, take care of elderly parents over 1000 people come to Mexico City each day from poor, rural areas easier for women to find work than men

American School - since 1888, very much like U.S. schools, most classes in English, private, much wealth, nice, modern facilities, tennis, pool, gym, football, baseball, computers

Colegio de la Paz Vizcainas - originally a girls school run by the church, private now, still emphasizes needs education, "character training of women", grades k-12, primary, secondary, and preparatory levels public school - compulsory through grade 9, preschool ages 4-6, primary grades 1-6, secondary grades 7-9, preparatory grades 10-12

preparatory level is to train you to do something, though it could be simply to get ready for college teachers teachers finish secondary training and go to Escuela Normal for special teacher training for preschool or primary levels, secondary training requires longer more specialized training some efforts in rural areas to teach kids in their native language first, then in Spanish, helps maintain culture parents not usually concerned with schoolwork most barely complete grade 6, 4th grade is the average, 16% complete grade 6

primary teachers teach all subjects teachers are sometimes poor workers because the pay is so low and you must go wherever the government sends you

87% literacy rate

14 million in primary school, only 6 million in secondary school higher education - universities, free for those who qualify but space is limited, test for qualification, 15% of 20-24 year-olds attend

40% of those are female most kids only see books in school, very few libraries, parents won't buy them

INFORMATION

1990- 20 million people (twice size of New York City), 400 square miles polluted water, air, traffic noise pollution smog heavy, winter dust storms (tolvaneras) blow in dries excrement and bacteria because of sewage problems, no rain in winter - worst time common joke among citizens- if the sewage and bacteria in the air was fluorescent, Mexico City wouldn't need streetlights garbage disposal inadequate, much of it goes uncollected biggest problem- factory/auto emissions character of city- slow pace, formal dressing, markets, foods, music, colonial architecture prominent, Chapultepec Park is common Sunday outing for relaxation
U.S. influence in newspapers, music, movies, television, U.S. shows translated into Spanish, "Dallas" is popular Sewage problems- can't flush toilet paper, throw it in trash, public market facilities can be disgustingly dirty, must pay for toilet paper everyone who can afford it drinks bottled water, nice restaurants/hotels use bottled water altitude 7,200 feet, in a mountain basin which holds in polluted air city planners call it "a case study in urban disaster" many homes built by occupants, sometimes squatters who stay on land until they can own it subway- handles over 4 million people each day, women's cars are separate to keep them safe from the working men cultural facets- things that are important and abundant- markets, shoe stores, church traditions, handicrafts, dancing, Ballet Folklorico, music (everyone knows the words to the folk music), street musicians archeological sites, artifacts, Indian anthropology, the PRI, bribes, federal agents with submachine guns, bargaining, food/cuisine La Merced- largest market, supplier of food to the city most neighborhoods have shops, apartments, houses, a market, street vendors, bars, small restaurants

Quechua, Aymara. LITERACY: 73 percent. LIFE EXPECTANCY: 57 years, low for South America. GEOGRAPHY: Dominating the nation, the Andes rise with stupendous verticality to snowfields and glaciers at 6,768 meters (22,200 feet). They wall off the arid coast where little rain falls. Snowmelt from the Andes feeds rivers that cross the arid coastal plain and supply irrigation farmers. The moist eastern slopes of the Andes tumble to dank, humid, jungle lowlands whose rivers are the sole highways for transportation. Peru lies atop an area where the Pacific Ocean crust slides beneath the continent, resulting in severe earthquakes and occasional volcanic eruptions. HISTORY: For 20,000 years diverse Indian peoples have made their home in Peru; 7,700-year-old Paloma may be the oldest village in the Americas. The Incas were ruling from Cuzco when gold and silver lured the Spaniards, who considered the very word Peru synonymous with glittering riches; "Vale un Perú"—worth a Peru—was long a phrase denoting anything of immense value. In 1824 Gen. Simon Bolívar's forces ended Spanish rule on the continent. GOVERNMENT: Peru has since been ruled largely by authoritarians. The election in 1980 of Fernando Belaúnde Terry gave democracy a chance. ECONOMY: Oil and minerals such as silver, zinc, gold, lead, iron, and copper from huge open-pit mines at Cuzajone and Toquepala dominate the export-oriented economy, with the United States the major customer. Recent drilling for oil in the jungle has upped proved reserves to 800 million barrels and led to the 800-million-dollar, 825-kilometer (513-mile) trans-Andean pipeline. Ongoing exploration has located phosphate deposits on the north coast and coal in the northern mountains. Manufacturing is the fastest growing sector of the economy, but agriculture remains the chief occupation with sugar cane and cotton grown on the coast, coffee in the uplands, and gardening and ranching where possible.

Peru

DWARFED by the vastness of South America, Peru has a vastness of its own. Superimposed on a map of the United States, it would stretch from Chicago and New York City in the north to Miami in the south. AREA: 1,285,216 sq km (496,225 sq mi), third largest nation on the continent. POPULATION: 17,031,000, fourth on the continent. Nearly half—mostly whites and mestizos—are concentrated along the coast. The rest are Indians, mainly Quechua and Aymara subsistence farmers in the mountains. CAPITAL: Lima, pop. 4,738,000. RELIGION: Roman Catholic. LANGUAGE: Spanish.

Lesson 5 - Latin-American short stories

Objective: Compare two cultures through the use of literature.

Method: Students read and analyze three different stories, then answer questions and make comparisons between their own culture and that of the stories.

Materials:

1. copies of Contemporary Latin-American Short Stories, using the 3 stories listed on the question sheet which follows.
2. copies of the question page
3. the answer key

Procedure:

1. students read story
2. answer questions about that story
3. find at least 3 similarities and three differences between the story's culture and their own.
4. repeat steps 1-3 with each of the three stories.

Note; for older students, the following stories may be used for further cultural and literary exploration:

- "Big Precipice" pp. 78-99
- "Yzur" pp.40-51
- "The Blue Bouquet" pp. 170-175
- "The Vacant Lot" pp. 204-207

Latin-American Literature

Read the following stories from Contemporary Latin-American Short Stories:

"The Doll Queen" by Carlos Fuentes pp.258-279

"Just Lather, That's All" by Hernendo Tellez pp.208-214

"Sunday" by Mario Vargas Llosa pp.410-432

First, answer the following questions about the stories:

1. Characterize the barber in "Just Lather...". What are his values, attitudes, and personality? Explain your choices with evidence from the story.
2. Characterize the general in "Just Lather...". What are his values, attitudes, and personality? Explain your choices with evidence from the story.
3. What are the climax and resolution of "Just Lather..."?
4. Why does the narrator search for Amilamia in "The Doll Queen"?
5. Describe how the narrator felt about Amilamia when he was 14. Give examples from the story.
6. What does he discover at her house? Describe the second and third visits.
7. In "Sunday", what is the dirty trick Rubén is planning?
8. How does Miguel keep Rubén away from Flora?
9. What happens between Miguel and Rubén while swimming? Why is Miguel's promise to Rubén so important?

Next, create a cross-cultural comparison for each of the three stories.

1. List at least 3 events or attitudes that are similar to the U.S.
2. List at least 3 events or attitudes that are different from the U.S.

Latin-American Short Story Answer Key

Class discussion and participation is recommended when reviewing answers.

Story Questions

1. Answers will vary; easily unnerved, he trembles when the general enters and says he was upset; loyal, he considers himself a rebel, Torres's enemy, works as an informant, considers becoming a hero by killing Torres; proud, careful not to cut his customers, careful to give a smooth shave, keeps his razor sharp
2. Answers will vary; loyal, follows government orders to find rebels, kill them, "ALL" of them; cold-hearted, tortures rebels, shoots, hangs them, makes village watch; brave, says "killing isn't easy", knew that barber might try to kill him
3. Climax- barber decides he's not a murderer; resolution- Captain Torres leaves shop letting barber know what he had expected
4. He is reminded of her because of the card she gave him. He decides he's bored and it will be exciting to find her.
5. He thought of her as a sister and playmate. He'd watch her run down the hill to him, he'd read to her, find pine cones, make paper boats, and spin her through the air.
6. Second visit- a shrine to Amilamia made by her parents. A porcelain doll of the girl in a coffin, her room full of toys and candies, and filled with flowers like an altar to the dead.
Third visit- Amilamia answers the door. She is deformed and in a wheelchair. Her father is embarrassed by her and angry that she answered the door. He threatens to beat her.
7. Rubén is planning to get Flora alone at his and Martha's house so he can ruin her reputation and prove his machismo.
8. Miguel invites everyone to lunch and has to challenge Rubén to a drinking contest. A swimming contest results from this.
9. Rubén gets a deadly stomach cramp and Miguel has to save his life. Rubén begs Miguel not to tell the guys, and in return, he tells them that Miguel won the race. The promise is important because Rubén would lose his machismo if he had admitted he had to be rescued by Miguel.

Cross-cultural analysis - Answers will vary

"Just Lather, That's All"

1. Similarities- pride in work, barbers and shaves, trusting a professional, conversations in the barber shop, assassination attempts, morals outweighing violence
2. Differences- killing rebels, military run government, anti-government rebels, guerilla-type warfare

"The Doll Queen"

1. playing in parks, longing for past, deception, imagination, grief
2. laundry on roof, shrines to the dead, street vendors, "señor, Señora"

"Sunday"

1. city-life, bars, movies, competition among friends, love, romance
2. machismo, taking a challenge is a must, servant girls gather on day off
