ABSTRACT

This guide contains 550 annotations for English anthologies, textbooks, workbooks, multimedia packages, and other materials for grades 7-12. Works of literature, audiovisual materials, and professional publications are included only when integrally related to specific, listed instructional materials. Entries are grouped into the following subject areas: Literature--Anthologies (basal series, single volumes and packages, general anthologies, poetry anthologies, short story anthologies); Literature--Other; Composition; Composition and Grammar/Language (basal series, single volumes and packages); Grammar/Language (basal series, single volumes and packages); Reading (basal series, single volumes and packages); Language Skills; Dictionary; Spelling; Vocabulary; Humanities; Drama; Film; Mass Media; Speech and Debate; and Tests. Within each section, entries are arranged alphabetically by title. However, the individual titles described in the annotation for a series are often listed by grade level or other sequence of difficulty. Appended are a Directory of Publishers, Ability Level Indexes (Accelerated Index and Remedial Index), Author-Editor Index, and Title Index. (HOD)

Foreword

For some time, the National Council of Teachers of English has contemplated a new kind of professional service for its members: publication of an overview of all commercially produced instructional materials for students of English and the language arts. No such single reference now exists. We thought that such a work could provide English teachers generally, and those committees who select instructional materials particularly, with a detailed and objective description of all English and language arts materials in the marketplace.

As catalogers, we soon found that our best course was to describe thoroughly one kind of instructional material at one school level. Given the galaxy of diverse kinds of instructional materials in English and the language arts, we soon found that we could not, in one volume, describe in depth more than print-based instructional materials for grades 7-12. That discovery forces us, for the time being, to omit wholly audiovisual materials, and materials of whatever kind for elementary school and college students. Perhaps if the present catalog enables secondary school English teachers to screen and sift print-based materials more easily, we shall venture to those other parts of the galaxy.

To compile this Guide, we first solicited entries from 375 publishers. More than fifty educational publishers, including virtually every major house, responded by submitting entries written to NCTE format and subject to NCTE verification. The entries, a total of 550, were arranged and indexed by NCTE.

We wish to make plain that inclusion in this Guide in no sense constitutes NCTE endorsement. Those wishing evaluation of materials will find citation lines to an NCTE journal review of a given textbook or series, but, ultimately, evaluation is most pertinent when it results from review by the particular department or school district. Prices and addresses are of course subject to change.

The Council hopes you will find the Guide a valuable reference and welcomes your suggestions and criticism.

How to Use this Guide

The Guide contains 550 annotations for anthologies, textbooks, workbooks, multimedia packages, and other materials for grades 7–12. Works of literature, audiovisual materials, and professional publications are included only when they are integrally related to specific, listed instructional materials.

Entries are grouped into the 16 subject areas given on the Contents page. Four subject areas are separated into (a) basal series (materials which constitute a self-sufficient curriculum for two or more years) and (b) single volumes and packages. The Literature—Anthologies section is further subdivided into poetry anthologies, short story anthologies, and general anthologies, books which include a variety of genres. An entry which could fit in more than one subject area has been placed in the area of its primary emphasis and cross-referenced.

Within each section, entries are arranged alphabetically by title. However, the individual titles described in the annotation for a series are often listed by grade level or other sequence of difficulty.

Annotations give:

1. Title, author or editor, publisher, copyright date, edition number
2. Prices for PB (paperbound) and HB (hardbound) editions, teacher manuals, and supplementary materials, number of pages, ISBN numbers, ordering information
3. Primary audience, extended audience, and reading level
4. Accelerated and remedial ability level notations where appropriate
5. Description of the text, series, or package components
6. Review lines indicating the month and year of the NCTE journal issue in which the review appeared

The Directory of Publishers gives addresses for all publishers, listed alphabetically by the publisher's full name. The Directory includes the publisher's abbreviation used in the Ability Level and Title Indexes.

The Ability Level Indexes give titles, publishers, and page references for materials that publishers indicated were most appropriate for accelerated or remedial students. The Author-Editor Index gives the first listed author or editor of a title. The Title Index guides the reader to more than 830 individual titles described in the Guide's 550 annotations.

Basal Series

ADVENTURES IN LITERATURE: CLASSIC EDITION. Editors: Quentin Anderson, James Applegate, M. Elinor Brown, Gordon Browne, Francis X. Connolly, James Early, Louis Eisenhauer, Emily Ellison, Thomas M. Folds, Robert Freier, A. R. Gurney, Jr., Gretchen Hankins, Elizabeth Hardwick, G. B. Harrison, Robert Jameson, Arnold Lazarus, Dwight Lindley, Walter Loban, Evan Lodge, Paul McCormick, Egbert W. Nie-man, Elizabeth C. O'Daly, Laurence Per-rine, Winifred Post, J. B. Priestley, V. S. Pritchett, Alan Pryce-Jones, Rita Silveri, Jean Sisk, Joyce Stribling Steward, Virginia Rutledge Taylor. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc. 1963; 1973. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 9-12. Reading level: 7-12. This latest edition of this series presents soundly organized collections of literature, study aids, and a fine arts program that en-riches the literature.

Each book's scope and in-depth back-ground materials permit a wide variety of teaching approaches: themes in lit-erature, types of literature, studies of major authors, humanities, history, aes-thetics. Extended readings include units on our heritages from Greece and Rome
s 7 and 8; The Boor and a unit on Shakespeare in grade 9; Arms and the Man, Silas Marner, and The Bridge of San Luis Rey in grade 10 (an Alter-nate Edition of the 10th grade book contains only one novel, The Bridge of San Luis Rey); The Red Badge of Cour-age and Beyond the Horizon in grade 11; The Rivals and Murder in the Cathedral in English Literature; Pygmalion and The Physicists in Modern Literature; and The Misanthrope and An Enemy of the People in World Literature. Each book also contains over 40 full-page, full-color reproductions of art masterpieces, with commentaries on the artists, their schools, and periods.

Paperbound Reading/Writing Work-shops extend the reading and composi-tion programs in the anthologies, and Lessons in Critical Reading and Writing, also paperbound, contain complete texts of major works and critical commentaries on them.

THE AMERICA READS PROGRAM. Projection in Literature, Counterpoint in Literature, Outlooks through Literature, Exploring Life through Literature, The United States in Literature, England in Literature. Scott, Foresman and Company. 1951-67; 1973-74. Pages unspecified. Write publisher for price. Teacher's resource books available; also explication and review books and teacher's guides for Projection in Literature and Counterpoint in Literature. Primary audience: 7-12. America Reads is a six-year series of traditional and contemporary literature for average and above-average students. Study aids present literary techniques inductively; discussion questions and composition assignments develop students' analytical skills. A Handbook of Literary Terms, 7-9, helps students understand literary techniques. Unit organization gives students an opportunity to compare techniques and ideas in selections arranged thematically, chronologically, or by literary genre. Full-color illustrations.

England in Literature reviewed in English Journal, March 1973.

Exploring Life through Literature reviewed in English Journal, February 1974.

THE GALAXY PROGRAM. Thrust, Focus, Vanguard, Perspectives, Accent, Compass. Scott, Foresman and Company. 1961-1971. Number of pages unspecified. Write publisher for price. See also Tactics in Reading Program, "Reading" basal series section. Primary audience: 7-12. Galaxy is a six-year series combining contemporary literature with a strong reading-skills program. Works by modern authors are arranged in thematic units. Skill-building sections develop basic skills needed for effective reading—word attack, using sensory images, making judgements, locating central idea, setting purpose, and others. Full-color illustrations motivate reading and aid with interpretation. Talking It Over sections, Words in Action exercises, and other study aids increase understanding and enjoyment of literature.

Accent: (United States literature) and Compass (world literature) are each available as four separate paperbacks.

Thrust and Focus reviewed in English Journal, November 1970; Accent: reviewed in English Journal, May 1973.

HOUGHTON BOOKS IN LITERATURE. Designs for Reading (4 books). Lynn et al., editors. Houghton Mifflin Company. 1969. 166-250p. each. $1.35 PB; $2.04 HB. Teacher manual $1.35. Write to Houghton Mifflin Company for further information. Primary audience: 8-9. Extended audience: 10-11. Reading level: 7. Designs for Reading is an introduction to studying literature by genre. It consists of four books: Plays, Nonfiction Prose, Short Stories, Poems. Plays contains 11 plays, representing farce, parody, allegory, the problem play.

Basal Series

and more. These are discussed in terms of how to read drama. Nonfiction Prose consists of 24 selections divided into thematic units. Short Stories contains 20 stories, also divided into thematic units, brief discussions of character, symbol, tone, structure, and more. Poems contains approximately 150 poems, connected with a brief running commentary and occasional questions. Each book contains suggestions for discussion in terms of content and literary technique, along with suggestions for writing projects, and concludes with a glossary of literary terms. The teacher's manual treats the material in all four books.

Reviewed in English Journal, November 1972.

HOUGHTON BOOKS IN LITERATURE. The Range of Literature (4 books). Lynn et al., editors. Houghton Mifflin Company. 1969. 140-500p. each. $1.35-$1.95 PB; $2.10-$2.70 HB. Teacher manual $1.41. Write to Houghton Mifflin Company for further information. Primary audience: 10-11. Extended audience: 9, 12. Reading level: 8. The Range of Literature consists of the genre studies Drama, Nonfiction Prose, Fiction, Poetry. Drama contains five well-known plays discussed in terms of historical context, performance, and literary technique. Nonfiction Prose presents 37 selections representing many nonfiction modes. The stories in Fiction are categorized under Realism, Satire, Fantasy, and Allegory. Poems in Poetry are treated in these units: The Poem: From Subject to Theme; The Language of a Poem; The Poem and Its Speaker; Rhythm, Sound, and Syntax; Poems for Pleasure. Each book contains aids to interpreting the selections, to developing sensitivity to literary techniques, and suggestions for writing projects, and each concludes with a glossary of literary terms. The teacher's manual treats the material in all four books.

HOUGHTON BOOKS IN LITERATURE. 5 Comedies, Twentieth Century Poetry, Scene Seventy: Recent Nonfiction. The Tunnel and the Light: Reading a Modern Fiction. Scanlan, editor.

Houghton Mifflin Company. 1971. 343p. $1.80-$2.25 PB; $3.00-$3.15 HB. ISBN 0-395-12049-7 PB; 0-395-12031-4 HB. Teacher manual $1.41 (treats all four texts). Write to Houghton Mifflin Company for further information. Primary audience: 11-12. Extended audience: 10. Reading level: 10-12. These four books are the third level of the Houghton Books in Literature series.

5 Comedies includes The Rivals by Sheridan, Arms and the Man by Shaw, The Time of Your Life by Saroyan, The Madwoman of Chailot by Girandoux, Captain Fantastic Meets the Ectomorph by Pritchard.

Twentieth Century Poetry contains a wide range of poetry with emphasis on American poetry of the '60s and '70s.

Scene Seventy contains seven thematic units of nonfiction which deal with contemporary problems.

The Tunnel and the Light contains twenty stories from 19th and 20th century literature. These stories confront basic questions about religion, justice, life, and death. The writers range from Nathaniel Hawthorne to John Updike.

Each of these four books contains commentary and questions for the student. One teacher's manual covers all four books.

IDEAS AND PATTERNS IN LITERATURE. General editors: Edgar Knapp, William G. Leary; editors: Allan Glatthorn, Richard Hootman, C. F. Main, Annette Silverstone, Martha L. Smith, Josephine Spear, John Sutton, Ralph Wadsworth. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc. 1970. Primary audience: 9-12. Extended audience: 9-12. Reading level: 9-12. This series offers a fresh approach to high school literature for grades 9-12. The literature, traditional and modern, has been selected for its relevance to the concerns of students and teachers today. Interest in individual selections is reinforced by showing connections with major literary themes and formal considerations in literature.

Each clothbound volume is accompanied by a paperbound Student Guide containing all study materials and resource information.

Literature—Anthologies

The selections are drawn from all periods and represent all major forms. Book III contains American literature; Book IV contains largely British literature, but includes continental writers. Some complete works in the series are The Pearl (Book I), Antigone (Book II), Animal Farm (Book II), Red Badge of Courage (Book III), The Secret Sharer (Book IV), and Arms and the Man (Book IV).

Series reviewed in English Journal, March 1972.

IDEAS IN LITERATURE SERIES.

Leland B. Jacobs, Shelton L. Koot, Jr., editors. Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company. 1966. Approximately 580p. each. Variations (Book 1) $4.05 HB school price; ISBN 0-675-07610-2. Directions (Book 2) $4.14 HB school price; ISBN 0-675-07620-X. Dimensions (Book 3) $4.32 HB school price; ISBN 0-675-07330-7. Teacher manuals $1.50 each. Write to Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company for ordering information. Primary audience: 7-9. Reading level: 7-9. Ideas in Literature presents the thematic cluster approach to literature. This thematic organization provides for a more mature appreciation of literature through comparison and contrast of situations, attitudes, genres, and techniques through the challenging class discussions and writing assignments this type of organization encourages.

Many selections in this program have never been anthologized before; others are long-standing favorites. A Teacher's Handbook accompanies each of the three titles in the series.

LITERATURE: USES OF THE IMAGINATION. Northrop Frye, supervisory editor. Will T. Jewkes, general editor. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc. 1972; 1973. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 7-12. Reading level: 7-12. Revolutionary in concept and technique, this paperback program for junior and senior high school guides students to discover recurring character, story, and image patterns, or archetypes, in the literature of all cultures and periods. With this approach, literature becomes more meaningful, more accessible, as well as easier to teach.

Poems, short stories, myths, parables, filmscripts, and songs are presented together with contemporary photographs, paintings, posters, and cartoons, to further show the basic imaginative patterns all people share. For example, the archetype of the martyred hero is illustrated in Benet's John Brown's Body, the myth of Prometheus, and a eulogy for Malcolm X by Ossie Davis; the rightful kingdom archetype in John F. Kennedy's Inaugural Address, the myth of Perseus, and the song "Aquarius" from Hair.

Students then analyze individual variations in expressing archetypes, to discover the role of imagination in developing literature.

Wish and Nightmare. Alvin A. Lee, Hope Arnott Lee, editors. 434p. $3.90 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333500-9. Teacher manual $1.98; 0-15-333502-5. The Human Seasons (1 LP record) $6.00; 0-15-333503-3. Selections range from folk tales and legends to children's songs, plays, and short stories arranged to disclose such commonly recurring elements as identifying the yearly seasons with the stages of life, and describing the world man wants to build (wish) and the world he wants to escape (nightmare). The recording contains professional and student performances of songs and readings of difficult poems.

Wish and Nightmare reviewed in English Journal, February 1974.

Circle of Stories: One. 274p. $3.00 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333504-1. Circle of Stories: Two. 241p. $3.00 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333505-X. Teacher manual $1.98; 0-15-333507-6. Circle of Sounds (1 LP record) $6.00; 0-15-333508-4. The first book reveals the recurring images of romance (the super hero, the golden age, utopia) and tragedy (the fall of the hero, the limits of human power). Edwin Muir, Carl Sandburg, J. R. R. Tolkien, Keats, Blake, Dickens, Arthur C. Clarke, Dick Gregory, John Hersey, Robert Frost, James Baldwin, Claude Brown are among the authors. In the second book students discover that the same images of irony (man's inhumanity to man) and comedy (love, renewal, triumph in building the more human world) are expressed in many types of literature. Authors include Loren Eiseley, Ray Bradbury, E. E. Cummings, Shakespeare, Lewis Carroll, and James Thurber.

Circle of Stories: One and Two can be used separately or as companion books. The recording contains performances, student and professional, of songs and recordings of difficult poems.

Circle of Stories: One and Circle of Stories: Two reviewed in English Journal, February 1974.

The Garden and the Wilderness. Alvin A. Lee, Hope Arnott Lee, editors. Number of pages unspecified. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333510-6. Teacher manual $1.50. Follows the Biblical story of man from his beginnings in the Garden of Eden to his wanderings through the wilderness in search of a new home. Includes such authors as James Baldwin, Edwin Muir, Dylan Thomas, Loren Eiseley, Carl Sandburg, as well as numerous selections from the Bible.

The Temple and the Ruin. Alvin A. Lee, Hope Arnott Lee, editors. 320p. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333513-0. Teacher manual $1.20. Follows the Biblical story of man from his entrance into the Promised Land to the ruin of the kingdom, exile, return, and the rebuilding of the temple. Sixty per cent of the material is from the Bible. Other material by John Steinbeck, Sir James Frazer, Yeats, Pete Seeger, Bob Dylan.

Man the Myth-Maker. W. T. Jewkes, editor. 304p. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333518-1. Teacher manual $1.50. Shows that modern writing contains the same images of ritual, the beginning of evil, metamorphosis, god-teachers, and floods found in ancient myths. Includes Greek, Chinese, and Indian myths as well as selections from Shakespeare, E. E. Cummings, Robert Frost, Bob Dylan, Mark Twain.

The Perilous Journey. W. T. Jewkes, editor. 304p. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333520-3. Teacher manual in preparation. Teaches literature through mythology. Images of the hero and his quest are shown in a variety of selections drawn from numerous cultures and time periods, from ancient myths to contemporary songs and stories.

A World Elsewhere: Romance. W. T. Jewkes, editor. 306p. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333525-4. Teacher manual $1.50. Selections from Cummings, Hemingway, Ray Bradbury, Ingmar Bergman, William Blake, Poe, Charles Reich, Chaucer as well as Indian myths, Norwegian folk songs, Irish legends reveal the same images of dream and wish-fulfillment: the super hero, the new chance, utopia, the golden world.

A World Enclosed: Tragedy. W. T. Jewkes, editor. 301p. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333535-1. Teacher manual in preparation. Explores images of the limits of human power and of man's passage from innocence to experience in the works of Hawthorne, Gerard Manley Hopkins, James Baldwin, D. H. Lawrence, Cummings, Stephen Crane, and in the Bible.

The Ways of the World: Satire and Irony. W. T. Jewkes, editor. 304p. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333530-0. Teacher manual $1.20. Images expressing irony and satire, showing the ambiguities, complexities, and absurdities of real life are revealed in selections from many time periods and cultures. Authors include James Thurber, Hans Christian Andersen, D. H. Lawrence, Kafka, John Lennon, Yeats, Arlo Guthrie.

A World Remade: Comedy. W. T. Jewkes, editor. 304p. $3.45 PB wholesale school price; ISBN 0-15-333540-8. Teacher manual $1.35. Explores love, renewal, and triumph in building the more human community. Includes a Medieval lyric, a Scandinavian myth, Buddhist scripture, a West Indian folk song, script from The Graduate, and short stories by Kurt Vonnegut, Jr., John Cheever, James Thurber, James Wright.

MACMILLAN GATEWAY ENGLISH. Marjorie B. Smiley, editor. Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc. 1967-1969. Number of pages unspecified. For specific prices, write the publisher. Primary audience: 9-12. Reading level: 5-8. Special audience: black, Chicano. (Remedial). The program provides for three years of developmental literature and language arts instruction and consists of four anthologies at each of the three levels. Additional materials consist of Teacher's Manual, Student's Manual (worktexts), transparencies, recordings, and tests. Anthology selections are meaningful to students of varied backgrounds and ability levels. Visuals and recordings develop concepts introduced through text and teacher's book and include, respectively, reproductions of a number of famous paintings and songs and poems.

MACMILLAN LITERARY HERITAGE. 24 books, 4 per grade level. Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc. 1961-1967; 2nd-3rd ed. 1968-1974. Approximately 290p. each. Teacher manual $3.52. Teacher edition for 7th and 8th grade. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 7-12. A contemporary literature program providing flexibility for teacher and student. Four separate softback texts are offered for each grade level: fiction, nonfiction, poetry, and drama. The selections are drawn from the established masterpieces and works by modern writers. Study materials and the suggestions in the Teacher's Edition and the Teacher's Manual help teachers provide for a wide range of individual needs and differences. In addition to the texts, the program includes supplementary softbacks—novels, biographies, drama, poetry, Greek myths and legends, and Shakespeare's plays—and recordings of plays and poetry.

THE NEW HOUGHTON MIFFLIN LITERATURE SERIES. Forms in English Literature. Philip McFarland et al. Houghton Mifflin Company. 1972. Number of pages unspecified. $6.75 HB. Teacher manual $2.88. Duplicating masters tests $21.00. Poster packets $6.00. Write Houghton Mifflin for further information. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 7-12. Contents of these basal hardbound anthologies are arranged by genre and by such themes as good and evil, loneliness, man and machine, search for self, conformity and rebellion. Selections represent a balance of traditional and modern literature. Emphasis is on the literature itself and the student's direct experience of it; literary and historical background has been placed in the teacher's manual to be used at the teacher's discretion. Unit introductions and selection headnotes are brief and motivational; study questions are open-ended and inquiry-oriented, encouraging students to think and to draw parallels.

A unique feature is the comprehensive humanities program, which is fully integrated with the literature and contains full-color reproductions of art masterpieces and related essays on art, music, and philosophy. At the end of each book are a cumulative glossary of literary terms and biographies of authors and artists.

Supporting material for each book includes a teacher's resource manual, intended as a helpful guide and as a source of suggestions and supplementary material; a testing program in the form of duplicating masters; and a poster packet containing large reproductions of six of the most interesting black-and-white photographs in the text.

NEW WORLD ISSUES. Together, Currents, Changes, Mix. Delores Minor, Barbara Dodds Stanford, Gene Stanford, editors. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc. 1971. Primary and extended audience: 11-12. Reading level: 11-12. These four paperbacks for grades 11 and 12, containing literature and readings of contemporary interest, are divided under headings of important issues and subjects, such as the generation gap, racism, alienation, drugs, culture conflicts, and ecology. Several different viewpoints are presented on each issue.

The 11th grade books present American writers: Together deals with personal issues, Currents with national ones. The 12th grade books present authors from Africa, the Orient, Eastern Europe, and South America: Changes deals with personal issues, Mix with cultural ones.

Each Journal—a do-it-yourself notebook with worksheets—contains arresting visual stimuli to which students respond in writing (essay, short story, poem, play) or in cartoons, drawing, photography, person-to-person interviews, or surveys. An open-ended, student-centered program, which may be used independently or with New World Issues.

NEW WORLDS SERIES. Editors: Susan Croft, Richard Flood, Warren J. Halliburton, Clarence Irving, Delores Minor, Walter Oliver, Mauri E. Pelkonen, Glenda Richter, Richard and Irene Willis. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc. 1969; 1971. Primary audience: 7-10. Extended audience: 7-10. Reading level: low. Special audience: Inner-city students. This series presents a literature and reading skills program designed for inner-city students in grades 7-10. The anthologies contain selections written by contemporary authors—many from minority group backgrounds—about current problems. A multi-cultural approach was central to the compilation of the anthologies, which also include full-color reproductions of fine art and other illustrations.

The books are organized thematically and reflect several ethnic themes. The selections have a low reading level but a depth of meaning. No study aids are included in the anthologies. The reading skills program is extensively outlined in the teacher's editions, and the accompanying exercises appear in the Reader's Notebooks.

PERSPECTIVES IN LITERATURE.

Authors: Rosemary Cianciolo, Charles A. Conefrey, Patricia J. Costello, Anne C. Courtney, Evelyn M. Egense, Harry J. Ellis, James O. Enright, Joseph E. Grennen, Eva Himmelheber, Marion A. Hoctor, Shelia Kushner, Sarah E. Laubacher, Robert A. Lodge, Thomas V. Lowery, Clara M. Marthaler, Jane McDermott, Elizabeth A. Murray, John P. O'Malley, Blanche V. Schwartz, John Ullmer, Mary M. Winkelmann. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc. 1969; 1971. Primary audience: 9-12. Extended audience: 9-12. Reading level: 9-12. This paperback literature series for grades 9-12 offers the variety and flexibility of the "paperback approach" to teaching literature with the added advantages of built-in editorial features: general and section introductions, authors' biographies, footnotes, glossaries, and end-of-selection study aids, including composition and discussion activities. Each book deals with a single literary genre or period. Teachers can mix and match the non-graded but graduated volumes to suit their own programs.

In this series there are more authors represented, more selections per author, and more selections in their entirety or in longer-than-usual excerpts than in the ordinary literature series. Many authors and selections appear for the first time in a high school literature series.

Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 7-12. Reading level: 7-12. An innovative series of 18 volumes (one hardcover and two paperback "satellite" books per grade) dedicated to the premise that the fundamental outcome of a course in literature is the development of sensitive response in the individual reader (as opposed to "coverage" of a prescribed list of works, of genre, or of chronological periods). Approximately 90% of the selections are contemporary. Illustration presentations enhance the appeal and meaning of the selections. The hardcover book for each grade is organized in "clusters"—groupings dictated by a signal characteristic: the style or message of a single writer, the occupation with mood or tone, the restrictions of a literary type, etc. One "satellite" paperback for each level deals with an important human theme: self-identity, artistry; the other "satellite" focuses on an aspect of what the writer does to affect the reader: taking a point of view, relying on literal or figurative meaning, shaping material for an audience. Two 12-inch LP records per level add aural dimension to the print. A unique evaluation program introducing both subjective and objective measures supports each of the six levels. Eight 25-book libraries, organized according to reading level, complete the Responding series.

Write Random House, Inc., 201 East 50th Street, New York, New York 10022. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: on grade. The seventh and eighth grade texts, Panoramas of Literature and Pursuits of Literature, feature a wide variety of short stories, poetry, drama, myths, legends, biographies, and essays, as well as an unabridged novel.

The volume of Approaches to Literature (Grade 9), contains American, English, and world literature arranged by genre.

In Patterns of Literature (Grade 10), selections from world literature are presented chronologically and by genre to give the student a new perspective on the evolution of literary types.

The Literature of America (Grade 11) traces the evolution of our national literature from the early writers to modern fiction.

In The Literature of England (Grade 12), the language, people, and history of England are represented through literary selections from the Anglo-Saxon period to the present.

Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience 6, 13-14. Reading level: 5-10. This series of 12 paperback anthologies seeks to provoke and sustain the interests of reluctant readers through the use of important and largely contemporary literature. The teacher-editors have chosen the selections on the basis of four criteria: (1) intrinsic literary merit, (2) realistic quality, (3) relevance to the contemporary world, and (4) appropriate reading level. A fairly large number of black and Chicano writers is represented, but the major thrust of the series has been to include selections of interest to all students, whatever their background.

Each year's literature program is organized into two slim paperbacks. The texts are divided into sections, each unified by an issue such as war, justice, the family. Four-color reproductions of art works related to particular sections are included to provoke student interest. All study materials are relegated to a teachers' guide for each book, which contains background material for the selection, discussion questions, writing assignments, and follow-up activities. Each guide also presents a short introduction setting forth the rationale of the series.

AFRO-AMERICAN LITERATURE.

Fiction, Nonfiction, Poetry, Drama. William Adams, Peter Conn, Barry Slepian, editors. Houghton Mifflin Company, 1970. Number of pages unspecified. $1.80 PB net price; $3.45 HB net price. Teacher manual $.75. Write to nearest regional office (Boston; Atlanta; Geneva, Ill.; Hopewell, New Jersey; Dallas; Palo Alto) for further information. Primary audience: 11. Extended audience: 10-12. Reading level: 9-10. This series consists of four books, each presenting a major literary form. Selections are contemporary and represent the works of such well-known and respected black authors as James Baldwin, Arna Bontemps, Gwendolyn Brooks, Countee Cullen, Ralph Ellison, Lorraine Hansberry, Langston Hughes, Claude McKay, and Ossie Davis. All material in the four volumes was written by black Americans and chosen for its literary merit and its appeal to students. Selections are arranged thematically and they deal with issues of current concern. Questions follow each selection and suggest a direction for classroom discussions. These questions focus on the significance of the themes developed in each unit. Accompanying each volume is a teacher's guide designed to aid the teacher in presenting the material. Included in the manual are suggested answers to student discussion questions, concise synopses, comprehensive writing assignments, and suggestions for literary analysis.

ALTERNATIVES. The Meanings of Literature. Miles Myers, editor. Addison-Wesley Publishing Company. 1973. 266p. $1.80 PB; ISBN 0-201-04914-7. Teacher manual $.99. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 12. Extended audience: 11. Reading level: 12. (Accelerated). The formal critic, the social critic, the biographical critic, and the reader-experience critic approach a literary work from different points of view. These and other approaches are explored in terms of specific works, and the student is encouraged to apply these approaches to other works. The final section is a short anthology of poems and stories.

ALTERNATIVES. Of This Time: Twenty-Seven Essays. Zelma Hardy, Joseph Slate, editors. Addison-Wesley Publishing Company. 1970. 237p. $2.25 PB; ISBN 0-201-02678-3. Teacher manual $.45. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 10-12. Extended audience: 9. Choosing is an idea-centered literature anthology with selections related to values and moral choice by Richard Brautigan, Hal David, Jules Feiffer, Ralph Ellison, Eve Merriam, William Blake, Kurt Vonnegut, Isaac Asimov, Lillian Smith, Gordon Parks, and others. The selections include stories, poems, essays, articles, and cartoons. The book is divided into four sections: Possibilities; Influences; Codes; Change and Choice. At the end of each section, a discussion essay Talking It Out provides opportunities for students to communicate their own values and ideas. Writing It Out provides writing suggestions related to the problems raised by the selections.

ALTERNATIVES: IDEA-CENTERED LITERATURE. Look Back on Tomorrow: Worlds of Science Fiction. John Osborne, David Paskow, editors. Addison-Wesley Publishing Company. 1974. 179p. $2.16 PB; ISBN 0-201-05506-6. Teacher manual to come. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 10-12. Extended audience: 9. Reading level: 10. Look Back on Tomorrow is an idea-centered literature anthology exploring the major ideas of science fiction, both as a vehicle for social criticism and as an expression of man's dreams and aspirations. The selections include stories by such important science fiction figures as Ray Bradbury, Isaac Asimov, Robert Heinlein, Kurt Vonnegut, H. G. Wells, and Arthur C. Clarke. The book is divided into five sections, each reflecting a major area of the genre: Outer Space, Inner Space, Time Travel, Future Shock, Purpose. A discussion essay at the end of each section, Talking It Out, provides an opportunity for students to explore the ideas raised by the BLACK POETRY FOR ALL AMERICANS. Leon Weisman, Elfreda S. Wright, editors. The Globe Book Company. 1971. 120p. $2.00 PB; ISBN 0-87065-115-3. Class price $1.50. Teacher manual gratis. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-12. This text has student appeal in its content—poems by black poets, past and present—and in its format—the photographs were taken by inner-city youngsters. Among the poets are Langston Hughes, Paul Laurence Dunbar, James Weldon Johnson, Countee Cullen, Debra Stokes, Ted Joans, and Gwendolyn Brooks. Study aids appear at the back of the book. Questions and a mini-glossary are provided for each poem.

FIRST VOICES. Geoffrey Summerfield. Random House, Inc. 1970. Book 1 96p., $1.05 PB. Book 2 96p., $1.05 PB. Book 3 128p., $1.38 PB. Book 4 120p., $1.38 PB. Teacher's handbook 72p., $1.17. Prices are school prices. Write Random House, Inc., 201 East 50th Street, New York, New York 10022. Primary audience: 4-9. Extended audience: 3-11. These four lively and colorful books will bring into the classroom the voices of contemporary as well as traditional poets, artists, and photographers.

Poems by children stand next to works by well-known poets. Traditional American songs are mixed with Japanese haiku, translations from Eskimo and Yugoslavian writers, riddles and folk rhymes.

These verbal images are juxtaposed with their visual counterparts—striking black-and-white, as well as full-color, photographs, visual riddles, enchanting drawings, and reproductions of old masters.

The poetry and art work together in all of the books to appeal to the child's imagination and open him up to a world of visual and verbal expression.

THE SHORT STORY AND THE ORAL TRADITION. Paul C. Sherr. Boyd & Fraser Publishing Company. 1970. 398p. $4.95 PB; ISBN 0-87835-002-0. Primary audience: 11-16. Reading level: 11-up. First part of book describes short forms of fiction from jokes and anecdotes through parables, folk tales, and epics, showing their characteristics and giving examples of how they can be considered progressively more complex and capable of carrying more information. Ultimately these archetypal forms have evolved into the modern short story.

Second part of book contains 19 short stories, each followed by very simple study questions. Intent of author is to give the student background to make a coherent construct for short fiction.

South Langley Ave., Chicago, Illinois 60628. Primary audience: 12. Extended audience: 11. This translation by Richmond Lattimore recreates in English the essential qualities of the Iliad. It is a line-by-line rendering in which the Greek hexameters are represented by free-running lines of six-beat verse, preserving the repeated line and fixed epithets. The introduction includes a resumé of general facts about Homer, an outline and analysis of the story of Troy and the story of the Iliad, a description and explanation of Homeric style, and a glossary of characters.

INDIVIDUALIZED LITERATURE PROGRAM. 200 paperback books with teacher-student packages. Robert A. Bennett, program director. American Book Company. 1971. Number of pages varies. $.76-$3.16. Teacher-student packages $4.80 per packet (one for each title). Write American Book Company, 300 Pike Street, Cincinnati, Ohio 45202 for further information. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 7-12. Two hundred paperback books—with teacher's guides, student's guides, trial tests (spirit masters) and mastery tests—in four non-graded levels, meet the needs, abilities, and interests of all students. Titles within each level encompass a wide spectrum of classical and modern literature: novels, plays, poems, short stories, biographies, essays, and general nonfiction. Teacher's guides provide character sketches, plot summaries, student objectives, and teaching suggestions. Student guides focus on important skill or concept objectives. The trial tests, with answers provided for the student, aid the student in evaluating his or her own knowledge of the reading. The mastery test focuses on the student's critical and creative response to the book. The packages can be used for individualized learning, mini-courses, or phase-lectives.

fessional bias and without persuading students to accept a particular point of view. Containing selected readings from the Hebrew Bible, the New Testament, the rabbinical writings, and the Koran, the book traces major themes in the great religions of the West—Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. The readings selected are those which best express the heart of each religious tradition and have had the most extensive influence in the development of our culture and subsequent Western literature.

Units are arranged systematically according to time sequence and tradition. Each chapter contains: an introductory paragraph as general orientation to the passage, a list of search clues to highlight significant points, the passage in the literature itself, a commentary to put the reading in its historical, cultural, and literary context, and some reflection questions to serve as a basis for class discussion. Also included are maps and time charts.

Designed to be fundamental to the literature program, these self-teaching paperbacks help students recognize and understand what is meant by theme, mood, rhythm, characterization, foreshadowing, connotation, abstraction, conflict, setting, point of view, and a range of other concepts and devices. Students are shown how writers develop their paragraphs by comparison and contrast, cause and effect, categories and classification, chronological order, or by simple listing. They learn how to identify fallacies, slanted language, and the various types of reasoning and logic, both deductive and inductive. They get practice with interpreting images, analogies, figures of speech, symbols, satire, and the like. Definitions, explanations, and directions are written in language easily accessible to students. Each concept is illustrated with many varied examples. Teachers do not have to repetitiously define terms and laboriously collect examples to distribute. Success in Reading provides abundant, brief selections to give students a foundation for whatever reading the English teacher assigns or suggests.

Literature—Other

Reading selections are taken from classical and modern fiction, from works of prose, poetry, and drama, from representative textbooks and reference works, from such varied sources as Time, The New Yorker, and Natural History Magazine, and from pamphlets published by the government and periodicals put out by university presses. Selections are intrinsically valuable and informative but brief enough to encourage concentrated effort on particular skills, such as understanding figurative language.

Represented are such authors as Willa Cather, Richard Wilbur, Aldous Huxley, Rod Serling, John Ciardi, Lincoln Steffens, Pearl Bailey, Max Shulman, Arnold Toynbee, Evelyn Waugh, Sylvia Plath, Michael Harrington, Langston Hughes, George Steiner, and W. H. Auden.

The eight books of the program can be used for mini-courses as well as in traditional English classes. Assigned before students begin the selections in their literature books, a Success in Reading unit will ready students for a good class discussion. Used as preparation for book reports, these selections help students remember what to look for, how to recognize it, and how to discuss it. These packets, containing 308 to 370 pages each, can also be assigned to individual students to upgrade their level of performance.

A non-graded, two-track program, Success in Reading concentrates on basic skills in the odd-number books; basic skills as well as skills requiring more discernment or judgment are included in even-number books. This organization provides for a wide range of reading abilities.

Each book is divided into sections, each section focusing on a cluster of related skills, such as those involved in reading fiction, or those involved in following the logic of an argument. The work within each section gradually increases in difficulty. With each variation of the concept taught, the skill or insight is reinforced or expanded.

Designed to be self-teaching, these paperbacks can be used with very little or no supervision by the instructor. Directions are concrete and motivation is realistic, appealing to students' desires to complete any type of homework reading assignment more rapidly and efficiently. Teachers can spend more time with individual students while the class analyzes reading selections—examining them, one point at a time, for what the writer is trying to do and how he or she is going about it.

Teacher's editions explain the program's use in the classroom and give answers to questions, which teachers can put on the board to permit students to correct their own work.

The program reflects the authors' experience as classroom teachers. It has drawn on the research and insights of reading specialists but has pointedly included the kind of content which can make students knowledgeable readers of good literature, fiction or nonfiction. Materials are developed in sufficient depth and variety to serve as a useful initial encounter with the terms and concepts of the writer's craft. At the same time, the treatment is succinct enough to provide a time-saving warm-up for literature discussions.

Primary audience: 11-14. Extended audience: 9-14. Reading level: 7-9. The Lively Art of Writing, revised edition, shows any student how to write with individual style and a mastery of structure. All student work is with the essay. The three stages of the writing cycle—invention, structure, and style—are all included; chapters 1-7 deal with invention and structure, chapters 8-13 with style, and chapter 14 (use optional) with the term paper. The book uses a combination lecture-demonstration technique. The structure of the text and assignments parallel the inductive approach to learning. Teachers act as consultants rather than judges as they discover and correct individual writing problems while promoting classroom discussion and encouraging imaginative thinking. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 6. Reading level: 5-10. This series of ten worktexts for grades 7-12 is directed toward the reluctant student-writer who has found school work a confusing, frustrating experience but who nevertheless has much to say.

Composition

Its lessons are structured to bring the student to the point where he has something to say and wants to say it. Each lesson begins with a stimulus: a photograph, a situation, a problem, a newspaper story, a literary passage, a poem. Intermediate activities (including discussion, role playing, problem solving, and note taking) let the student develop and pursue his own ideas. The lesson's conclusion—one or more writing suggestions—grows out of all that went before.

In the early books, writing skills related to coherence, organization, logical development, and effective diction are developed indirectly and informally. With the two tenth-grade books a new feature is introduced: Focus, a commentary about the kind of writing that is called for, which encourages the student to think about writing as a means of communication and to examine his own efforts to communicate. The worktexts recommended for eleventh and twelfth grades introduce another feature, a Reaction Sheet to be filled out by another student in class, which enables the writer to know how successfully he has communicated with his peer.

For grades 7-10, two books are recommended for each grade level, each book containing 15 lessons. For grades 11 and 12 there is one book per grade level containing 20 lessons.

9-10. This six-book series develops writers through the use of examples which provide a wide range of styles and subject matter. Students read a selection to discover a specific technique they can then apply to a writing assignment. In addition, the range of subjects discussed in the selections provides an introduction to many aspects of communications. Several units explore semantics; others stress the functions and implications of words. A number of selections examine the significance of advertising and other mass media.

Primary audience: 12. Extended audience: 10-11. Reading level: 10. (Accelerated). This book enables the reader to improve his writing skills by comparing his own solution of a writing problem to that of a master writer. The first chapters are devoted to gaining mastery over various English sentence structures, not for such knowledge per se, but to give the writer mastery over his options. Writing problems are given to the reader who can then compare his solution to that of a Joyce, Mailer, Fitzgerald, or Churchill. The same comparative, imitative method is then used to master paragraph structures, and the relationships of paragraphs to each other in essays.

price. Primary audience: 9-12. This collection of writing ideas draws on examples of high school students' poetry, one-act plays, short stories, and essays. Students learn effectively to write everything from one- and two-line paragraphs to short stories to film scripts. Illustrations include black-and-white photographs and graphics.

WRITE NOW! INSIGHTS INTO CREATIVE WRITING. Anne Wescott Dodd. Learning Trends Division, The Globe Book Company, Inc. 1973. 234p. $2.00 PB; ISBN 0-87065-916-2. $1.50 class price. Teacher manual gratis. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 7-12. Offers a progression of experiences in writing from descriptive phrases to sentences and paragraphs to a complete story, poem, and one-act play. Specific writing activities in each section give students a sense of achievement while allowing them to express themselves in a personal way. Special features include: examples that inspire as well as explain, a "contract" between teacher and student that makes grading creative work a pleasure, and directions for keeping a journal and completing a term project.

THE WRITE THING: WAYS TO COMMUNICATE. Levels A-F, one level for each grade, 7-12. Raymond E. Lemley. Houghton Mifflin Company. 1974. Number of pages unspecified. $1.66 PB. Teacher manual $1.35. Box of materials for each level $67.47. Write to nearest regional office (Boston; Atlanta; Geneva, Illinois; Hopewell, New Jersey; Dallas; and Palo Alto) for sample kit (one for each grade level, 7-12). Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 5-10. (Remedial). Separate packages of materials are offered for grades 7-12. Each package contains a set of display posters, 30 copies of a write-in booklet, an audiotape cassette, a set of photoprints, and an instructor's manual. These materials work together to overcome the reluctance of students to express themselves in writing and to teach the basic composition skills that are required in effective written communication. It is an issue-oriented series whose content and art work provoke student response. The themes depicted and discussed are contemporary in nature and of high interest to teenage students. No prerequisite skill or knowledge is required. Students role play, take pictures, make collages, conduct interviews, cut out advertisements, collect on-the-scene data, and do a number of other activities that lead to short sentence statements, descriptive paragraphs, short stories, poems, editorials, letters, advertisements, reports, dialogues, and other forms of written expression. The instructor's manual identifies the skills that are covered in each thematic unit and suggests helpful pre-class and post-class activities that will reinforce the meaning of the subjects covered and the skills taught.

National Textbook Company. 1968. Writing in Action, 220p., ISBN 8442-5614-5 PB. An Anthology for Young Writers, 235p., ISBN 8442-5600-5 PB. Both books available separately, $4.75 each, or $3.80 net each for five or more copies. Write to National Textbook Company for catalog. Primary audience: 9-12. Reading level: 9. (Accelerated). The Young Writer Series is a parallel reading-writing approach. The organization of An Anthology for Young Writers follows the plan of its companion text, Writing in Action. Each chapter, with the exception of the first, is composed of one or more selections that are referred to in Writing in Action as illustrations of the exercises and discussion of that text.

Writing in Action is a program designed to improve the skills of self-expression in students whose interest and talent in writing deserve added attention and exercise. The student begins by writing about things close to himself. He begins by writing autobiographically; he ends by writing essays of an expository and persuasive nature.

An Anthology for Young Writers, in a single volume, provides students with carefully chosen examples of the kind of writing they are in the process of exploring. The 47 selections were chosen for interest and enjoyment in their own right, and exemplify a type and form of writing students are required to produce.

Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 6, 10. Reading level: 7-9. This series of grammar-composition books presents an activity-centered program. Learning proceeds through progressively-structured activities that develop concepts and skills related to forming sentences, composing, oral and written language, problems in communication, reading literature, studying effectively, and thinking creatively and critically.

English (seventh grade) provides writing activities that develop precision and clarity in writing—writing messages, directions, and records—and activities in two basic forms of the narrative—the anecdote and the fable—that encourage the play of the imagination. The book also examines purposes in writing and suggests several methods by which students may draw on their own experiences to write. Language work includes a thorough treatment of phrase-structure rules.

English (eighth grade) provides experience in writing diaries, autobiographies, descriptions, comparisons and contrasts, and book reports. The language component includes work in English intonation and an introduction to single- and double-base transformations that builds on the work in phrase-structure rules in the book for seventh grade.

English (ninth grade) acquaints the student with newswriting, persuasion, paragraph structure, paraphrases, and narrative-descriptive prose. Language study includes work in dialect and idiolect, level of usage, the sender-message-receiver relationship, and the relationship between grammar and meaning. The study of transformations, introduced in English 8, is continued.

English Grammar: A Summary and Review 3, $1.14; duplicator masters of the same, $9.99. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 10-12. Extended audience: 9. Reading level: 10-11. The three books for senior high school in this series continue the activity-centered program of the junior high school books. No new grammar is introduced in these books; some review of the grammar presented in the books for seventh, eighth and ninth grades is presented in chapters exploring sentence rhetoric and the system of punctuation of written English. Each book includes a Handbook of Usage and Rhetoric.

In English 10, several chapters explore the relationship between the raw material of literature and the act of creation by which a writer transmutes his material into a literary work of art. The book reviews sentence structure and several types of structural errors and explores the science and art of dictionary making. Other chapters present activities related to paragraph structure, the structure of the short composition, and critical thinking.

English 11 explores the communication triangle (sender-message-receiver), provides intensive work in report writing, studies dialectal variations in English, and includes an introduction to the history of the language. The book also includes chapters that encourage students to study and write short stories, haiku, limericks, ballads, and sonnets.

English 12 concentrates on the skills involved in exposition, analysis, and persuasion and provides an introduction to some aspects of formal rhetoric and logic. Several chapters (An Introduction to Criticism, Writing about Fiction, Reading Poems and Writing about Them) provide practice in one of the most demanding kinds of persuasive prose, the critical essay based on a close reading of a literary work. The book also includes a chapter on The Art of the Film.

Write Product Manager, Language Arts, General Learning Corporation, Morristown, New Jersey 07960 or contact your regional Silver Burdett office in Park Ridge, Illinois; Palo Alto; Dallas; or Atlanta. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 5-10. Each text in this new 7 through 12 program offers five units or strands: language, composition, grammar, usage, and skills. Within each strand are well-defined, closely linked lessons. Colored numerals in the margins show the beginning of the lesson; assignments indicate the conclusion. In between is material gauged to be sufficient for a single class period. Clear organization is a hallmark of the series.

Composition and Grammar/Language

To help teachers reach today's students, Contemporary English uses a relatively informal style, graphics which reflect the contemporary scene, and an easy readability well within the grasp of all students.

Teachers' editions spell out objectives, purposes, lead-in, answers, and follow-up, all complete on one page for each lesson. The lead-in activities (mini-dramas, role playing, paradoxical questions) are designed to get the class underway, to arouse interest and motivation before the students open their texts.

Language strand lessons help students examine aspects of language neglected in English textbooks. In Contemporary English students explore language as a set of symbols man uses to represent thoughts and feelings; as a reflection of the values of a people; as a basis for literature and the mass media; as a changing medium with many semantic subtleties; and as one of many means of communication which has tremendous impact on their lives and which they can learn to use effectively.

Composition strand lessons help students find in the everyday world the stimuli which help them discover what they want to write about. They learn to sharpen their skills of observation through techniques used by professional writers and they enjoy class discussions and other experiences which stimulate writing. Students learn how to organize their thoughts before they write; they study the technical requirements of written expression; and they are encouraged to experiment without fear of a poor grade for unsuccessful attempts. Most important, they learn to grow in self-evaluation.

Grammar strand lessons offer an eclectic grammar, one that takes into account the easy-to-learn, useful findings of the twentieth-century linguists but nevertheless has a traditional framework. Designed to be teachable, this grammar is up-to-date, descriptive, sequential, and complete. It does not involve students in the shifting frontiers of academic theory.

Usage strand lessons help students to realize increasingly with each year's demands of each situation and that any variation in language can be respected if it is used appropriately in a given situation. Students come to see how language choices change from one culture, occupation, social class, and geographic region to another, and that they must learn to broaden their usage to meet the demands of their widening circles of opportunity.

Skills strand lessons attempt to make the basic skills of writing and speaking as interesting and as challenging as any other learning. Included is work on punctuation and capitalization in every book, with brief and simple treatment in grades 7 and 8; extensive coverage in grades 9 and 10; and comprehensive treatment in grades 11 and 12 with rules stated more succinctly.

The program concentrates on oral reports, panel discussions, and the like in grades 7 and 10; focuses on dictionary and listening skills in grade 8; emphasizes test-taking and writing about literature in grades 9 and 12. Research procedures are explained in grade 11 and the writing of business letters in grade 12. Distributed this way, essential skills are given freshness and appeal.

Organization into clusters of lessons grouped by strands is found as well in these auxiliary materials for students who need additional practice: Activities in Contemporary English: Aspects (for grade 7); Backgrounds (for grade 8); Challenges (for grade 9); Dimensions (for grade 10); Explorations (for grade 11); Frameworks (for grade 12). These paperback assignment books provide reinforcement content with an illustrated layout and design that appeals to students of all ability levels.

The authors of Contemporary English have taken note that teachers regard a workbook as a valid instructional device provided that it is well constructed and not merely busywork. These assignment books can reinforce the topics taught in class, clarify concepts in a down-to-earth way, and lead to worthwhile class discussion.

The organization in the Activities books parallels the unit structure of the basic texts, with a five-part division into language, composition, grammar, usage, and skills. There are 36 to 50 lessons in each book, each two or more pages in length, opening with brief textual explanation or a short statement of concept, enabling the Activities books to be used independently of the basal series. Basic concepts are reinforced, but the student's work never repeats work in the text.

Drawings and photographs play an integral role in these new paperbacks. They have been selected to promote careful observation and critical thinking, to classify major concepts, and to serve as the basis for written assignments.

The Composition Workshop, a ten-page section supplementing the composition unit, is a special feature of the books for grades 9-12 which relies heavily on illustration. It stimulates the writing of ten assignments which are unlike workbook materials with blanks to be filled in.

Another feature of these Activities books is the keying of suggested answers in the teachers' editions. Not only are factual answers supplied for those questions for which answers do not vary, but also supplied are possible answers for discussion-type questions. These show the teachers the range of possibilities in discussion. An Outline of Grammar, with examples, has been provided on the inside front and back covers of each Activities book as another means of reinforcement.

The paperback Activities books have application to a wide range of abilities. Many students will be able to use these texts with little direction from the teacher. With bright students, these books can enlarge or extend their ideas, the ensuing discussion possibly leading to individual or group research on various aspects of the topics treated.

Since the pages are perforated, teachers may use any lesson as an evaluation device. No grade designations are shown on the student books.

Too many high school students believe that big words will get them everywhere, and they sacrifice clarity for pedantry. In five consumable texts, English in Plain Words teaches the art of effective written communication.

The composition books, Writing I and Writing II, stress clarity and simplification, and show students how to write for different purposes.

The language books, Sounds and Letters and Words, discuss language history, phonology, the dictionary, and grammar, and explore the relationship of spoken English to written English.

Practical Helps assists students with citation problems, library research, preparing papers, and writing book reviews and job application letters.

ENGLISH ON THE JOB. Books A, B, C, and Books 1 and 2. Jerome Carlin, Henry I. Christ, Glenn Holder, John T. Ellsworth. The Globe Book Company, Inc. Available direct from the publisher. A practical program, the five texts give students (1) a knowledge of essentials in usage and (2) a command of clear, correct expression in oral and written composition. The non-college-bound student learns why grammar is important to his future and how he will use it. The composition lessons stress clear thinking, the logical arrangement of ideas, and accepted English usage. The grammar sections contain an abundance of intensive application material. There is also a spelling section in each text. Every book is an independent unit. Throughout the program, skills and concepts keep pace with the student's abilities and interests, especially his growing interest in the world of work.

ENJOYING ENGLISH. Don M. Wolfe, Floy W. Delancey, et al., editors. Random House, Inc. 1952; 7th ed. 1969. Number of pages unspecified. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 7-12. Enjoying English helps students communicate more effectively, not merely by teaching the skills of English, but by helping them to understand and appreciate the instrument of communication—their language.

The communication skills—reading, speaking, listening, and writing—are balanced in the activities of each chapter. The skills of speaking and writing, grammar and usage are taught within a modern linguistic framework, drawing on the

THE LAIDLAW LANGUAGE EXPERIENCES PROGRAM, 7-9. Growth in English, Power in English, Success in English. John S. Hand, Wayne Harsh, James W. Ney, Bernarr Folta, Marion L. Steet, Louis C. Rus, Ralph W. Rausch. Laidlaw Brothers, A Division of Doubleday. 1972-73. Activity books $1.20. Independent tests $.48. For further information, write to Laidlaw Brothers, Customer Service Department. Primary audience: 7-9. Three ungraded, activity-centered textbooks promote student involvement in successful experiences with language. The books provide a balanced program of language study and language use and appreciation, with content organized into the following strands: the nature of language, speech sounds, word formation, sentence structure, conventions, and composition. Each chapter in the books focuses on one strand, providing in-depth study of a single phase of language study or composition.

An inductive approach to concept and skill development is used and composition is presented as a relaxed and positive activity. The program encourages students to use their familiarity with language as the basis for new experiences that lead to increasingly effective use of language and an appreciation for language itself.

Annotated teachers' editions, activity books, and independent tests provide extension and reinforcement for the textbook lessons.

THE MACMILLAN ENGLISH SERIES. Thomas Clark Pollock. Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc. 1954; 5th ed. 1973. 475p. Contact publisher for information on scope and sequence, prices, and educational discounts. Primary audience: 7-8. Reading level: 6-7. Transformational grammar, modern in approach and terminology, becomes a relevant, natural course of study in these texts. Language facts and generalizations are taught inductively as students analyze their own speech and textbook models. Optional activities, linguistic materials for the teacher, and instructions for providing for individual differences are included. The emphasis throughout is on clear, correct composition in speech and writing.

THE MACMILLAN ENGLISH SERIES. Thomas Clark Pollock. Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc. 1955; 4th ed. 1969. Approximately 500p. $6.60 HB. Teacher manual $7.60. Write Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc., for scope and sequence and information on educational discounts. Primary audience: 9-12. Reading level: 8-11. The senior high school books develop transformational grammar and clear, thoughtful composition. Each of the three levels of language—phonology, morphology, and syntax—is developed clearly, providing the student with a basis for future studies and the resources for improving speaking and writing skills. The teacher's annotated edition contains linguistic background and specific instructions for reinforcing activities.

ing level: 9-12. This series uses the inductive approach to promote observation and discovery of language. It provides a natural transition to linguistics by emphasizing the structure of the English sentence, relates spoken English to written English, and presents a balanced program in composition. It uses the structural approach throughout and looks at language objectively. Included are teacher's editions for all texts, plus workbooks and end-of-chapter tests for levels 1, 2 and 3.

OUR LANGUAGE TODAY. Books Seven and Eight. David A. Conlin, George Herman, Jerome Martin. American Book Company. 1970; 1971. Number of pages unspecified. Book 7, $4.71 HB; Book 8, $4.77 HB. Teacher manual Book 7, $4.71; Book 8, $4.77. Workbook $1.47. Teacher's answer edition workbook $1.47. End-of-chapter tests $4.47. Annotated key $.24. Write American Book Company, 300 Pike Street, Cincinnati, Ohio 45202 for further information. Primary audience: 7-8. Reading level: 7-8. In this structural linguistic series, the student works as a linguist does observing language, watching for objective signals, and forming generalizations. The student applies knowledge of how English works in a complete composition program in which he or she analyzes his or her own writing and that of other students and famous authors to see how ideas are transmitted from one human being to another. The student uses modern grammar to achieve greater clarity and precision and more effectiveness of purpose in writing. Students are encouraged to use imagination in writing factual material, fiction, or poetry. Attention is given to study skills, library skills, and skills of observation and reporting. Teacher's editions of the pupil's text, workbooks and end-of-chapter tests complete the program.

PATHWAYS TO THE WORLD OF ENGLISH. Six books in three levels. Jack Abramowitz, Warren J. Halliburton, Oscar Mass, authors; Robert R. Potter, consulting editor. The Globe Book Company, Inc. Approximately 260p. each.

Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 7-12. Series reading level: 4.6-6.4. A fully integrated language arts program for slow-to-average students in junior and senior high school. Weaves together all the "different areas" of English: instruction in reading skills, materials that develop an appreciation of our literary heritage, lessons in grammar, as well as usage and mechanics. Original short stories provide reading practice, spark class discussion, student writing, and role-playing. Other selections include familiar stories, short selections from novels, biographical pieces, poems, and contemporary songs. The language lessons emphasize the use of language in everyday situations.

$4.29; Book 8, $5.31. Grammar strands multi-media. Write American Book Company, 300 Pike Street, Cincinnati, Ohio 45202 for further information. Primary audience: 7-8. Reading level: 7-8. This new language arts program focuses on language growth and development through experiences in listening, speaking, reading, and writing. Major strands include: patterns of language, literature, creative thinking, listening, composition, modern grammar, history and nature of language, study skills, writing skills and usage. Creative thinking and creative writing are highlighted through the use of extensive visuals and graphics throughout each unit. A systematic exploration of language is achieved through individual sections which allow pupils to observe and analyze ways in which our language works. Special multi-media materials for extension of this language system will be available. Teacher's editions of the pupil's text, workbooks, and tests complete the program.

These books teach the vital listening, speaking, composition, grammar, and comprehension skills. They are written to a junior high school interest level, but with a fourth grade reading level.

THE RANDOM HOUSE ENGLISH SERIES. Stephen N. Judy, Geoffrey Summerfield, et al., editors. Random House, Inc. 1973. Number of pages unspecified. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 6-13. Reading level: on grade. The Random House English Series is a multi-volume, inductive, Dartmouth-based language and composition m that provides students and rs with the material needed to discover how language works and how it can be used.

The Random House English Series offers separate volumes in three areas of the English curriculum: composition, grammar, and nonsyntactic language.

These beautifully designed books appeal to the student who is already interested in language as well as the pupil who thinks of language study as merely a set of boring rules about grammatical constructions and usage.

Because of its multi-volume format, the series is easily adapted to various language arts curriculums. The books can be used individually or in any combination based on the needs of each class; however, they were conceived as a complete, basal language/composition/grammar program.

VOCATIONAL ENGLISH. Albert E. Jochen, Benjamin Shapiro. The Globe Book Company, Inc. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 7-12. (Remedial). These texts give students tools that will help them deal with problems they will face. For example, chapters on letter writing cover such specific letters as the order letter and the letter of complaint. Chapters devoted to "common errors" help students eliminate the errors in their speech. A chapter entitled Getting the Most from Your Newspaper will help students analyze their own paper in terms of service to the community, slanted writing, etc. A unit on Straight Thinking shows them how to avoid victimizing others with propaganda or being themselves the victims of propaganda. Job hunting is covered thoroughly, from analyzing the want ads to success on the job.

See description below for explanation on presenting the series in a systems approach versus a text approach. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 7-12. Reading level: 6-9. Special audience: unmotivated, non-academic students. (Remedial). This is a special series designed to present a complete course in "English" on each of six grade levels, 7-12, for average and slow unmotivated students. In each unit in each text, the authors present all facets of a course in English—reading, literature, listening, speaking, writing, role-playing, grammar, language—basing the unit on a reading selection. Vocabulary and syntax are related to the content of the reading selection. The series may be presented as a text program, based on the text and teachers' notebook for each grade or, in conjunction with the records, transparencies, Media Worksheets, and Media Guide, it may be taught as a "system approach" employing multi-media. A high degree of student involvement is incorporated in every component; this quality, because it opens up the material to individual investigation by the student, makes the program suited to students of above average ability, as well as to non-academic students.

THE WORLD OF LANGUAGE. Book S and Book H. Robert A. Bennett, editor. Follett Publishing Company. 1972. Number of pages unspecified. $4.41 HB. Teacher manual $4.71. Activities and Evaluation Books $1.47. Teacher edition Activities and Evaluation Books $1.65. are school prices. Primary audience: 7-8. Extended audience: 7-10.

Reading level: 5-7. Book S and Book H of The World of Language emphasize the power and purposes of language: to communicate, inform, persuade, entertain, and reveal. The student explores and compares print and nonprint media and studies the nature and history of language. Oral activities are balanced with composition and the study of language structure and conventions. Each book contains two chapters on grammar and five Language Convention Interludes—mechanics, sentence structure, verbs, pronouns, and word choice. The books have a section on using the library which is included in a reference section along with a handbook. Activities and Evaluation Book S and Book H extend and further individualize the basic texts through language manipulation and practical application of information, concepts, and skills. The teacher's editions include scope and sequence charts; objectives, teaching strategies, activities, and evaluation for each chapter; and bibliographies of additional resource materials.

Some examples of topics are: language as a code or system, social rather than biological; the individual and his language, including slang, profanity, trade language, standard and nonstandard English, standards in language; linguistic geography and a brief history of English; grammar defined and described; the sounds of English.

The teacher's edition contains teaching guides, answers to exercises, translations, definitions, and other supplements.

THE MACMILLAN LANGUAGE SERIES. An Introduction to Modern Grammar (Level 2). Robert J. Geist. Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc. 1970. 239p. $2.84 PB. Teacher manual $3.56. Write publisher for fuller explanation of program. Primary audience: 9-12. Extended audience: 7-12. This nine-chapter text leads the student to discover the elements which govern the nature of the English language. Elements of language are sequentially introduced, defined, and discussed. As linguistic facts are established, they are used as the basis for further observations. Chapters include Grammar, Sentence versus Nonsentence, Parts of Speech, Verbs and Nominal Positions, Clauses, Sentences Classified by Clauses, Verbs Revisited, Verbals, and Unfinished Business, a view of language as a constantly changing and developing means of communicating.

The teacher's edition contains teaching guides, answers to exercises, translations, definitions, and other supplements.

THE MACMILLAN LANGUAGE SERIES. An Introduction to Transformational Grammar (Level 3). Robert J. Geist. Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc. 1970. 206p. $2.92 PB. Teacher manual $3.64. Write publisher for fuller explanation of program. Primary audience: 9-12. Extended audience: 7-12. The third book in the series concentrates on linguistic behavior: the natural formation of statements, questions, commands, affirmatives, negatives, tenses, progressive form, participles, etc. Basic and derived sentences, fundamental to English, are treated. In this way, students are gradually and easily introduced to the technicalities of transformations.

The teacher's edition contains teaching guides, answers to exercises, translations, definitions, and other supplements.

THE MACMILLAN LANGUAGE SERIES. A Short History of English (Level 4). Robert J. Geist. Macmillan Publishing Co., Inc. 1970. 196p. $2.56 PB. Teacher manual $3.20. Write publisher for fuller explanation of program. Primary audience: 9-12. Extended audience: 7-12. The emphasis is on language as a continually self-modifying instrument, responding, changing, and adapting. Both the wide-ranging structural changes that derived Modern English from Old and Middle English as well as the modifications that modern life has brought about are covered. The major periods of English—Pre-English, Old English, Middle English, Modern English—are put into perspective. The formation of new words and meanings, the history of parts of speech, and changes in sounds are developed.

The teacher's edition contains teaching guides, answers to exercises, translations, definitions and other supplements.

IS THAT MOTHER IN THE BOTTLE? Where Language Came from and Where It's Going. Jessica Davidson. Franklin Watts, Inc. 1972. 128p. $4.95 library edition; ISBN 531-02575-6 HB. Primary audience: 9-up. In this sprightly introduction to linguistics, the author deals with such topics as what is essential in the structure of a language, what are the similarities and differences among languages, how the varying patterns of syntax and speech affect meaning and communication, and what problems are inherent in translation. She discusses growth and change in language—formal, idiomatic, slang and neologisms, trade names and slogans. Index.

KEYNOTE REVIEWS. English Grammar. John R. Mosher. Cliffs Notes, Inc. 1968. 88p. $2.25 PB; ISBN 8220-1729-6. 20% discount in quantities of 10 or more. Write Cliffs Notes, Inc., Box 80728, Lincoln, Nebraska 68501. Primary audience: 10-12. Reading level: 10. Cliff's Keynote Reviews are programmed review books. All of the material is selected and arranged to implement and support the basic function of programmed review. The purpose of the books is to enable students to test their own grasp of the subject and to review selectively, so as to prepare for examinations with maximum efficiency. How the books are intended to be used is set forth on the page facing the beginning of the first unit in each volume.

Derive the greatest benefit from the programmed review material in preparing for a test, students should first take the self-test. They then check their answers. For questions or problems that were answered wrong, the explanations or solutions accompanying the correct answers should be studied. If a student's self-test reveals that his or her mastery of the unit is adequate, the student can immediately proceed to the next unit, and so on through the book. When students find themselves weak on a unit, they can remedy the deficiency at once by studying the sections Basic Facts and Additional Information which are part of each unit. At the end of the book there is a final examination with answers, which can be used to test overall preparedness.

Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 10-12. Reading level: 5-6. Special audience: secondary school students reading below 6th grade level. (Remedial). The Houghton Mifflin Action Series is intended to answer the demand for reading programs and materials for junior and senior high school students who lack the motivation and skills needed to read effectively. Action is a two-level series that combines high interest literature with a basic, comprehensive, reading program. Four anthologies at each level contain brief, easy-to-read, contemporary selections that deal with ideas and issues that are part of everyday living. Each anthology contains all major forms of literature as well as a dictionary unit comprised of entries taken from the selections.

The teacher's guides and reading practice books provide the framework for building comprehension and vocabulary skills. These skills are developed systematically and sequentially, progressing from basic word analysis techniques in reading to the transfer of these skills to spelling, individualized study, and creative writing. The application of learning theory through the principles of motivation, readiness, drill/practice, reinforcement, association, and transfer is also implemented sequentially and systematically in each teaching unit.

Reading level: 4-10. Special audience: accelerated 9th graders. (Accelerated). Communications through Effective Reading teaches study and speed reading skills for all content areas needed by average and above average students for successful completion of their individual academic goals. The reading/study skills developed are: anticipating outcomes, classifying ideas, comparing and contrasting, critical thinking, distinguishing facts and opinions, drawing conclusions, cause and effect, establishing sequence, evaluating author's attitude and purpose, establishing and proving hypothesis, interpreting and judging implied ideas, making inferences, research skills, and speed reading.

This program is organized for students to progress at an individualized pace. Communications through Effective Reading is incorporated in the regular curriculum for all students who are not seriously deficient in basic reading skills. Pre- and post-tests are included for assessing students' growth in study skills and reading rate. Regular classroom textbooks are used with the three study books to assure transfer of study skills to everyday classroom application. The inservice manual explains the program's philosophy, methods for teaching, and how to conduct classroom evaluations.

DIRECTIONS. Four Anthologies, Twelve Novelettes, and Four Workbooks. Houghton Mifflin Company. Books available separately or in classroom packages for each level (containing 30 each of 2 anthologies, 30 each of 6 novelettes, and 1 teacher manual) at $165 or $174, school price. Write to Houghton Mifflin Company for further information. Primary audience: 7-10. Extended audience: 5-12. Reading level: 4-6. Special audience: minority group students. The Directions series is designed for indifferent and problem readers in grades 7-10. It is of special interest to minority group students, particularly blacks and the Spanish-surnamed. The chief aim of the series is to help students bring their reading skills up to the level of their social maturity. To achieve this aim, Directions provides reading that is easy but mature in content, reading that gives students settings, situations, and language to recognize and enjoy. The reading texts are the 4 anthologies and the 12 novelettes; 4 workbooks complete the series.

Four Separate Anthologies. Level One: Directions 1, Directions 2; Level Two: Directions 3, Directions 4. John Durham et al. 1972. 192-224p. $1.50-$1.65 PB school price. Teacher manual $3.90. Reading level: 4-6. Each anthology contains five sections that center about a theme. Dig and Be Dug and From California to the New York Island are two typical section titles. Every anthology contains up to 15 stories written especially for the series by such writers for young people as John Durham, Lorenz Graham, and Kristin Hunter. Adding variety and content to each anthology are up to 34 reprinted poems and nonfiction works. The anthologies are illustrated. They are large enough to comprise at least a semester's worth of reading, but small enough not to intimidate the less able reader.

Twelve Novelettes. John Durham et al. 1972. 32-40p. $.48 each PB school price. Reading level: 4. These novelettes were written especially for the Directions series by distinguished writers of junior novels. The novelettes are designed for individual reading. Each is no more than 6500 words long and is divided into brief chapters. It is short enough not to discourage an inexperienced reader, but long enough to bring about that sense of involvement with changing people that is the fascination of the full-length novel. Each novelette can be related to the theme of a particular anthology section or read independently.

Four Workbooks. Levin, Wartenberg, Wartenberg, Wilkinson. 1973. 48p. $.90 each PB school price. Teacher editions $1.65 school price. Reading level: 4-6. These consumable workbooks provide one or two pages of skill-development exercises for each anthology prose selection and one page of exercises for some poems. The reading skills covered range from those concerned with the forms of words and with word meanings to more sophisticated concepts such as cause and effect, main ideas, characterization, drawing conclusions, and the author's style. Most students can use the exercises independently, without additional help from the teacher. The exercises have been developed in such a way that students will usually need to look over the selection just read, using it to improve their skill in reading. Exercise topics for all four workbooks have been structured to provide for adequate review as well as to offer different approaches to the same topic. Since complete teaching is provided each time a topic is developed, students need not do the exercises in a given order.

The teacher's editions for each workbook include the answers, printed in red.

EXERCISES IN PRECISE READING.

Paul W. Lehmann. Educational Publications. 1936. Number of pages unspecified. $.60 PB. Primary audience: 8-12. (Remedial). This book contains 106 paragraphs or excerpts of varying lengths in which one word has been changed to impair the meaning. The exercises give practice in accurate reading and in absorbing the value and flavor of each word as it is encountered. Price includes key.

GUIDEBOOK TO BETTER READING.

John Rambeau. Educational Guidelines Company. 1968. 123p. $2.12 (net delivered price $1.59) PB; ISBN 0-87892-621-6. Teacher manual $2.12. Extended audience: 4-adult. (Remedial). This book is designed for intermediate and junior high students whose reading ability is below their grade level. Stories are written at a high interest level and low vocabulary level. In 30 structured lessons, the student learns to associate sounds with the letters that represent them, to decode words, to use principles of phonics and word structure in word analysis, and to interpret what he reads. The program includes evaluative exercises, review exercises, and recreational reading. Teachers basically unacquainted with principles of reading instruction can successfully teach this complete remedial program without special training or instruction.

HAYDEN LANGUAGE SERIES. Work-

outs in Reading and Writing. O. B. Davis. Hayden Book Company, Inc. 1972. 144p. $2.95 list ($2.36 net) PB; ISBN 0-8104-5877-2. Primary audience: 10-12. Extended audience: 13. Students who want to sharpen their reading and writing skills are directed to see connectively and to appreciate the power of style. Exercises call for imaginative application of principles rather than mechanical regurgitation of facts. Part One, the first two-thirds of the book, focuses on reading skills, with a variety of short exercises for discussion or reading response. Part Two concentrates on writing techniques with exercises ranging from vocabulary and usage workouts to extended prose assignments.

LEGENDS FOR EVERYONE.

Ann Elwood. The Globe Book Company, Inc. 1973. 107p. $3.00 PB; ISBN 0-87065-910-3. Class price $2.25. Teacher manual gratis. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 7-12. Reading level: 2-3. (Remedial). This collection of 24 tales and legends from the American past is organized by region—Tales Told in the East, Tales Told in the Southwest, etc. They represent different historical periods, different types of legends (ghost stories, love stories, stories of heroes and warriors), and different groups of Americans (Indians, pioneers, Afro-Americans, Mexican-Americans). Study aids include a mini-glossary for each story, reading comprehension questions, vocabulary exercises, and ideas for class discussions.

THE LIVING CITY ADVENTURES

SERIES. Mildred Freeman, editor. The Globe Book Company, Inc. 1970. 255p. each. $2.80 PB. Class price $2.10. Teacher manual gratis. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 7-12. Reading level: 4-5. Special audience: urban students. (Remedial). In this series of three short story collections the characters are believable. Some are white, some are black, some are red, many are Spanish-speaking Americans, yet the stories focus not on race or cultural differences but on the problems and dreams today's young people share, wherever they live. Two-color illustrations accompany the stories. Varied exercises in reading skills—word analysis, vocabulary development, and reading comprehension—are provided in a section at the back of each book.

The Pattern Means More than It Says; VII. Image-Making Patterns; VIII. Sentences into Paragraphs; IX. The Patterns of Paragraphs; X. Paragraph Links; XI. The Largest Pattern: Purpose.

This book is designed to meet the need for direct, organized instruction in reading development for on-grade and above-grade readers. A unified and coherent, sequential and cumulative program of learning is made possible by organization of the lessons around a central principle: "patterns of meaning." The aim is to foster development not only in basic comprehension but also in critical, creative, and appreciative reading. Such diverse skills as inference-making, propaganda recognition, semantic insights, and interpreting and appreciating metaphorical language are included. Each unit is presented in three main phases: Explanation, Central Idea, Practice Lessons. The instructional burden of the book is borne largely by the lively, challenging exercises in which students are involved.

Teaching guide free with purchase of 20 or more copies. Order from Scholastic Book Services, 904 Sylvan Avenue, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632. Primary audience: 7-12. Pattern for Reading's 15 illustrated chapters introduce essential comprehension, critical reading, vocabulary, and organizational skills, and then provide practice that reinforces the learning. Students start their reading wherever their own weaknesses appear. They move quickly through the lessons that reinforce what they know, more slowly when they come upon skills they lack. Instructions and model examples right in the book provide all the needed hows and whys, and longer reading selections provide ample practice.

Pattern for Reading teaching guide includes complete quiz answers, suggested clues, and lesson plans.

Classroom packages, 1 teaching unit and 30 student readers, available as well as component parts available separately. Write to National Textbook Company for catalog. Primary audience: 7-10. Project English is a series of six integrated teaching units to help teachers individualize the reading of literature for each student in their class. The units represent the materials developed and evaluated by teachers involved in the Purdue Project English experiment. They are designed to make the literary work serve as a springboard for the diverse language arts activities needed to accommodate a heterogeneous class.

Each unit utilizes a three-track approach to accommodate the needs and abilities of slow, median, and bright students. Each contains lesson plans, diagnostic tests, handout material, reading lists, and references.

The six titles now available are: The Diary of a Young Girl, Treasure Island, The Odyssey, Visit to a Small Planet, Hiroshima, and Life on the Mississippi.

Each teaching unit includes a three-track approach consisting of: initiatory lessons, developmental lessons, culminating lessons, pre- and post-tests, teacher-pupil dialogues, satellite reading lists, teacher's references, and resources for hand-out materials.

REACH (Reading Extravaganza of American Cycling and Hydroplane Show). Anne E. Hughes, Katherine Bond. Individualized Instruction Inc. 1973. 225p. $2.92 ($2.19 net delivered) PB; ISBN 0-87892-864-2. Pacetapes $196.00 ($147.00 net delivered); ISBN 0-87892-862-6. Teacher manual $2.92 ($2.19 net delivered). Handbook for the supplementary readers $1.24 ($.93 net delivered); ISBN 0-87892-867-7. Extended audience: 4-9. (Remedial). REACH is a reading program for intermediate students who are reading below grade level. It is individualized, success-oriented, self-paced and educationally accountable. REACH is about show business. The student finds his or her duties with the traveling show considerably involved with word-perception and comprehension skills. In a pressure-free, personalized atmosphere, the student makes independent progress in word-attack skills, vocabulary expansion, and comprehension development. As the student participates in each show, the student discovers that learning and reading can be fun. Students receive immediate feedback from the pacer, which allows them to check their own work on the exercise pages.

Most shows are divided into five interdependent sections: word-attack skills, reading vocabulary development, audio and/or reading selection, audio comprehension, and evaluative testing. REACH attacks reading problems at the point of origin in the student's basic attitude toward reading. Six supplementary readers are an optional feature.

READING COMPREHENSION: LESSONS AND TESTS. Samuel F. Zimbal, Wilbert J. Levy. Amsco School Publications, Inc. 1972. 304p. $1.30 PB; $3.30 HB. ISBN 87720-362-8 PB; 87720-363-6 HB. Keys $30. Workbook 128p.; $1.45, ISBN 87720-323-7; teacher edition $1.65, ISBN 87720-324-5. Write or phone Amsco School Publications, Inc., 315 Hudson St., New York, New York 10013; (212) 675-7005. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 7-11. Reading level: 7. Through 45 lessons and 13 tests, this book offers direct and systematic instruction in reading comprehension skills. The reading materials included have been selected to provide a variety of experiences and challenges as to content, style, and level of difficulty. They include narration, description, and exposition, fiction and nonfiction, and prose and poetry. They have been culled from books, magazines, and newspapers. The exercises zero in on major components of reading comprehension—vocabulary strength, seeing the main idea, following the development of thought, grasping details, and seeing implied as well as expressed meanings. The book is suitable for the average student of grades 7-9 and for slower students of grades 10-11.

READING DEVELOPMENT KITS. Edwin H. Smith, Robert H. Geeslin, Carol M. Geeslin. Addison-Wesley Publishing Company. 1969. Number of pages unspecified. Kit A $48.00 PB; ISBN 0-201-07050-2. Kit B $48.00 PB; ISBN 0-201-07109-6. Kit C $67.50 PB; ISBN 0-201-114-2. Teacher manual $.51. Reading Development Progress Record (set of 10) $3.15. Informal Reading Development Inventory (package of 20) $9.45. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: 13-14. Reading level: A, 1-3; B, 4-6; C, 7-10. (Remedial). These three kits teach word attack and comprehension skills through a structured program presenting selections on topics such as job benefits, space exploration, and drug addiction. Each kit contains 25 lessons, each lesson consisting of three parts: (1) a set of reading readiness exercises; (2) the reading selection; (3) follow-up exercises including comprehension questions, checks on skill mastery, and open-ended questions and activities. Each kit also contains an instructor's manual and a placement test. Kit A covers reading levels from beginning to grade 3; Kit B, levels 4-5-6; Kit C, levels 7-10-plus.

THE READING LINE. English Language & Literature, Science, Mathematics, Social Studies, Business, Vocational-Technical. Irene M. Reiter. Polaski Company, Inc. 1971; 1973. 76p. each. $2.50 PB. Teacher manual $1.50. The Reading Line Lab (multiple copies of student books) $97.50. Order from Polaski Company, Inc., Box 7466, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19101. Primary audience: 7-12. Extended audience: college and adult education. Reading level: 3-10. The Reading Line is a reading and study skills program in the content areas. There are six student books: English Language & Literature, Science, Mathematics, Social Studies, Business, and Vocational-Technical. Students learn to read, study, take notes and take tests in all content areas. Each student book contains a series of ten reading/study exercises. Each selection contains material written at three progressively harder levels of difficulty. Students learn to read material at the level their own content area texts are written. The emphasis is not on acquisition of specific information, but on helping students become aware of what goes on in their minds as they read, deepening that awareness and refining the ability to put it to good use. Extension activities built into each reading selection effect and insure the transfer from The Reading Line to regular course materials. The aim of The Reading Line is to teach students to read real-life written materials.

Each student book also contains a study skills handbook that students can refer to. It explains the four areas of readability factors, the four S's (a system of clues for analyzing written material), and note-taking and test-taking (objective and subjective) techniques. But students learn the skills by doing the exercises—the handbook is a reference.

The Reading Line teacher's guide contains lesson plans and the reading and study skills handbook. It also contains a pre- and post-test so that teachers can measure student progress. While language arts teachers can use all the titles or the lab, other content area teachers (science, math, etc.) can use their content area title with their own classes. A school-wide reading program can be implemented with students getting instruction in reading and learning skills throughout the school day.

SCHOLASTIC'S ACTION PROGRAMS. Action. Mel Cebulash, editor. Scholastic Magazines, Inc. 1970. Number of pages unspecified. $87.50 net for complete unit for 20 students. Order from Scholastic Book Services, 904 Sylvan Avenue, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 2.0-4.0. (Remedial). Action is a full-semester reading program for secondary students whose skills and vocabulary level are at 2.0 to 4.0. The Action unit incorporates basic word attack and reading comprehension skills in an intensive 18-week program of reading, role-playing, discussion, and writing structured into a skills program. The heart of the Action program is the skills material worked into three unit books. Prereading and comprehension quizzes introduce, reinforce, and test basic skills sequentially, utilizing high-interest, mature short stories that are written on progressively more difficult grade levels, from 2.0 to 2.9.

Each Action unit contains: a 12" LP record, 20 copies of unit book I (5 stories, reading level 2.0-2.2, plus exercises), 20 copies of unit book II (7 stories, reading level 2.2-2.5, plus exercises), 20 copies of unit book III (8 stories, reading level 2.6-2.9, plus exercises), 20 copies of a short story anthology, 20 copies of an illustrated anthology of short plays, 6 posters, and a 280-page teaching guide which contains the text of every story and play found in the student materials, plus three survey/inventory tests and hundreds of suggestions for additional and supplemental work, exercises, and activities.

SCHOLASTIC'S ACTION PROGRAMS. Double Action. Mel Cebulash, editor. Scholastic Magazines, Inc. 1973. Number of pages unspecified. $97.50 net for complete unit for 20 students. Order from Scholastic Book Services, 904 Sylvan Avenue, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 3.0-5.0. (Remedial). Double Action is designed to raise secondary reading levels a full grade-and-a-half with reading selections from 3.0 to 5.0 on the Spache Readability Formula. Exercises assure the slowest reader of an initial 80% correct response pattern. The two unit books in Double Action work to develop student skills gradually, providing continuous reinforcement. The short story anthology, with adaptations of the work of such writers as Langston Hughes and Evan Hunter as well as many original stories written specifically for this unit, gives students the opportunity for free reading that will refine their skills. The play anthology, including nine open-ended plays and one complete one, is designed to motivate students to write, express themselves verbally, and think logically.

Each Double Action unit contains 20 copies each of two unit books, 20 copies of the short story anthology, 20 copies of the play anthology, 2 LP records of dramatic presentations to establish comprehension skills, 6 posters, and a 272-page teaching guide which includes the complete contents of the unit books and student anthologies and a comprehensive day-by-day teaching plan.

ALIVE AND LISTENING. Dun-Donnelley Publishing Corporation. 1973. 9 cassettes, 60 page duplicator master book, 108 page teacher manual, all in a self-contained vinyl library shelf album, $115.00. Write to Dun-Donnelley Publishing Corporation, 666 5th Avenue, New York, New York 10019, or call George Withers at (202)337-8037. Primary audience: 8-11. Extended audience: 7-12. Sixteen audio-cassette modules designed for student participation in the development of listening skills are in conjunction with printed self-evaluation practices that stimulate interest in personal progress. Pre- and post-tests incorporating the skills taught assist teacher accountability records. The teacher guide, organized with the teacher's individual needs in mind, offers a clear methodology, additional subject information that may be useful, topic questions and discussion starters, and activity ideas that give additional practice in the skills taught and extend the concepts explored.

Of particular interest to many educators is the in-depth attention this program gives to evaluation of commercial propaganda, or "Doublespeak." Language arts evaluation and interpretation skills are applied to spoken communication and the student practices separating fact from opinion, distinguishing prejudicial language, testing evidence, reasoning, examining supportive information, and arriving at valid conclusions and inferences.

Drama, humor, and imagery of interest to teenagers are used. Three Mexican teenagers on a rooftop in Los Angeles discuss what they want their futures to be; a young boy learns how to land "the big one" on a deep sea fishing expedition; two sisters have an argument; a small-time gangster meets a small grocery owner who isn't afraid; two simulated TV commercials and five episodes of a new Sherlock Holmes mystery, each one pointing up evaluation skill clues, are a few of the dramatic presentations that involve young students in the learning to listen process. Students hear the trained voices of 22 professional actors chosen for audio characterization and carefully planned sound effects that create realistic backgrounds for the dramatizations.

The program consists of three main strands or sections:

Section 1: Overcoming Distractions. Here the student, given down-to-earth reasons why better listening has personal and real value to him or her, practices overcoming physical distractions that interfere with concentration.

Section 2: Controlling Emotions. This section explains the psychological blocks to qualitative listening and offers role-play practice in listening, remembering, and understanding communications that have emotional overtones.

Section 3: Understanding and Evaluating the Message. Makes a clear case for the need to evaluate communication of any kind in today's society. This longest, and perhaps most important, of the three strands is carefully structured and throughout the narration, the dramatic episodes, and the questions followed by carefully explained answers, students are given the intellectual tools to offset the manipulative pressures of prejudice, rhetoric, and commercial propaganda.

ALTERNATIVES. Critical Thinking. Bernard R. Tanner, Robert E. Shutes. Addison-Wesley Publishing Company. 1973. 72p. $.90 PB; ISBN 0-201-07467-2. Teacher manual $.45. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 10-11. Extended audience: 9-12. Reading level: 10. This book trains the student to draw his own conclusions and to develop reasons and arguments to support them. It also trains him to analyze others' arguments and to detect possible fallacies in such rhetorical appeals as newspaper editorials, TV commercials, and political speeches. The book also stimulates creative thinking, as it explores the relationships between thought, language, and imagination. Writing assignments are an integral part of the pro-

FORMS IN YOUR FUTURE. M. Goltry. Learning Trends Division, The Globe Book Company, Inc. 1973. 112p. $2.00 PB; ISBN 0-87065-922-7. Class price $1.50. Teacher manual gratis. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-12. This text-workbook is comprised of 24 lessons which are built around such common forms as: job application forms, bank forms, driver's license and marriage license applications, a mail order catalog order form, insurance forms, a federal income tax form, a voter registration form, etc. Each lesson includes a brief introduction, a vocabulary activity, and an actual, unsimplified form for the students to fill out. Pages are perforated and punched to fit into the students' notebooks.

MAKING SENSE: EXPLORING SEMANTICS AND CRITICAL THINKING. The Globe Book Company, Inc. See entry in "Grammar/Language" single volumes and packages section.

THE NEW PHONICS WE USE. Books E, F, G. Arthur W. Heilman et al. Rand McNally/Lyons and Carnahan. 1948; 6th ed. 1972. 112p. each. Prices are list prices; order from Rand McNally. Primary audience: 4-6. Extended audience: 7-8. (Remedial). These three sequenced workbooks encourage flexibility of approach to word analysis. The three main emphases are sound/symbol recognition, dictionary skills, and analysis of word structure—all as prerequisites for the independent reader. Lessons teach such specifics as individual sounds and their representative written combinations and patterns, dictionary guide words, dictionary spellings, dictionary abbreviations, multiple definitions, dialect variations, inflectional and derivational endings, prefixes, base words, syllabication, homonyms, synonyms, and antonyms. Both to appeal to and to challenge the reluctant or handicapped reader, the skills are developed through crossword puzzles, word games, rhymes, riddles, listening activities, stories, and other varied exercises. A teacher's edition is available for each level.

Merrill Publishing Company. Primary audience: 9-12. Reading level: 9-12. Common Words (Revised) is designed for use as an integral part of a high school English program. It provides a full, balanced course of study in spelling. Students learn to observe and master word forms and to unlock meanings of words. Each unit contains the following sections: Visualizing Words (acquiring sight recognition), Working with Words, Study Frames (special problems or important generalizations), Tint Frames (highlighting a particular word, homonyms, etc.), and Spelling Tests.

CONTINUED PROGRESS IN SPELLING (CPS). Edwin A. Read, Ruel A. Allred, Louise O. Baird. Individualized Instruction Inc. 1972. Extended audience: 1-8. CPS is individualized and allows each student to study at his or her own rate of speed the words which he or she most needs to know how to spell. CPS is a multilevel program that features peer instruction, grouping of words into lists, a test-study-test approach, and a student's self-management study manual. The program utilizes a combination

CPS, Primary and Intermediate, begins with a series of placement tests which places each student on the level of his or her spelling ability. The words on each of the sixteen levels are grouped according to difficulty and frequency of use.

The word list for CPS includes nearly 5000 words. They are grouped so that when the student has mastered the first 1000 words, he or she will be able to spell 89 percent of the words that will be used in writing as a child and as an adult (with the second thousand, 95 percent, and with the third and fourth, 98 percent). Because of its multilevel structure, CPS may be installed in any classroom at any time during the year.

LANGUAGE MASTERY SPELLERS, 1-8. David H. Patton, Eleanor M. Johnson. Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company. 1968. Approximately 120p. each. $1.17 each, PB school price. Skilltext, Level 1, ISBN 0-675-07018-X. Level 2, 0-675-07028-4. Level 3, 0-675-07038-4. Level 4, 0-675-07048-1. Level 5, 0-675-07058-9. Level 6, 0-675-07068-6. Level 7, 0-675-07078-3. Level 8, 0-675-07088-0. Teacher manual $1.50 each, school price. Write Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company. Primary audience: 1-8. Reading level: 1-8. This series provides students with a foundation of spelling skills by presenting more than 97% of the words students will need for writing throughout their lives. The presentation of spelling combines a phonetic approach with a spelling-pattern approach. The teacher's manual for each level contains suggestions, enrichment words, and a complete testing program.

SEE, SAY, AND WRITE! Books 1 and 2. Norman Lewis. Amsco School Publications, Inc. 1973. Book 1 208p., $2.30 PB, ISBN 87720-346-6. Book 2 224p., $2.40 PB, ISBN 87720-348-2. Phone or write Amsco School Publications, Inc., 315 Hudson St., New York, New York 10013; (212) 675-7005. Primary audience: Book 1, 6-8; Book 2, 7-9. Each of these books uses a multisensory approach to spelling power through spelling patterns. The chief aim is to provide the student with validly based feelings of success and accomplishment. The chief means deploy design, color, and exercise content to build up a student's visual, auditory, and kinesthetic memory. Constant practice, tests, and reviews reinforce learning. Each book contains 20 units, 10 review exercises, and 2 achievement tests. Each unit consists of 10 to 25 "frames."

SOUND SPELLING. Books 1-6. Edwin H. Smith, G. Glennon Rowell. Boyd & Fraser Publishing Company. 1971. 92p. each. $1.95 PB each; set of 6 for $9.95. Primary audience: adult neo-literates. Extended audience: 3-12. Reading level: 2-4 (Remedial). This is a series of proand branched programming, diagnostic tests, and self-pacing instruction in spelling for the most severely disabled student. The approach is phonemic-graphemic. The materials were originally developed and field-tested in educational programs in federal penitentiaries. Although the primary audience is the neo-literate adult, students in junior and senior high school like the workbooks and feel that they build confidence in spelling.

WORD BOOK SPELLING PROGRAM. Lorrene Love Ort, Eunice E. Wallace. Rand McNally/Lyons and Carnahan. 1962; 4th ed. 1974. Number of pages unspecified. Order from Rand McNally & Company. Primary audience: 7-8. Extended audience: 7-9. This inductive and linguistically-oriented spelling program presents important spelling patterns and word-building principles. The series' methodology promotes mastery of the sounds, structures, and meaning of language through lessons guided by such principles as visual and rhyming patterns, sound/symbol relationships, morphemes, and semantic applications. The program also provides training in dictionary use and presents frequent opportunities for creative writing.

Each book is basically divided into units. The initial lesson of each unit presents a spelling theme, the subsequent lessons investigate generalizations about it, and the final lesson emphasizes its useful applications. Built into the program are both short-term and long-term diagnostic and achievement tests. A teacher's edition is available for each book.

ADVENTURES WITH WORDS. Book I. Joseph Bellafiore. Amsco School Publications, Inc. 1971. 176p. $1.40 PB; ISBN 87720-353-9. Answer keys $.30. Write or phone Amsco School Publications, Inc., 315 Hudson St., New York, New York 10013; (212) 675-7005. Extended audience: 7-8. Reading level: 6-7. This book consists of the following units: Take Stock of Your Word Knowledge; Build up Your Vocabulary; Homonyms, Synonyms, and Antonyms; Word-Building and Borrowing; Words in Action; Correct Usage and Diction; Changing Styles in Expression; The Power of Words; Test Your Progress in Word Growth.

Adventures with Words, Book I, offers a year's work in the mastery of expression and of the techniques for improving a student's knowledge of words and their ways. Designed to broaden and refine the ability to use words effectively, this book helps to build the quality as well as the quantity of the student's vocabulary.

The book begins with a series of self-tests to enable the student to determine the strengths and deficiencies of his own vocabulary. The bulk of the book takes the student through a series of units covering the range of methods to develop vocabulary skills. Included are units on synonyms and antonyms, word origins, foreign phrases, correct usage, variety in phrasing, popular idioms, and the semantic approach to words. The final unit offers another series of tests to evaluate the student's progress. Suggestions for further study are included.

ADVENTURES WITH WORDS. Book II. Joseph Bellafiore. Amsco School Publications, Inc. 1971. 224p. $1.45 PB; ISBN 87720-355-5. Answer keys $.30. Write or phone Amsco School Publications, Inc., 315 Hudson St., New York, New York 10013; (212) 675-7005. Extended audience: 8-9. Reading level: 7-8. This book consists of the following units: Take Stock of Your Word Knowledge; Build up Your Vocabulary; Get the Meaning in Context and Analogies; Words Built on Prefixes, Stems, and Suffixes; Foreign Borrowings in English; Old and New in Our Language; Homonyms, Synonyms, and Antonyms; Changing Styles in Expression; Correct Usage and Diction; The Power of Words; Odds and Ends; Test Your Progress in Word Growth.

The book continues to build vocabulary upon the foundations set in Adventures with Words, Book I. Emphasis is placed on motivation and guidance by stressing the realities of experience and avoiding the emptiness of divorcing words from actualities.

ALL ABOUT WORDS: AN ADULT APPROACH TO VOCABULARY BUILDING. Maxwell Nurnberg, Morris Rosenblum. New American Library, Inc. 1966. 416p. $1.50 PB. Primary audience: 8-12. Extended audience: 7-12. From word roots in ancient languages to space age technology, this book gives a program for vocabulary building. A guide for students who face vocabulary-based examinations, it has an index, sample tests, games, puzzles, and exercises.

BASE (Basic Approach to the Structure of English). Don Ellis, Mildred Halley, Robert Hauge, authors; Harold Allen, consulting linguist. Individualized Instruction Inc. 1971. 104p. $2.20 PB; ISBN 0-87892-840-5. Pacetapes $160.00; ISBN 0-87892-842-1. Net delivered prices $1.65 and $120.00. Teacher manual $2.20. Extended audience: 4-adult. BASE shows students how the study of language can be enjoyable and easy with exercises that progress almost imperceptibly in difficulty. BASE was designed to give students an understanding of how words are structured; it leads students to build up to 53 additional words on each root word and emphasizes the influence each affix has on the original meaning of the base. BASE employs humor and contemporary subjects; it may be used with a wide range of age and grade levels and may offer either remediation or enrichment, depending upon the need of the student. The teacher's handbook contains complete instructions; no prior knowledge of the program is required.

VOCABULARY FOR THE COLLEGE-BOUND STUDENT. Harold Levine. Amsco School Publications, Inc. 1972. Write or phone Amsco School Publications, Inc., 315 Hudson St., New York, New York 10013; (212) 675-7005. Extended audience: 10-12. Reading level: 10. The primary aim of this book is to provide help for high school students seeking to enlarge their vocabulary, whether their goal is college admission, better employment opportunities, or overall self-improvement. A companion aim is to assist English teachers interested in enriching instruction through direct teaching of vocabulary.

This book organizes vocabulary study by teaching words in groups, each group consisting of words related to one another in some meaningful way.

Chapter II uses the grouping principle of the central idea. Each of its 25 word groups is organized around a different idea such as health, praise, height, smell, etc.

Vocabulary

Chapter III teaches 25 groups too, but this time the unifying concept is a Greek root, such as phil meaning "love," and mis meaning "hate"; or a Greek prefix, such as hyper meaning "over" and hypo meaning "under."

Chapter IV does the same with Latin, but on a much larger scale because of Latin's greater influence on English.

Chapter V teaches a group of notable words descended from the myths and history of the Greeks and Romans.

Chapter VI deals with several groups of Anglo-Saxon origin. In some of these, Anglo-Saxon-derived words are presented side by side with Latin-derived words of similar meaning.

Chapter VII teaches groups of words adopted from French. Each group is organized around a separate topic, such as conversation, food, dress, etc.

Chapters VIII and IX do the same with loan words from Italian and Spanish, respectively.

Chapter X teaches students how to expand their vocabulary further by showing them how to form derivatives. It helps them, for example, to convert plausible to implausible, plausibly, implausibly, plausibility, implausibility, etc. In so doing, it provides a review of some useful spelling rules.

Chapter XI discusses and analyzes the officially released sample vocabulary questions for four widely given pre-college examinations: Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT); Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT); National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test; New York State Regents Scholarship Examination.

Chapter XII, Dictionary of Words Taught in This Text, is intended as a tool of reference and review.

Throughout the volume, learning is reinforced by illustrative sentences, varied exercises and drills, and cumulative reviews. Many of the exercises have been patterned after the types of vocabulary questions encountered in pre-college tests.

VOCABULARY FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT. Harold Levine. Amsco School Publications, Inc. 1972. Write or phone: Amsco School Publications, Inc., 315 Hudson St., New York, New York 10013; (212) 675-7005. Extended audience: 9-10. Reading level: 9. This book is a direct, organized, and multi-pronged attack on vocabulary study. Unit I, Learning New Words from the Context, presents 160 short passages and sentences, including many from well-known works of literature. Each contains at least one important word that the student should add to his or her vocabulary and whose meaning can be determined from clues in the context. By training students to interpret these clues, this unit provides them with a fundamental vocabulary-building tool and makes them better readers.

In this unit, as throughout the book, the pronunciation and definition of each new word are clearly indicated, and an illustrative sentence is provided for each definition.

Unit II, Enlarging Vocabulary through Central Ideas, introduces the technique of studying related words together. It presents 20 groups of words, the unifying concept in each group being a central idea such as poverty, wealth, fear, courage, etc.

Unit III, Enlarging Vocabulary through Anglo-Saxon Prefixes, teaches 8 groups, each consisting of words starting with the same prefix, e.g., fore (meaning "beforehand"), mis (meaning "badly"), etc.

Unit IV, Enlarging Vocabulary through Latin Prefixes, presents 24 groups, each consisting of words beginning with the same Latin prefix, e.g., dis (meaning "apart"), ob (meaning "against"), etc.

Unit V, Enlarging Vocabulary through Latin Roots, deals with 20 groups, each based on a different Latin root, such as scrib (meaning "write") and man. (meaning "hand").

Unit VI, Enlarging Vocabulary through Greek Word Elements, uses a similar approach with 20 groups, each based on a different Greek word element, such as pan (meaning "all") and chron (meaning "time").

Unit VII, Expanding Vocabulary through Derivatives, trains the student to convert one word into several, e.g., literate to illiterate, semiliterate, literacy, illiteracy, etc. This unit provides an incidental review of some basic spelling rules.

Unit VIII, Word Relationships and Word Analogies, develops the student's ability and confidence in coping with word analogy questions in preparation for scholarship, civil service, and college entrance tests.

The Dictionary of Words Taught in This Text at the end of the volume is intended as a tool of reference and review.

A feature of the book is its number of exercises. Each subunit begins with a pretest to stimulate curiosity and ends with a battery of varied exercises to develop mastery and measure achievement.

Humanities

kind's identity: the private search for self, public identification, people's relationships to their fellow man and woman and society at large. It questions why people behave as they do, and demonstrates how they reveal themselves through their creative efforts.

Who Am I? Where Did I Come From? Where Am I Going? The Eternal Questions. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 43p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. In an attempt to appreciate the role of a sense of the self in the quest for identity, students raise questions in a round-table conference with Melvin Tumin, professor of sociology at Princeton University. The program examines the process of ever-increasing change in the self as opposed to following the dictates of authority or tradition.

Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Examines the role of adolescence in attempts to define the self. Using several fictional characters, the program explores the popularity of adolescence, the personal importance of rites of passage in defining the self, and the moment of maturity as reflected in their experiences.

Reviewed in English Journal, February 1973.

Man as Hero: Tragic and Comic. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 38p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience 9-12. Exploring the relationships between individual identity and cultural tradition, the hero is defined as one who has a profound effect on other people's lives, whose life reflects the inherent values of the time. Taking Carlyle's "The history of the world is but the biography of great men" as a point of departure, the program provides an analysis of the nature of the hero and hero worship, the need for heroes, and the emergence of the anti-hero.

No Man Is an Island: An Inquiry into Alienation. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1971. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 36p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The program takes an historic look at alienation, examining figures of literary, artistic, and political discontent, young people alienated from their society, and those who are troubled by the alienation that surrounds them; shows that alienation has produced profound intellectual, religious and artistic achievements that have influenced the history of humankind.

The Psychology of Man: An Inquiry into Human Behavior. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 37p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The unit provides basic material on human behavior, focusing first on the meaning of personality and the many influences on individual behavior. Biological and cultural influences on behavior are carefully explored. Students also study people in groups and investigate the dynamics of group behavior.

Why Man Creates: Man—The Measure of All Things. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1971. $144.50. Three-part program includes 240 color slides in 3 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 3 tape cassettes, 3 12" LP records, and a 48p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program examines great works of art and literature in an attempt to search for meaning in today's increasingly complex world. Using an interdisciplinary approach, the program helps students identify with the fears and hopes of others and gain new perspective on their own lives.

HUMANITIES CURRICULUM UNIT I: Recommended Supplementary Sound-Slide Programs.

Man Alone and Loneliness: The Dilemma of Modern Society. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 32p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Exploring loneliness and aloneness as constant realities of the human condition, the program makes the distinction between the emptiness of loneliness and the positive possibilities for creativity and self-evaluation in aloneness.

The Many Masks We Wear. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 43p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The program examines the functional and symbolic aspects of the use of the mask throughout history; it emphasizes the concept of the mask in societal and psychological contexts.

The Reality of Imagination: An Inquiry into Human Creativity. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1974. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 42p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Tracing the connection between creativity and imagination, this program shows that imagination tempered by reason creates new ways of communicating feelings and gaining self-insight. The program illustrates how inner reality has not only provided the fuel for artistic and scientific discovery but also a heightened view of life.

Man's Search for the Meaning of Life. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 42p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program traces the ways in which people have historically sought to explain life's meaning through religion, philosophy, science, and art. It emphasizes the process of the search for meaning that unites human beings.

HUMANITIES CURRICULUM UNIT

II. How Man Communicates. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1971-74. Complete package of 6 programs $585.00. Package and/or components available from the publisher on approval for a 30-day period. Extended audience: 9-12. Complete package includes: 30 copies How Man Communicates (55p. PB student activity book), available separately at $1.10 each; 2 copies How Man Communicates (60p. PB teacher's curriculum unit guide), available separately at $2.86 each; and 6 sound-slide programs (described separately below). Invites students to probe the means of communication they have at their disposal—from a simple handshake to sophisticated electronic gadgetry. They explore language, symbols, and media in order to discover how ideas are communicated. The unit is designed to help students understand the nature of human perception.

Language, Signs and Symbols: How Man Communicates. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 43p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The program examines how people learned to transmit their experiences through the spoken and written word; explores failures in communication between individuals and nations; discusses how signs and symbols reflect a society's values and beliefs. Insights into human communication are drawn from the writings of Miguel de Cervantes, Richard Brautigan, S. I. Hayakawa, and others.

Learning to See and Understand: Developing Visual Literacy. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 47p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The program deals with visual perception and describes how various ways of seeing are influenced by personal experience, by language, and by society. Students are encouraged to develop a new vocabulary of expression that will expand, but not replace, the literary vocabulary of the past. The program points out how writers such as Mark Twain and Henry David Thoreau sharpened and expanded their visual perception in order to give greater clarity and depth to their writing. Marshall McLuhan and Stanley Kubrick offer contemporary comments on visual literacy.

Media and Meaning: Human Expression and Technology. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides packaged in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 41p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program traces the rapidly accelerating evolution of media from human gestures to computers, television, and beyond; it cites such media experts as Marshall McLuhan, Alvin Toffler, and Buckminster Fuller assessing the present and future impact of media on people's lives.

Art with a Message: Protest and Propaganda; Satire and Social Comment. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1971. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides packaged in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 44p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Investigating manner in which art has been used vehicle for propaganda and protest, this program helps students understand and recognize the power of art to persuade through distortion. Students see how the art of satire is used to expose the frailties of men and women, society, and governments.

An Inquiry into Human Perception: The Nature of Beauty and Ugliness. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides packaged in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 47p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Students are shown how very arbitrary and relative the ideals of beauty and ugliness are and how closely they are tied to deeper philosophical, sociological, and economic considerations. The program explores the many visions of writers and artists.

Philosophers' Ideas that Changed the World: Christ, Darwin, Marx, Freud. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides packaged in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 45p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Philosophers Christ, Darwin, Marx, and Freud each initiated a revolution against established doctrines. In religion, in natural sciences, in politics, and in psychology, the perceptions of these four men changed the minds of millions of people. The program emphasizes two important points: each of these men was a product of his own environment and culture, and the profound impact of the ideas of each was due in large measure to the fact that the times were right and the people were ready.

HUMANITIES CURRICULUM UNIT II: Recommended Supplementary Sound-Slide Programs.

Literature with a Message: Protest and Propaganda; Satire and Social Comment. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1974. $144.50. Three-part program includes 240 color slides in 3 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 3 tape cassettes, 3 12"

Humanities

LP records, and a 45p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Exploring literature as a force for social change, the program examines how literature has traditionally influenced values, ideas, and life styles around the world. It includes the literary efforts of modern writers who are continuing to seek social change and human enlightenment through their work.

Personal Communication: Gestures, Expressions and Body English. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1974. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 42p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program explores nonverbal communication—how people use their bodies to convey ideas and reinforce words, both in everyday experience and in the arts and media.

The Language of Man: How Words Change Our Lives. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1974. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 42p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The program explores people's need for laws to define social relationships with others and to provide guidelines for human behavior. Law is viewed both as an entity and as a process constantly evolving in order to reflect the consensus of a people.

The Pursuit of Happiness: Man's Search for the Good Life. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 39p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available on 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program questions whether people determine for themselves what constitutes the good life or if the age and culture to which they belong prescribes it. The program surveys the good life historically, as it has been represented in art, literature, and politics.

The American Dream: Myth or Reality? The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 37p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Students view the 19th century in America, when the realities of life were disguised in an outburst of Romanticism in literature and art; they confront, as did the more realistic writers and artists of the time, the social dislocation that accompanies change.

East Meets West: A Contrast in Values and Cultures. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 51p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 37p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The program attempts to evaluate the positive and negative uses of advanced technology; it focuses on possible new roles for the individual in the future; it examines the views of those who predict humanity's destruction as well as those to whom the future holds only exciting challenges.

The Mass Mind: Conformity and Individualism. The Center for Humanities,

Humanities

Inc. 1974. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 39p teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program examines the many forces, both internal and external, that society has employed to control individuals and that individuals have used to control others. Despite such devices as brute force and psychological control, it has always been the thread of conscience that has prompted people to assert their individuality. The program suggests that today, more than ever before in human history, we can control our lives, and that it is up to each of us to exercise the option offered by society.

HUMANITIES CURRICULUM UNIT IV. Man and His Values. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1971-74. Complete package of 6 programs $585.00. Package and/or components available from the publisher on approval for a 30-day period. Extended audience: 9-12. Complete package includes: 30 copies Man and His Values (55p. PB student activity book), available separately at $1.10 each; 2 copies Man and His Values (60p. PB teacher's curriculum unit guide), available separately at $2.86 each; and 6 sound-slide programs (described separately below). This unit seeks to uncover the origins of human values in religion, philosophy, family, and society. Students study how concepts of good and evil have historically affected human conduct. Particular emphasis is given to the judgment-making process and the changing nature of human values.

Man and His Values: An Inquiry into Good and Evil. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 26p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program encourages students to look at their own themselves the need for an individual ethic; recognize the role of personal responsibility in all value systems. It investigates the relationships between an individual's value judgments and values defined by church, state, society, or family.

An Inquiry into the Nature of Man: His Inhumanity and His Humanity. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1971. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 35p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Part One examines people's inhumanity to others, confronting students with the question of whether inhumanity is part of our very nature. Part Two investigates the essence of people's humanity; their sometimes fierce struggle to express that which is best about themselves.

Reviewed in English Journal, May 1973.

Man and His Gods: An Inquiry into the Nature of Religion. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 47p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program surveys how people through the ages have created supernatural forces to help explain the phenomena of the universe. Included are relevant questions pertaining to religion in the 20th century: Is God dead? What is there to take God's place? Are science and religion incompatible? Students are asked to relate humanity's historic beliefs to contemporary spiritual conflicts.

Freedom and Responsibility: A Question of Values. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 47p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program illustrates the value that humans have traditionally placed on freedom and describes how men and women in literature and history have met the responsibilities of their lives.

The Origins of American Values: The Puritan Ethic to the Jesus Freaks. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 49p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. By following the historical development of American political and sociological values, students gain insights into what they may yet become.

Human Values in an Age of Technology. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1972. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 39p. teacher guide. (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program investigates the effects of modern technology on individuals and on nations; considers the creative, humanizing implications of technology as well as its potential to demean and depersonalize; contends that technology is neither good nor evil in itself—it is what people do with it that either harms or enhances human life.

HUMANITIES CURRICULUM UNIT IV: Recommended Supplementary Sound-Slide Programs.

Conflict in American Values: Life Style vs. Standard of Living. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1973. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 45p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program investigates evolving human values and the current tenor toward the pursuit of an individual life style, sometimes at the expense of a higher standard of living; several minority groups are explored in terms of their attempts to retain their heritage. Also, by examining choices made by several outstanding men and women, the program points out the value of striving to develop an independent self-determined way of life.

Deciding Right from Wrong: The Dilemma of Morality Today. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1974. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 42p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. The program explores the possibility that moral dilemmas may be conflicts between the realities of individual situations and the rules we've been taught; it investigates the private moral dilemmas of various historical and fictional characters such as Sergeant Alvin York, Emma Bovary, and Paul Gauguin.

Film: A Reflection of American Values. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1974. $97.50. Two-part program includes 160 color slides in 2 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 2 tape cassettes, 2 12" LP records, and a 42p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available for 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. This program explores the connection between the popular art form of film and the realities of history. The program begins in pre-World War I with The Great Train Robbery and concludes in the present; points out how films help us define problems, establish values, confront moral dilemmas, and explore human emotions; demonstrates how themes and values in films have changed as the cultural climate in America has changed.

Myths and Legends: Mirrors of Mankind. The Center for Humanities, Inc. 1974. $144.50. Three-part program includes 240 color slides in 3 Kodak Carousel cartridges, 3 tape cassettes, 3 12" LP records, and a 45p. teacher guide (not sold separately). Available on 30-day approval period from the publisher. Extended audience: 9-12. Encouraging students to examine the heritage that lies in humanity's most basic stories, the program focuses on several of the important myths and legends built around the fundamental stages of life: birth, childhood, maturity, old age, and death. The program shows how people have stored their personal and communal history in myths and legends and created stories that penetrate the mysteries of life and death, and how contemporary writers and artists create modern parallels to myths and legends of the past.

POP CULTURE. Arthur Asa Berger. Pflaum/Standard. 1973. Number of pages: 160 pages. $3.65 PB; ISBN 0-8278-0023-1. Teacher manual $2.00. Write Pflaum/Standard, 38 W. Fifth St., Dayton, Ohio 45402. Primary audience: 11-12. Extended audience: junior college. Reading level: 12. Some of the essays in this book deal with changes that have taken place in American culture while others call attention to interesting events and social movements on the American scene at the present time. Together, the essays take a witty, but critical look at our human-made environment and show how it affects our psychological development, our behavior, and the social order. It provides a look at American society from the bottom up in terms of artifacts (common everyday objects) and entertainments of the ordinary man and woman. In so doing, the book helps students understand how we are being shaped (or at least affected) by our pop culture environment and helps them gain a certain measure of freedom and a chance to make decisions for themselves.

The book can be used for high school mini-courses on pop culture and for college level communication and sociology courses. Discussion topics include comics, advertising, soft drinks, pressure cookers, pizza, entertainments, hair, and a variety of social phenomena. The instructor's program guide outlines 25 class meetings with suggested projects and activities.

Primary audience: 9-12. Advice on speech control, interpretation of a character, style, emotional range, movement, and the essentials of good acting.

ALTERNATIVES. Drama: From Print to Performance. Edward Shakespeare. Addison-Wesley Publishing Company. 1973. 105p. $1.32 PB; ISBN 0-201-07046-4. Teacher manual $.45. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 10-12. Extended audience: 9. Reading level: 10. This book by an experienced teacher of drama takes the view that the study of drama begins as a study of literature and ends as a study of the practical problems of acting and production. Students approach one play, Thornton Wilder's Pullman Car Hiawatha, from two viewpoints: first, as a literary work, and then as a work of theatre. Finally they grapple with some of the practical problems involved in producing a play.

DRAMA. Andrew Brown. Arco Publishing Company, Inc. 1962. 168p. $.95 PB; ISBN 0-668-00984-5. $25.00 net minimum order, small orders must be accompanied by cash. Primary audience: 9-12. The contents of this book include instructive sections on voice control, modulation, rhythm, phrasing, make-up, costumes, and props, plus discussions of problems likely to be encountered in producing a play.

THE DYNAMICS OF ACTING. Joan Snyder. National Textbook Company. 1972. 215p. $7.25 HB; ISBN 8442-5106-2. Five or more copies $5.80 net each. Write to National Textbook Company for catalog. Primary audience: 9-12. (Accelerated). This three-level text emphasizing the action of acting may be used over three or four years or as a one-year text for students majoring in drama. The developmental levels advance in difficulty and sophistication.

The first level explores believability, stage fright, and action or activity as a means of expressing character. The second level studies components of a play, analysis of character, and characterization in terms of projection. In the third level students study refinement of characterizations, preparation for tryouts, and participation in rehearsals and performances. The second half of this level deals with various acting styles, concepts of drama, and "professionalism."

IMPROVISATION HANDBOOK. Scott, Foresman and Company. 1974. Number of pages unspecified. Write publisher for price. Primary audience: 10-12. The handbook is a collection of ideas for dramatic improvisation, a theater technique for solving acting problems. The first section uses games and exercises to acquaint students with the basic techniques of improvising. The second section contains scenes for improvisation. This paperback is directed to both students and teachers.

BEHIND THE CAMERA. William Kuhns, Thomas F. Giardino. Pfaum/Standard. 1970. Number of pages: 178 pages. $3.70 PB; ISBN 0-8278-0075-4. Write Pfaum/Standard, 38 W. Fifth St., Dayton, Ohio 45402. Primary audience: 11-12. Extended audience: junior college. Reading level: 12. This book is directed to novice filmmakers. The authors lead beginners over the technical hurdles of production, lighting, sound, editing, camera setup, lenses, preparing the script, cost, and evaluation of systems. All are considered with clarity to aid instructors in their first experience at teaching film.

A log kept by a group of Pittsburgh high school students follows the technical instruction and describes their step-by-step encounters in producing a film, Sparrow. The book concludes with a critical evaluation of the film by author Kuhns and two University of Texas instructors in advanced filmmaking.

EXPLORING THE FILM. William Kuhns, Robert Stanley. Pfaum/Standard. 1968. 190p. $3.50 PB; ISBN 0-8278-0050-9. Teacher manual $3.75. Write Pfaum/Standard, 38 W. Fifth St., Dayton, Ohio 45402. Primary audience: 10. Extended audience: 9-12. Reading level: 10. The student text is illustrated with movie stills, original photos, and art. From the opening chapter on the need to see as well as look to the closing chapter with guidelines on student filmmaking, the emphasis throughout is on the process of seeing and knowing good films. With this in mind, the authors have created a book to be enjoyed visually as well as read.

The teacher manual is a resource book which includes background information on the nature of film study, the psychology of film, and the relationship of film to present and future curricula. In 12 chapters and 5 appendices, it suggests short and feature films to view in conjunction with the student text; provides a list of books, periodicals and organizations; and outlines practical projects to carry out.

FILM APPRECIATION: A CREATIVE LOOK AT FILM ARTS. Sister Jeanette Abi-Nader, HM. Educational Impact. 1973. 96p. $3.75 PB. Write Educational Impact, Box 548, Glassboro, New Jersey 08028. Primary audience: 9-12. Extended audience: 7-12. This mini-course text containing student-oriented information and practical assignments is adaptable for a 6-week or semester-long course. Chapter titles include: Watch Your Language!; The Art of the Thing; It All Started When . . . ; The V.I.P.'s; How to Pick a Winner; Future Shock. An appendix includes the names and addresses of distributors for films mentioned in the text; lists of books, periodicals, and other useful sources of information.

Film

Fifth St., Dayton, Ohio 45402. Primary audience: senior high. Extended audience: junior college. Reading level: 11. The series consists of 12 student/teacher booklets which study popular short films. Each contains two sections: (1) treatment of an aspect of film technique or appreciation; (2) background and questions about the title film. Together these two sections provide information to deepen the viewing/learning experience.

The series explains how each of the films could be used in courses which involve the topical and/or technical aspects of film art and in other curriculum areas. Four of the booklets focus on a specialized aspect of film, and could provide the basis for a course or unit on that particular aspect. They are: Overture—Overture Nyitany (music in film); The Language of Faces (documentary films); Sunday Lark (comedy in film); The Little Island (cartooning).

In addition to those listed above, the titles are: An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge, No Reason to Stay, Orange and Blue, Toys, Night and Fog, Flavio, and A Stain on His Conscience.

MOVIES IN AMERICA. William Kuhns. Pflaum/Standard. 1972. Number of pages: 260 pages. $4.95 PB; ISBN 0-8278-0045-2. Write Pflaum/Standard, 38 W. Fifth St., Dayton, Ohio 45402. Primary audience: 11-12. Extended audience: junior college. Reading level: 12. Beginning with the era of kinetoscope peepboxes and nickelodeons, the author explores over eight decades of movie making. One of Kuhns' storytelling devices, the "cameo," is used throughout the book to close in on such topics as early heroines, immortal lines, and the black man. Kuhns sees movies as a living embodiment of our recent past, a means of knowing what it was like to live in 1927 or 1942. An old movie is like a time machine, transplanting us into an audience of another era, letting us feel what people felt then.

Kuhns also discusses the creative giants who made the industry and looks critically at their product. Finally, he examines movie audiences and questions to what extent movies have shaped them and the cultural history of the twentieth century. The book is illustrated with photographs.

Teaching in the Dark. William Kuhns, John Carr. Pflaum/Standard. 1973. Number of pages: 110 pages. $4.50 PB; ISBN 0-8278-0046-0. Write Pflaum/Standard, 38 W. Fifth St., Dayton, Ohio 45402. This instructor's book for Movies in America also serves as a reference book and resource guide for film teachers. It begins by providing an overview of film study in the seventies and describes how to initiate film programs in schools. Commentary is presented for every chapter in the student text. Appendices list hundreds of films, periodicals, and organizations.

This book maps out a film study program that can be incorporated into almost any curriculum or school. It also includes detailed treatments and comparisons of how famous fictional works were translated into film.

THREE MAJOR SCREENPLAYS. Malvin Wald, Michael Werner. Lawrence Feigenbaum, editor. The Globe Book Company, Inc. 1972. 394p. $3.20 PB; ISBN 0-87065-261-3. Class price $2.40. Teacher manual gratis. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-12. Here in a single volume are the complete shooting scripts of The Ox-Bow Incident by Lamar Trotti, High Noon by Carl Foreman, and Lilies of the Field by James Poe. Appropriate for classes in literature, writing, film study, and filmmaking, it includes a practical, up-to-date discussion of the student as filmmaker which covers the making of a film from story to edited film. It also includes: biographical sketches of the authors, background information about each selection, representative critical reviews, a glossary of movie-making terms, and varied study aids.

YESTERDAY'S CLOWNS: THE RISE OF FILM COMEDY. Frank Manchel. Franklin Watts, Inc. 1973. 160p. $6.95 library edition; ISBN 531-02624-8 HB. Primary audience: 6-up. Extended audience: adult. Since 1889, the art of film comedy has grown to such an extent that it is one of the screen's greatest contributions to the 20th century. Many of films' most popular figures have been the great jesters: Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd, Mack Sennett, Harry Langdon, Buster Keaton, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, the Keystone Cops and Hal Roach. This book is not so much a detailed history of film comedy as it is a tender visit with some of the screen's greatest comedians. More than 50 black-and-white photographs of scenes from classic comic films and portraits of the great screen comics enhance the text. There is a bibliography and an index.

YOUNG ANIMATORS AND THEIR DISCOVERIES. Young Filmmakers Foundation. Praeger Publishers, Inc. 1973. 160p. $6.50 HB; ISBN 0275-2575-9. Audience and reading level unspecified. Young filmmakers, age 14 and up, discuss their successful experiments with animated film techniques. Each describes his or her purposes and approaches, choice of unusual objects to animate, and explains animation methods in practical terms. The book is designed to encourage, as well as aid, the beginning filmmaker. It includes a general introduction to animated film production, a glossary of technical terms, and 100 illustrations.

Mass Media

COM-ED. Exploring Television. William Kuhns. Loyola University Press. 1971. Number of pages unspecified. $2.40 net PB; ISBN 0-8294-0200-4. Teacher manual $1.00. Primary audience: 9. Extended audience: 10-11. Reading level: 9. The section on The Medium examines the radio-movie origins of TV and prompts research into the TV industry. The Message explores the different genres: commercials, news, situation comedies, variety and dramatic shows. It questions plot, character, and values. The Message asks what TV is doing to American society. There is a TV glossary and an annotated bibliography.

The teacher guide gives directions on how to use the worktext. Resource materials include The Evolution of Broadcasting, NAB TV Code, and The Video-Cassette Revolution. The Com-Ed Commercial Reel contains four commercials selected to demonstrate specifically different selling techniques.

Reviewed in English Journal, November 1971.

COM-ED. Mass Media. Ann Heintz. Loyola University Press. 1972. 240p. $2.40 net PB; ISBN 0-8294-0215-2. Teacher manual $1.00. Primary audience: 10. Extended audience: 9, 11. Reading level: 9. This worktext gets students involved in duplicating actual problems and processes of the print and electronic media through simulations, lab experiences, research, and input projects.

Techniques like a "media Rorschach test," practicing an editor's "gatekeeping" role, the TV rating game, feedback to media managers, and focus and probe exercises in every section are intended to make students analyze, test, and evaluate media methods and their impact.

Interaction: The Media and the People discusses measuring popular taste, audience analysis, who makes the editorial or program decisions (how and why), and media marketing.

The News Media covers the people's need to know, news-gathering processes, who and what makes news and how some news is "made," interpretative and investigative reporting, critique of the news, and "gatekeeping"—how the editor decides.

Mass Media in a Democratic Society examines freedom of speech and press, classified information and the public's right to know, censorship, formal or informal, and who decides what we see, the problem of licensing, and public access—how students can use the mass media.

The book features inductive learning experiences, comparative media exercises, and value definition challenges. It can be used for a complete semester course or separate units and mini-courses within existing English, communications, or journalism curricula.

The teacher guide has directions on how to use the worktext and resource materials and references. The News Input Tape has actual live radio news reports with commentary by the reporter.

Mass Media

COM-ED. Persuasion. Ann Heintz. Loyola University Press. 1970. 224p. $2.25 net PB; ISBN 0-8294-0193-8. Teacher manual $1.00. Primary audience: 9. Extended audience: 10-11. Reading level: 9. The units begin with experiences of persuasive techniques in advertising, print, film, radio, and TV. Inquire-discover questions focus the experience and lead to understanding how a specific technique works. Units end with do-it-yourself challenges to create a persuasive message in print, sound, or visual media.

There is debate, independent study, and pre- and post-testing material. The Teacher Guide gives directions on how to use the worktext, input suggestions for each unit, a guide to McLuhan, selected resources, and teaching materials. There is an Audio Input Tape for teacher training sessions and for classroom use. Side 1: The Dynamics of Group Discussion—persuasive radio advertising; Side 2: Barrage of Sound—radio commercials and the art of listening.

Electric Media. Les Brown, Sema Marks. 168p. $3.30 PB. Contributions by Dick Cavett, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, Jr., and Marshall McLuhan.

How electric media, especially television and the computer, affect and change people's lives and views is the subject of this illustrated book. Open-ended, with extensive opportunities for student discussion, and punctuated by quotations from prominent figures in the electric media, this book covers such topics as the phenomenon of watching television, comparison of news and entertainment functions, homage to radio, amateur video taping, how computers "learn," and artificial intelligence. Edwin Aldrin describes the crucial role of electric media during his Apollo 11 flight and moonwalk. Dick Cavett offers a frank discussion of ratings and talk shows. Marshall McLuhan engages in a provocative conversation on many aspects of life in the acoustic world.

Mass Media

Movies: Conversations with Peter Bogdanovich. 144p. $3.30 PB.

The director of Targets, The Last Picture Show, Directed by John Ford, What's Up, Doc? and Paper Moon discusses major influences on his career, film technique, his preference for American films, the work of directors such as Griffith, Welles, and Ford, film as illusion, film as a humanizing art, and his general attitudes about movies. Numerous stills and location shots from Bogdanovich's films illustrate the conversations, which are informal, anecdotal, and contain much behind-the-camera information about movie making. Paper Moon is traced from script conferences to final cutting. Scenes from The Last Picture Show are closely examined and illustrated with pages from the shooting script.

Nonverbal Communication. Louis Forsdale. 168p. $3.30 PB. Contributions by Albert Scheflen and Edward Villella.

Touch, smell, body language, architecture, ballet, the genetic code, the nervous system, time, ESP, and other means of nonverbal communication are explored in this illustrated book. Describing communication as a lifetime effort, the book pays particular attention to aspects of nonverbal communication such as the dialects of body language, how buildings "talk," handwriting, silence, and territoriality and conversational distances. Psychiatrist Albert Scheflen discusses his research into human nonverbal communication in a conversation with the author. Edward Villella of the New York City Ballet compares ballet to baseball and boxing, and talks about the body's power to communicate.

Print Media. Robert Trager. 192p. $3.30 PB. Contributions by Shana Alexander and J. Anthony Lukas.

Focusing on functions, types, sources, and production of print media, with emphasis on newspapers and magazines, this book combines a survey of print media with concise activities in researching, developing, writing, and laying out news and feature stories. Students are asked throughout the book to make decisions as editors of an imaginary newspaper. Topics include the press as watchdog, a brief history of comic books, the minority press and the underground press, and objective journalism compared to new journalism. The Pulitzer Prize-winning article "The Two Worlds of Linda Fitzpatrick" by J. Anthony Lukas is included in a fold-out section. Columnist and former editor Shana Alexander and reporter J. Anthony Lukas discuss their careers and the changing role of the press.

A Time to Speak. Howard Stein. 168p. $3.60 PB. Contributions by Dustin Hoffman and Kurt Vonnegut, Jr.

Written in an informal, first-person style, this book emphasizes the need for self-knowledge as the key to meaningful communication through speech. Students make informal and formal speeches, analyze persuasion and the rhetoric of a political speech, participate in discussions and debate, interpret prose and poetry, do pantomimes and improvisations, and come to understand the value and limits of words. Kurt Vonnegut, Jr., discusses dialogue in plays and novels, the value of words in speech and print, and the communication styles of different generations. Dustin Hoffman discusses his preparation for various roles and talks about the differences between acting in films and on stage.

Visual Persuasion. Stuart Bay, William Thorn. 176p. $3.30 PB. Contributions by Corita Kent and Gordon Parks.

Consisting primarily of illustrations, this book shows basic elements of communication and persuasion in photographs, illustrations, posters, advertising, record jackets, billboards, and other visual media. Students see how different designs and mediums may be used to treat the same subject in dramatically different ways. Corita Kent, the internationally known artist, and Gordon Parks, the award-winning photographer and movie director, relate visual persuasion to their personal forms of artistic expression.

MASS MEDIA IN A FREE SOCIETY.
Warren K. Agee, editor. The University Press of Kansas. 1969; 3rd ed. 1971.
96p. $1.95 PB; ISBN 0-7006-0056-6.
Primary audience: 12. Extended audience:
10-12. Reading level: 10-12. Six well-known spokesmen from the mass media discuss challenges and problems to be met today and in the future by newspapers, TV, motion pictures, and magazines. The thought-provoking material is provided by Ben H. Bagdikian, Bill Moyers, Carl T. Rowan, Theodore F.
Koop, Stan Freberg, and Bosley Crowther.

THE MEDIA WORKS. Joan Valdes,
Jeanne Crow. Pflaum/Standard. 1973.
Number of pages: 352 pages. $4.95 PB;
ISBN 0-8278-0219-6. Teacher manual
$1.35. Write Pflaum/Standard, 38 W.
St., Dayton, Ohio 45402. Primary audience: 11-12. Extended audience:

junior college. Reading level: 12. This text offers a graphic, scholarly pursuit of the study of mass media. Teacher/authors Valdes and Crow have organized the student text into three parts. Section I, The Workings, gives background on the seven media discussed: the newspaper, the magazines, the comics, radio, television, movies, and advertising. Section II, The Mass Message, explains the media explosion, the direct effects the explosion has had on us, how the media popularizes ideas and attitudes—even creates and reinforces certain attitudes—and how it exploits our needs. Section III, The Personal Message, looks at media which communicate at a deeper level: first the alternative media, or underground; then, popular songs, still photography, and film. Finally, the text takes an historical look at the nonverbal communication movement and a look into possible media developments of the future.

A student logbook is provided as a supplement to the activities interspersed throughout the text. The activities call students to react (think, form an opinion, listen, tune in, talk, collect examples), dig (hunt out, write down, be thorough, get to know the details of a subject), create (imagine, produce an original, play a role) and read (paperback titles are suggested).

The teacher resource guide provides a bibliography of books and magazines, lists still photography resources and film titles, includes data on rental information, on movie and video equipment, and on a variety of pertinent topics.

The Media Works can be used (1) as a full year's course on media study and
(2) as an acquisition for schools' instructional materials centers. The structure of the text makes it possible to use sections—with the logbook—as student material for electives in media study and for mini-courses on selected media.

This book includes a history of the growth and expansion of the underground press; a survey of writing from the student revolution, black nationalism, rock culture, hippie culture, drug culture, and the New Left; and a discussion of the styles of new journalists such as Tom Wolfe, Norman Mailer, Truman Capote, and Jimmy Breslin.

NEWSPAPER WORKSHOP: UNDERSTANDING YOUR NEWSPAPER.

Howard F. Decker. The Globe Book Company, Inc. 1972. 152p. $2.40 PB; ISBN 0-87065-177-3. Class price $1.80. Teacher manual gratis. Available direct from the publisher. Primary audience: 7-9. Extended audience: 7-12. In this text-workbook for teaching the newspaper the student examines the features of his own local paper instead of reading a collection of outdated or "let's pretend" news stories. Every lesson includes work in reading, vocabulary development, proofreading, critical analysis, and, of course, writing. It has a workbook format and the pages are perforated and punched for the student's notebook.

THE SCHOOL NEWSPAPER: HOW IT WORKS; HOW TO WRITE FOR IT.

Nanci A. Lyman. Franklin Watts, Inc. 1973. 72p. $3.95 HB library edition; ISBN 531-00810-X. Primary audience: 7-up. Once viewed as little more than gossip sheets, school newspapers today conduct themselves as any responsible member of the American press—they report news, interpret events, and express opinions on items that matter to the readership. This detailed look at school newspapers tells the interested young journalist how the school newspaper works and how to write for it effectively. Some of the topics covered include positions on the paper, newspaper policy, writing essentials, copyediting, and copyreading. A glossary of newspaper terms is also included.

Nanci A. Lyman has been the editor of school newspaper, the editor of a weekly Navy newspaper while in the Waves, and the editor of design and travel magazines. Now a freelance writer and editor, the author lives in Fort Lee, New Jersey.

This book is designed as an introduction for students interested in gaining insight into television as a medium of communication as well as for those who may wish to pursue careers in this field. It may be used in mini-, single-semester, or full-year courses.

The book explains television as a communication medium, discusses television from a technical and production point of view, and covers careers in television. It discusses commercial equipment and substitute equipment that can be fashioned by students. The book also provides layouts and sample scripts, specifically: a radio script, a television play by Rod Serling, and an original television script, all of which can be utilized in the average school.

The book uses charts, illustrations, and photographs to convey ideas. It includes a bibliography, a glossary, and a list of commercial suppliers and broadcast organizations.

Contents of the book are: Viewing the Message (Decoding); Assessing the Medium; Visualizing the Message; Searching Your Message; Transmitting Your Message; Verbalizing Your Message; Taping the Message; Considering Careers in Television; Testing 1-2-3; Glossary.

TV ACTION BOOK.

Jeffrey Schrank. McDougal, Littell & Company. 1974. Number of pages: 128p. $1.77 PB net school price. Extended audience: grade 10-up. The TV Action Book, which is designed for senior high school students, is intended to answer the question, "What can I do about television?" Articles of fact and opinion, together with data-gathering materials, offer an in-depth study tied to actual community work.

Mass Media

Chapters cover station-licensing, programming, the fairness doctrine, ownership of broadcasting, and guidelines for public action groups. Twenty-one detachable study sheets provide a way for the student to analyze his or her own TV viewing. This text may be coordinated with Coping with Television (see entry in this section) or used singly as a study guide.

ADVENTURES IN THE LOOKING-GLASS. Sharon A. Ratliffe, Deldee M. Herman. National Textbook Company. 1972. 244p. $6.00 HB; ISBN 8442-5140-2. Five or more copies $4.80 net each. Write National Textbook Company for catalog. Primary audience: 7-10. Reading level: 7. A beginning text in communication for young adolescents, the book focuses on self-discovery to help students cope with their identity crisis.

The title of the book is drawn from Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking-Glass. Excerpts from the stories are used to introduce and explore the central idea in each chapter. The analogy continues as each chapter presents: discoveries, three vital concepts that develop from each topic; adventures, activities through which students can explore themselves; reflections, questions which help students understand the meaning of what they have been doing in each chapter.

Two-thirds of each chapter is devoted to activities which allow for participation by all students. Since there are more activities than could be used in a single semester, teachers can elect to use those most appropriate to their needs. Each activity also presents learning objectives which may be easily converted to behavioral objects. The "reflections" (questions) suggest the basis for post-instructional measurement.

Contents of the book are: On Becoming Your-self; Your-self and Information; Your-self and Perception; Your-self and Symbols; Your-self and

Your Beliefs; Your-self and Decision Making; Your-self and Messages; Your-self and Emotional Climates.

COMMUNICATION: INTERACTING THROUGH SPEECH. R. R. Allen, Sharol Anderson Parish, C. David Mortensen. Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company. 1974. 488p. $5.40 HB school prices; ISBN 0-675-06442-2. Teacher manual $1.50 school price. Write Charles E. Merrill Publishing Company. Primary audience: 10-12. Reading level: 10. This book stresses speech as a personal means of communication. Modern public communication is also explored extensively, with strong emphasis on mass media communication. The book is divided into four parts: Communication in Perspective, Interpersonal Communication, Public Communication: Individual

Speech and Debate

to Group, and Public Communication: Group to Individual.

The text includes cartoons and photographs, special discussion and positive action sections, and biographical sketches of nine Americans who are noted for their effective and innovative roles in contemporary public communications. The teacher's manual includes behavioral objectives, enrichment activities, a bibliography, and chapter tests.

COMMUNICATION IN HUMAN RELATIONSHIPS. Charles T. Brown, Charles Van Riper. National Textbook Company. 1973. 279p. $4.75 PB; ISBN 8442-5138-0. Five or more copies $3.80 net each. Write National Textbook Company for catalog. Primary audience: 11-12. Reading level: 11. (Accelerated). The text postulates that language is the most vital tool with which individuals can shape fulfilling lives. The authors believe there are certain basic principles people have learned to use to formulate personal values, and have created the text to help students understand and implement those principles. Feeling that the need to develop is a most positive force in life, the book begins with a psychological history of the way people have evolved into their present state of alienation, picturing the emotional stress a person today is born to and must learn to cope with. The second chapter helps students and instructor sense the atmosphere and action of an interpersonal speech class.

The third chapter explains how language can be used as a tool to cope with alienation and describes principles of interaction bearing on the establishment of relationships necessary to a meaningful life. The remainder of the text is essentially anecdotal, giving stories of how individuals, in learning how to express feelings, awareness, and values, have found a clearer sense of direction.

Titles of the chapters are: Historical Perspectives in Communication; New Perspectives for the Speech Classroom; The Role of Speech in Human Relationships; Speech and the Self; Speech and Others; Speech and the Physical Universe; The Balance.

PERSON-TO-PERSON: AN INTRODUCTION TO SPEECH COMMUNICATION. Kathleen M. Galvin, Cassandra L. Book. National Textbook Company. 1973. 272p. $6.25 PB; ISBN 8442-5202-6. Five or more copies $5.00 net each. Write National Textbook Company for catalog. Primary audience: 9-12. Reading level: 9. Person-to-Person employs the inductive approach in helping students understand themselves as communicators, then in relation to others in the communication situation. The method causes students to probe their behaviors and those of others to arrive at more effective communication concepts.

Speech and Debate

A variety of methods are used to illustrate and develop the above concepts, for example: (1) Comic strips such as Animal Crackers and Peanuts are used to dramatize the communication situation. (2) Excerpts from actual student communication diaries provide springboards for discussion. Case histories from newspapers, student journals and teacher reports are presented as means of reinforcing and stimulating discussion and activity.

The contents include: Communication Is . . . ; The Encoding/Decoding Process; Self as Communicator; One to One: Interpersonal Communication; Group Communication; One to Group Communication; Persuasive Communication; Other Ways of Getting It Together.

PUBLIC SPEAKING FOR SELF-IMPROVEMENT AND SUCCESS. Peter Westland. Arco Publishing Company, Inc. 1946. 208p. $1.45 PB; ISBN 0-668-01110-6. $25.00 net minimum order, small orders must be accompanied by cash. Primary audience: 9-12. (Remedial). SPEAKING BY DOING. William E. Buys. National Textbook Company. 1967; 1973. 280p. $4.00 PB; ISBN 8442-5025-2. Five or more copies $3.20 net each. Write National Textbook Company for catalog. Primary audience: 7-12. Reading level: 7. Special audience: inner city. (Remedial). This text teaches public speaking and audience listening while it emphasizes the importance of speaking as it relates to the development of young speakers' self-concepts. The work-text format of Speaking by Doing involves students at the activity level and presents basic information necessary to learning, as well as acting as a structured guide for independent study of the speech communication process.

Essentially a set of guided and sequentially graded experiences, Section I aims to help produce a group relationship and reduce anxiety in the classroom by having students immediately begin working together in groups on problems. The next four sections deal with the student and his or her individual attitudes and skills in speech communication, progressing from the easiest forms of public communication to the most difficult. The last section covers what the author believes to be the most difficult of all forms of public communication, that which takes place in group problem-solving.

The contents are: Let's Get Better Acquainted; Let's Find Out Why We Should Study Speech; Let's Understand the Nature of Speech Fears and Self-Confidence; The Nature and Purposes of Human Communication; The Speech to Inform; The Demonstration Speech; The Bodily Action Speech; The Audio and Visual Aids Speech; The Voice Only Speech; The Style of a Speech; Oral Interpretation; Telling a Good Story Well; Speaking to Entertain; Social Conversation; Persuasion and Discussion; The Speech to Persuade; Group Problem-Solving.

SPEECH-COMMUNICATION: A MODERN APPROACH. Ray Nadeau. Addison-Wesley Publishing Company. 1973. Number of pages: 288 pages. $3.00

Speech and Debate

PB; $4.20 HB. ISBN 0-201-05002-1 PB; 0-201-05001-3 HB. Teacher manual $.99. Address all inquiries to David James, The Language Arts Group, Addison-Wesley Publishing Company, Sand Hill Road, Menlo Park, California 94025. Primary audience: 10-12. Extended audience: 8-9. Reading level: 10. Speech-Communication treats formal and informal speaking skills as part of a larger subject, the communication process. It examines such traditional topics as public address, but also explores interpersonal and small group communication, the influence of mass media on communication, and communication theory. Students consider speech as an event occurring within a specific situation and are asked to respond to situations by adapting their speech to them. Many activities are provided for debating public issues as well as participating in the democratic process of large-group decision making. This textbook is available both in paperback and hardbound versions.
