ABSTRACT

The 1993 report presents information from an annual survey of the states concerning enrollment of limited-English-proficient (LEP) students in public elementary/secondary and adult education. It updates an enrollment database covering the school years 1985-86 through 1993-94. An introductory section describes and summarizes the study. Subsequent extensive data ta s present: (1) K-12 and adult enrollments for each year of the cabase and each state and territory; and (2) profiles for each state, containing data on total public school and adult education enrollments, reported LEP enrollments, LEP percentages, program numbers and funding in several program categories, identification criteria, and first languages of LEP enrollees, for each year. Two trends are seen: that the number of students recognized as LEP is increasing; and that more school systems are reporting LEP student information. Identification criteria continue to vary by state. Further research on teacher certification requirements, program models, and estimates of limited-English-functioning students is recommended. (MSE)

This is a report of the Limited English Proficient (LEP) Student Enrollment Survey results received in response to a January 1993 request for information and requests for verification of data recorded through November 7, 1993.

This report is an update for the data reported by Olsen (1989, 1991). The database now covers seven years, from 1985-86 to 1991-92.

This report is in two main parts: (a) this narrative summary with tables showing K-12 and adult enrollments by state and by year from 1985 and (b) State Profiles which show complete data compiled. State Profiles are the main body of this report.

Data Collection. The request for recent enrollment information was mailed to each Chief State School Officer January 1993. In addition, information was obtained from alternate sources including the National Center for Education Statistics, the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Languages Affairs, the Office of Vocational and Adult Education, and individuals in various States known to the surveyor. 114 surveys were mailed. 97 surveys were returned. Data are recorded for every state for school year 1991-92; however, complete data were not obtained for every State.

Data Verification. An interim report was mailed in March to each respondent and to each Chief State School Officer with the request that recorded data be inspected for accuracy and completeness. Triangulation was supplemented by telephone and by mail through November. Additional data and revisions were received through November 5, 1993.

Results. Summary tables show total and LEP enrollment for school years 1985-86 to 1991-92 by state or territory for K-12 (Table 1) and adult education programs for school years 1985-86 to 1990-91 (Table 2), including percentage increase or decrease. State Profiles show student enrollment in public schools K-12 and in adult education programs and the additional data compiled for each State: K-12 program types, funding sources, identification criteria used, and primary languages identified by "speakers of languages other than English (SLOTE)."

Examination of Results and Discussion. The data are examined and discussed in the following sequence of topics:

K-12 Enrollments Adult Education Enrollments Caveats State Profiles Ratios Programs / Funding Identification Criteria SLOTE Conclusions

K-12 Enrollments. According to survey responses, total reported LEP student enrollment in U.S. public schools for grades K-12 was 2,524,592 for school year 1991-92. This is an increase of 1,027,043 or 68.6% from school year 1985-86, when reported LEP student enrollment in U.S. public schools for grades K-12 is 1,497,051 <sup>a</sup>.

Impacted states such as California report 21.1 percent of total enrollment 1991-92 as identified LEP, or more than 1 in every 5 students overall. This means on average a class of 30 will contain at least six LEP learners.

Adult enrollment. The number of adult English as a second language (ESL) students is approximately 1,200,000 for school year 1990-91, or about one of every three adults taking classes at or below the high school level (Table 2). Adult ESL enrollment increased by about 350,000 students, or about 40%, between 1985-6 and 1990-91.

Caveats. Reported K-12 LEP enrollment statistics may understate the actual number of students who are LEP. Some students who are LEP may not have been identified, and some students who are identified may not be reported by their state agencies. LEP head counts may not be routinely reported to the state, the data may be inaccessible when requested by the state agency, and the state may not routinely maintain LEP student enrollment statistics. Consequently, not all states report an actual annual LEP student census. Some estimate, some report survey responses from cooperating districts, and some report enrollment in certain programs.

State to state and year to year statistics are not always equivalent. Identification criteria vary from state to state, and a given state may change identification criteria or reporting procedures from one year to the next. Until school year 1990-91 for example, South Carolina only reported students served by the Transition Program for Refugee Children.

Reported adult ESL statistics may also understate the total number of adults who are limited English proficient. Not all LEP adults receive ESL, and not all adult ESL is funded or monitored by education agencies. For example, "amnesty" students under the Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA) of 1986 may receive services funded by and reported to the Department of Health and Human Services. Of the approximately three million eligible IRCA applicants, 70% are estimated to speak "little or no English" (Olsen, 88). In addition to the Department of Health and Human Services, Defen., Interior, Justice, and Labor also offer education to adults.

It should also be noted that adult enrollment statistics may not be equivalent from state to state; that is, the units of measure may be quite different. An adult enrolled in 3 four week programs might be counted three times in one state (duplicated counts) but would be counted as one third student in a state that uses full time equivalence reporting (FTE reporting) based on a 36 week school year.

State Profiles. The State Profiles show enrollment data obtained for up to seven school years for each State or territory beginning with school year 1985-86. It is thus possible to examine and compare specific enrollment statistics for up to seven years. Some statistics are identified as estimates and are printed in italics.

Ratios. LEP Student Percent and LEP to All Student (1 in X) ratios are shown for each year in each state. LEP Student Percent is the percentage of total enrollment that is reported to be LEP. LEP to All Student (1 in X) is the denominator of the fraction of LEP divided by all students. For example, if 20% of all students are LEP, the 1 in X figure is 5; that is, one student of every five is LEP. These ratios are given separately for K-12, adult, and for K-12 plus adult.

Programs / Funding. Programs and funding are described in the State Profiles. LEP students served through various funding sources such as Title VII, the Transition Program for Refugee Children, etc., are shown as reported by the States. Some States reported the number of students served, and some States reported dollar amounts. These data are incomplete and duplicated enrollments may be reported, so comparisons between states have not been computed.

Many States provided year-by-year enrollments according to type of program, such as "transitional bilingual education," "developmental bilingual education," "English as a second language," "Sheltered English," tutoring, and referral to special education. Some states reported the number of students served, and others recorded dollar expenditures in various categories.

Identification criteria. Identification criteria are described in the State Profiles. Some descriptions are taken from Title VII State Summaries Reports and are so identified.

Most states report types of criteria (such as oral and academic language proficiency), procedures for identification (such as interview, home language survey, standardized testing, etc.) or methods used to collect statistics (such as survey of districts, statewide census, and special project reports).

R.E.W-B Olsen November 1993

SLOTE. The primary languages of "speakers of languages other than English (SLOTE)" identified here a z not the only languages monitored by the States. New York for example monitors 137 languages but only 41 of those 137 languages are identified in this report. Second, in some instances districts report only the most numerous languages to their state agencies.

Conclusions. These survey data support at least two conclusions. The first conclusion is there are an increasing number of students in the nation's schools who are recognized to be limited English proficient. Reported LEP student enrollment K-12 increased 68.6% from 1985-6 to 1991-2 and now represents more than 6% of total public school enrollment. Adult ESL enrollment increased about 40% during this same period and represents about 30% of all adult students enrolled at or below the high school level in education department programs.

The second conclusion is that more school systems are reporting LEP student in formation. In 1989 when this survey was first undertaken, 30 states reported K-12 LEP enrollment data for school year 1987-88. K-12 data are now recorded for every state for school year 1991-92.

A related hypothesis is that there is increased awareness of and concern for LEP learners. States that in the past have not maintained LEP student data contributed this year. Arkansas for example is organizing an annual statewide LEP student census. Also, many States report changes in identification criteria, management information systems, and program model.

Identification criteria continue to vary from state to state. A student who is identified as LEP in one state might not meet another state's definition. One State includes only students who are profoundly or severely limited English proficient, specifically excluding "Lau Category C" students. N any states use a percentile reference point on a standardized test. The percentile cut points are not all the same and some tests used are achievement tests while others are language proficiency assessments. It continues to be perplexing that a 23rd or a 40th percentile performance standard may be considered acceptable for non-native speakers but not for native English speakers.

Suggestions for further inquiry. Three suggestions are offered for future LEP encollment surveys.

First, teacher credential or certification requirements for teaching LCP students could be compared. Second, program models could be examined more closely. For example, how do they reflect language of instruction in content areas, type of ESL instruction, type of primary language instruction, and early or late exit to English only classes.

Third, estimates of limited English functioning (LEF) students could be compiled (Olsen, 1989). This would allow comparisons between the number of students recognized by their school systems to be LEP and those who may be fluent in some ways but are not able to fully benefit from traditional English-only instruction. The Council of Chief State School Officers estimated 4.5 million LEP students for school year 1986-7 (CCSSO, 1990a), nearly three times as many as were recognized by their school systems: 1,549.984 students were identified and reported to be LEP (Olsen, 1991).

As in the past, MANY THANKS to all those who contributed information and insight to this survey.
