ABSTRACT

This guide offers students an overview of most of the reputable distance-education courses in South Africa. The introduction outlines guidelines for choosing higher education and vocational training courses: features and forms of distance education; how to select the right course; how to choose between different education providers (private colleges, technical colleges, colleges of education, technikons, and universities); coping with the demands of distance education; and judging institutional and course quality (credibility, objectives, study materials, self-assessment, and support for learners). The main part of the directory consists of program listings by 157 broad subject areas. Under each subject, institutions are listed in alphabetical order with degree/diploma granted, duration of the program, entry qualifications, and a brief note about the program. Fields of study are indexed by specific subjects and by granting institutions. Mailing addresses and telephone and fax numbers of the institutions are also given. (SAS)

DISTANCE EDUCATION

YOUR GUIDE TO CHOOSING THE BEST HIGHER EDUCATION AND TRAINING IN SOUTH AFRICA¹

INTRODUCTION

Distance education implies that you are able to learn independently, without a teacher. Distance education is an alternative to classroom education - it is an outstanding example of open learning because of the way it opens up learning opportunities to a wider range of people.

FEATURES

Here are some important characteristics of distance education:

- You must be able to take greater responsibility for your learning.
- It gives you the maximum degree of control over your learning.
- It allows you greater freedom in the sense that you can learn at your own pace and in your own time. However, there are still deadlines to meet, for example dates for written assignments and examination dates.
- Distance education takes place under the auspices of an institution. There are many different institutions or education providers, and you must be able to make an informed choice between them.
- You must also be able to choose from a wide variety of courses offered at different levels.
- There is less frequent help available from lecturers.
- You must be able to learn from materials and media.
- It requires more active than passive learning, and it can be formal or informal in nature.
- You must be able to learn alone or in small groups.
- It requires more self-assessment than conventional learning.

FORMS OF DISTANCE LEARNING

Distance learning can take on a variety of forms, sometimes offered in combination with each other. Some examples are the following:

- printed material packages for mail correspondence courses
- interactive audio/video tape material
- television aided learning
- computer-assisted instruction programmes, including Internet and computer conferencing

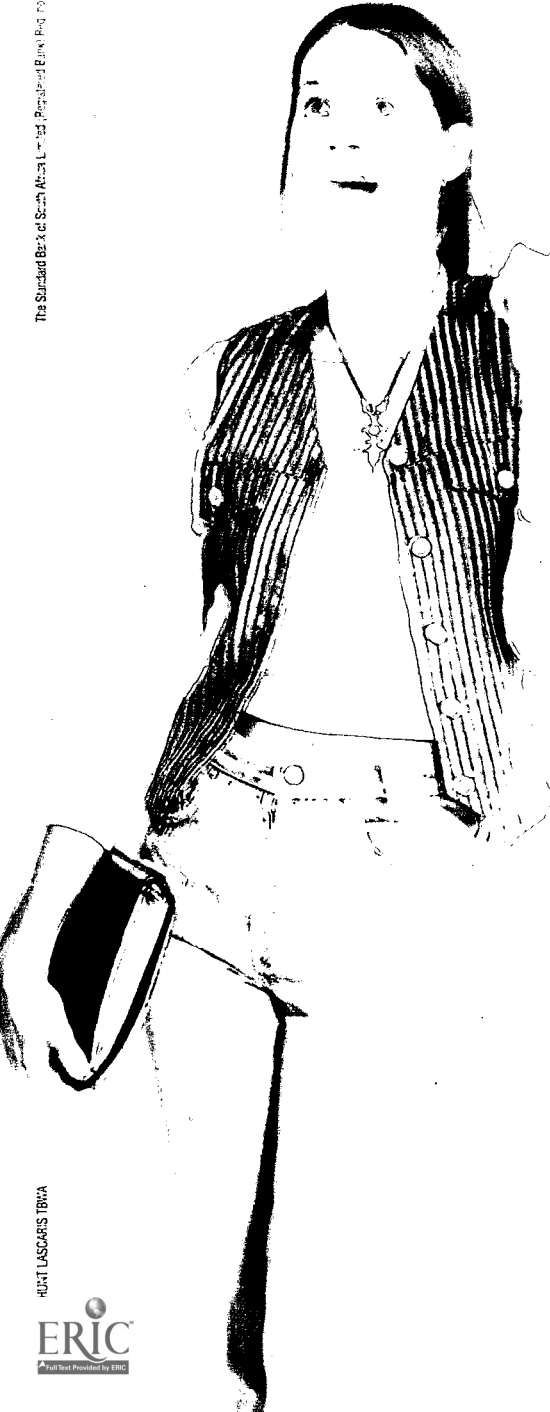

HOW DO I SELECT THE RIGHT COURSE?

As already mentioned, distance education offers you a wide variety of courses to choose from. The fields of study are diverse (accounting to youth work), from elementary level (Grade 7) to advanced postgraduate studies (M. Theology), from the well known (bank management) to the lesser known (auriculotherapy), from the technical (computer programming) to the aesthetic (fine arts), and from the abstract (philosophy) to the realistic (motor cycle repair).

How can I select the right course for my purpose? In this regard you will find this book very helpful as it gives you a good overview of most of the reputable courses available in South Africa.

In order to make a wise choice, you need to be clear about your reasons for wanting to do a distance education course. Here follows a check list in the form of questions you should consider before making a decision:

- What do I need the qualification for?
- Is there a need for such a qualification in the job market?
- What job do I want?
- What promotion am I looking for?
- Will the training improve my job skills?
- Does the course cover what I already know or will it extend my knowledge?
- Do I have the required entry qualifications and/or previous knowledge?
- Will I be able to afford the cost of the course?

HOW DO I CHOOSE BETWEEN THE DIFFERENT EDUCATION PROVIDERS?

This book lists a wide variety of institutions that provide distance education.

Although there is some overlap between training and educational institutions, it is useful to understand the nature of the different institutions. The following brief description outlines some of the differences between education providers:

Private colleges

You may be surprised to know that private colleges are the largest single sector providing training and higher education to students in South Africa. Last year more than 350 000 students registered for various courses at private colleges.

Many private colleges offer high school subjects, while others offer a wide range of skills-based, work-relevant certificates or diplomas in conjunction with professional institutes and associations. The courses are practical, recognized and highly effective. Private colleges also offer degree courses that are accredited with certain universities.

Before enrolling at a private college, ensure that it is acknowledged and reputable by establishing whether it is a member of the Association of Private Colleges in Southern Africa (APCSA).

Technical colleges

These are training institutions that equip students with knowledge and skills that prepare them for specific trades or occupations. Here you learn by doing things that will enable you to carry out the particular job at the end of your training.

Studies at technical colleges are open to individuals who have passed at least Grade 9 (Std 7). In some courses, however, you may be required to have passed a higher standard, particularly in mathematics. Technical colleges usually offer technical, commercial, arts and cultural enrichment courses. These courses are referred to as National Technical Certificates (also known as N Certificates) and range from N1 to N6.

Colleges of education

Colleges of education offer a wide variety of general and specialized diplomas in education. All these diplomas are accredited for teaching and promotion purposes.

Technikons

Technikons are training institutions that provide career-oriented education of a high standard. You would therefore enrol for a course that provides you with theoretical knowledge as well as practical know-how and skills. Technikons strive for a balance between theory and the application of theory in real work situations. To acquire skills that are immediately useful to the employer, you have to spend part of your training gaining theoretical knowledge at the technikon and the other part of your training at the work place, learning to do the practical aspects of the work.

You need at least a Senior Certificate (Std 10/Grade 12), or equivalent, to be admitted to a technikon. Technikons offer a wide range of courses that lead to a certificate, diploma, higher diploma as well as Bachelor's, Master's and Doctoral Degrees in technology in selected fields of study. The nature and duration of the courses and the entry requirements are also given in this publication. As in the case of universities, you must apply at an early date for admission. In many instances selection also takes place.

Universities

Traditionally, universities provide a broad general background to subjects and are more theoretical than practical. The aim is to provide an understanding of fundamental concepts in a particular discipline.

Many of the degree courses offered at South African universities require specific school subjects and a relatively high level of achievement in those school subjects before a student can be admitted to such courses.

WILL I BE ABLE TO COPE WITH THE DEMANDS OF DISTANCE EDUCATION?

If you do not have any experience of distance education, it will be difficult for you to assess whether you will be able to cope with the demands. You may find it useful to consider the following guidelines:

- Can I plan days and weeks ahead?
- Do I have the additional time available for extra studies?
- Can I study on my own with little or no help from a lecturer or tutor?
- Can I carry out independent reading of long articles and books?
- Can I make summaries and learn from the summaries?
- Can I concentrate for long periods of time?
- Do I have a dictionary available and do I know how to use it?
- Will I be willing and able to write an assignment?
- Can I struggle on my own to find a solution to a problem?
- Will I be able to write to a tutor for help with something that I find difficult?
- Can I travel to contact sessions at learning centres?
- Will my family and friends support me?

HOW DO I JUDGE WHETHER OR NOT I'M GETTING A GOOD DEAL?

Before you enrol for on a course, evaluate the course according to the following guidelines:

Credibility

- Is the distance education provider a member of The South African Institute for Distance Education?
- How does the course fit into the new National Qualifications Framework?
- Is there a detailed description of the curriculum available so that I can get an indication of the subjects and topics that are covered?
- How widely will the qualification be recognized and accepted in the employer market?
- What is the opinion of people who have completed the course about its usefulness?

Objectives and learning outcomes

- Is there a clear indication of any prerequisite skills or knowledge?
- Does the package state its learning objectives?
- Are the objectives presented in a friendly and clear way?

Study material

- Is the study material available in a package format?
- Is the material attractive to look at and handle?
- Is the material broken up into manageable sections?
- Is each section introduced in a meaningful and stimulating way?
- Does the introduction alert readers to the way the material is organized and designed to work?
- Is the study time stated in the materials and is this time reasonable?
- Is it easy to find my way around each section?
- Is there a clear explanation on how to use the material?
- Is the material interesting and relevant?
- Is the language clear and user friendly?
- Does the material avoid any sudden jumps in level?
- Does the material include frequent exercises or questions?
- Is there sufficient white space for learners to write notes, answer questions and to do calculations?
- Does the material ensure that the average learner will achieve the objectives?
- Is there a clear and useful summary?

Self-assessment

- Are there any self-tests that can indicate to what extent I have attained the learning objects?
- Are the tasks clearly explained?
- Are the questions and tasks stimulating?
- Are there assignments for assessment by a tutor?
- Do tutors provide immediate feedback?
- Does the feedback include encouragement and praise?
- Does the feedback help you to establish if your answers were right, and if not, why not?

Support for learners

- Will I receive help with my learning skills?
- Will I be shown how to use unfamiliar media?
- Will I receive regular feedback on my progress?
- Will my assignments be returned to me soon enough to enable me to learn from my mistakes?
- Will my tutor keep in regular contact with me?
- Will I find it easy to contact my tutor?
- Will there be someone I can contact immediately if I encounter difficulties I cannot sort out myself?
- Will I be put in touch with other students so that we can work together if we want to?
- Will I have access to the necessary equipment or facilities?
- Will I receive a final assessment of my progress in the course?

CONCLUSION

As you can see, there are many factors to take into consideration before embarking on a distance learning course. Once you have taken all of these factors into consideration you will be able to make a wise choice about your education - the best possible investment in your future. We wish you great success!
