ABSTRACT

This document contains instructions for administering the American Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation Newspaper Test, scoring the test, and interpreting the scores. It also includes a description of the nature of the test, each form of the ANPA Foundation Newspaper Test having 30 four-choice questions on the meaning and implications of stories, articles, and other features of a four-page simulated newspaper, tabloid size. There are four forms: two for junior high school (J-1 and J-2) and two for senior high school (S-1 and S-2). The two forms at each level are parallel in content and equal in difficulty; forms J-1 and S-1 are based on one simulated newspaper, forms J-2 and S-2 on another. Included are suggestions for using the test in a pretest-posttest type of evaluation and as a guide for developing objectives in a journalism course. A rationale for administering the test is provided. Copies of the 1972 edition of the test forms are included. (RB)

THE ANPA FOUNDATION NEWSPAPER TEST*

Nature of the Test

Each form of the ANPA Foundation Newspaper Test has 30 four-choice questions on the meaning and implications of stories, articles, and other features of a four-page simulated newspaper, tabloid size. There are four forms: two for junior high school (J-1 and J-2) and two for senior high school (S-1 and S-2). The two forms at each level are parallel in content and equal in difficulty. Forms J-1 and S-1 are based on one simulated newspaper; Forms J-2 and S-2 on another. These newspapers have nearly all types of material found in daily newspapers and are not "written down." Although the events treated are all imaginary, they sound like something that happened yesterday. As students take the test, they find and read the parts of the newspaper to which the questions refer; they do not study the newspaper in advance. They write the number of the best answer in a blank at the end of each question. There are no separate or machine-scorable answer sheets. There is no prescribed time limit, but most students finish in less than 35 minutes.

Administering the test

Make sure that each class has the simulated newspaper that goes with the form of the test it is to take. The newspaper with the top headline "Governor Calls Session on Taxes" goes with J-1 and S-1; that with the top headline "Unsafe Driver Curbs Approved" goes with J-2 and S-2.

After the newspapers and test books have been distributed, ask students to fill in the blanks on the cover page with any identifying information the situation requires. Read the directions aloud while students read them silently. Tell them not to try to read the whole newspaper before answering the questions, since the questions in any one form of the test deal only with certain articles that are clearly indicated. Be sure they understand that they are to write the number of the answer they choose in the blank at the end of the question. If they are not sure which answer is best, encourage them to choose the most likely answer, since there will be no subtraction for wrong answers. Ask them not to mark or tear the newspapers because they will be used again by other classes. When they are returned, they should be folded properly. Tell the students how much time they have, and ask whether they have any questions. Answer any question about what they are to do but not about the content of the test. When there are no more questions, tell them to start work. When time is up, or when all but one or two have finished, tell them to stop, and collect the test books and newspapers.

Scoring the Test

The test books can be hand-scored easily and quickly by using the printed key that is included in each package of tests. Directions for scoring are printed on each key. Note that the intended answers are aligned with the blanks in which students write their answers. If the wrong scoring strip is placed on a page, the answers will not line up. The score is the number of right answers with no "correction for guessing."

Interpreting Scores

Tables 1 and 2 below show the percent of newspaper students and the percent of regular students who stood below each score on each form of the Newspaper Test in the norming administration of May 1971. The difference between these two groups was that the newspaper students had been involved during the year in some sort of newspaper program while the regular students had not. The groups were comparable in every other respect: they came from the same grades in the same schools and many were taught by the same teachers.

*Too few senior high school newspaper classes were found in the areas sampled (Fort Worth, Peoria, and Charlotte, N.C.) to provide reliable norms. The difference in difficulty between Forms S-1 and S-2 indicated by these percents is spurious, since no such difference was found in the more representative norms for regular senior high school students (see the table below). For the present, teachers should use the latter to interpret all scores of senior high school students in both regular and newspaper classes.

Note that the percent corresponding to any given raw score is always a larger number for regular students than for newspaper students, and avoid the mistake of thinking that this shows that regular students did better than newspaper students. Quite the contrary. For example, if a student made a score of 15 right (out of 30 questions) on Form J-1, the tables show that he did better than 53 percent of regular students, but only 38 percent of newspaper students--so evidently the newspaper students made higher scores.

Since this point is hard for parents and the public to grasp, an analogy may help. Let us suppose that a six-foot man is taller than 90 percent of adult males but only 10 percent of professional basketball players. Since 90 is a larger number than 10, does this mean that adult males are generally taller than professional basketball players? We all know that the opposite is the case. Hence any given height will surpass a larger proportion of adult males than of professional basketball players. In the same way, any given score will surpass a larger number of regular students than of newspaper students. In the middle range of scores, the difference is 10 to 15 "percentile points" in favor of newspaper students.

Many newspaper teachers find it useful to locate only the average or middle score in each newspaper class in relation to these percentiles. The way to do this is to find the average or middle raw score (number right) in the usual way and then look up the percentile corresponding to this score in the tables. One need not and should not find a percentile for each student and then average the percentiles.

Using One Form as a Pretest

Many teachers shy away from giving the Newspaper Test at the beginning of a program, feeling that they are not ready for the pretest-posttest type of evaluation and possibly that the test does not quite fit the objectives they wish to emphasize. Still, it makes very good sense to use one form as a pretest for one's own information, since it brings to light amazing deficiencies in understanding what typical newspaper articles said. Whatever objectives one may have in mind, they can hardly be attained if most students continue to read newspapers as badly as the test shows they do now. Hence the ability to read newspapers with greater understanding may be regarded as the one objective that all newspaper programs have in common, and as an indispensable basis for the attainment of all other objectives.

To bring to light the types of misunderstanding that are most prevalent in a class, one first has to find out which questions caused the most trouble. An easy way to do this, after the test books have been marked and returned is to call out the numbers of the questions one by one and ask those who answered correctly to raise their hands. The teacher counts the hands and records the number who got each question right in his copy of the test. Smaller numbers indicate the questions that most students missed. If he prefers, he may tally correct answers as he scores the test.

Then he may direct his first attention to questions that more than half of the students missed, or in superior classes to those that more than a quarter missed. The kinds of skill, knowledge, and judgment required by each question are indicated in Table 3 at the top of page 4; the numbers refer to the objectives listed on pages 5-7; and asterisks after the numbers indicate questions that were missed by most students in the tryout. Study of the objectives related to the questions that most students missed will indicate some of the principal weaknesses of the class.

Further insight into their reasons for missing these questions is gained by finding out how many chose each answer. Here one really has to ask for a show of hands, since it is too laborious to put down a tally for each answer to each question that proved difficult. But since one is now dealing with a limited set of questions, it does not take long to ask how many chose each answer.

* Asterisks indicate questions that were most often missed in the tryout.

The most popular wrong answers usually suggest why the students went wrong, and questioning them about their reasons for choosing an answer will either confirm these hypotheses or suggest others. In any case, a close study of students' answers to these questions is an eye-opening experience that is bound to influence the program. One will never again discuss the subject of an article as though one could take it for granted that the students understood what the article said. It will become a first order of business to find out what they think it said.

Why Give the Test?

A recent survey of a completely representative national sample of over 5,000 adults in hour-long interviews revealed that newspapers were by far the largest item in the previous day's reading apart from their work: 73 percent reported reading newspapers for an average of 35 minutes; 39 percent magazines for an average of 33 minutes; and 33 percent books for an average of 47 minutes. Yet the Newspaper Test showed that the average regular student in junior high school could answer less than 50 percent, and in senior high school less than 60 percent, of fair, straightforward questions on what typical newspaper articles said. Since newspaper reading is so common and so important in the conduct of our affairs, surely schools have an obligation to find out how well their students read newspapers and to do what they can to remedy their deficiencies. The test also appeals to students, especially in minority groups, as the most obviously fair, important, and relevant of reading tests.

In supporting the development of this test, the ANPA Foundation obviously had no interest in providing a tool for grading students or for comparing one class with another. Its only motive was to enable teachers to learn the facts about how well their students read newspapers, to discover and remedy their shortcomings, and to measure their progress. It is hoped that teachers, heads of departments, and principals will bring to the attention of the Foundation any program that brings about greater improvement than one expects. The results thus far attained by the "Newspaper in the Classroom" programs have been gratifying, and it is hoped that publicizing common features of the more successful programs will bring about still better results in the future. To report such programs to the Foundation, write to Mrs. Virginia Riggs, Staff Consultant, Educational Services, ANPA Foundation, P. O. Box 17407, Dulles International Airport, Washington, D.C. 20041; or telephone 703/620-9500.

Objectives of Newspaper Programs Revealed by the ANPA Foundation Newspaper Test

The following objectives were not announced in advance or "imposed" by anyone; they were discovered. Eight tryout forms of 50 questions each were administered simultaneously in matched newspaper and regular classes in 61 schools. Only those questions were retained on which newspaper students did better than regular students of equal reading ability. The types of ability revealed by these questions are described below.

I. Competence in Reading Newspapers

A. SKILL

1. Ability to spot the main point or emphasis quickly and to distinguish it from background, details, misinterpretations, and points not covered. The skilled newspaper reader knows that the main point is likely to come first.
2. Ability to check off information quickly and to reject points not made, views not expressed, unwarranted interpretations, etc., often in the form of "All of the following points were covered EXCEPT...."
3. Ability to distinguish exact, careful interpretations from slapdash, unwarranted, unqualified interpretations, reading in more than is justified by the context, imputing sinister motives, or giving fanciful meanings to ordinary events.
4. Ability to distinguish what was reported as a fact from expressions of opinion, the statement of a qualified observer, or quoted statements that may or may not be true.
5. Ability to locate desired information quickly: e.g., How old is this newspaper? How is the Gaffney Home supported? How far is Miami from the search area? The last involves not only ability to read a map but also the expectation that the map will be there, even though this map was deliberately located in the continuation of the story on page 4.
6. Ability to recognize which stories or features best illustrate a given point, such as something teenagers did that was good, the point of an editorial cartoon, or material of only local interest.
7. Ability to interpret editorial cartoons: e.g., The main point is.... The spectator represents.... The shadow is an effective symbol because.... The cartoon represents the concerns of.... A headline related to this cartoon is....
8. Ability to interpret details in photographs: e.g., The person in the middle is the.... The baseball picture shows that....

B. KNOWLEDGE

9. Knowledge of either indicated or probable sources of information: e.g., wire service, special correspondent. Where did the reporter get this information? The person most likely to write this article was.... The information was probably given out by....
10. General knowledge likely to be acquired by newspaper readers and needed to interpret reports: e.g., the U.S. equivalent of a Foreign Minister, why pickets sed in strikes, an event that could not have happened recently.

11. Knowledge of the meaning of terms often used in various types of reports: e.g., fringe benefits, production workers, sweetener, amnesty.
12. Knowledge of newspaper format: e.g., usual location of editorials, political columns, classified ads, sports, etc. Index on page 1 expected and used.
13. Knowledge of technical newspaper terms: e.g., dateline, by-line, banner, masthead, caption, correspondent, press release, etc.
14. Wire services: identification (AP), (UPI), functions, advantages, kinds of material they furnish: e.g., Which of the following stories is likely to appear in almost the same words in other newspapers of this date?

C. JUDGMENT

(Judgment is here distinguished from Skill chiefly in that it implies an ability to evaluate in addition to an ability to understand. It is often developed by maturity and experience rather than by practice alone.)

15. Ability to assign causes, reasons, motives: e.g., East End residents oppose the project because.... blames failure of the plan on.... close vote was due to.... objects to the proposal chiefly because....
16. Ability to interpret attitudes toward a situation or course of action: e.g., Do X and Y agree or disagree in their attitude toward this proposal? What attitude does a given action imply? What event would favor or oppose a given course of action?
17. Ability to judge why a statement was made: e.g., He tries to give the impression that.... Arabella gives this advice because.... X is cited as an illustration of.... The purpose of this discussion is....
18. Ability to see implications or to extrapolate from given information: e.g., The governor's action suggests that he.... The report implies that the present practice is....
19. Ability to judge the relative importance of various points: e.g., The chief purpose is to.... The immediate purpose of the treaty is.... His chief criticism is directed against....
20. Ability to judge what is happening in terms of what generally happens in similar situations: e.g., Why is the airport expansion to be paid for by taxpayers? The strike settlement will probably result in....
21. Ability to anticipate what is likely to happen next in a given situation: e.g., The next development in the strike is likely to be.... The most probable result of X will be.... The governor is likely to....
22. Ability to judge why various kinds of material or specific items are published: e.g., editorials, opinion polls, columns, reviews, letters to the editor, stock market reports, etc.
23. Ability to recognize differences in the kind of language or style that is appropriate for various kinds of material: e.g., Which sentence from the review would be most acceptable in a news story? Which sentence is most typical of sports writing? Which word from the baseball story would be most likely to be used in the U.N. story?

24. Ability to interpret and assess advertisements: e.g., main emphasis, general credibility, inferences that can and cannot be made.
25. Ability to interpret and criticize opinion polls: e.g., Which conclusion is supported by the poll? Is the sample representative? Is it large enough? Does the wording of the question bias the results?
26. Ability to criticize various types of material: e.g., letter to Arabella for omission of a vital fact, letter to editor for evident prejudice, opinion poll for wording of question, review of art exhibit for "flamboyant" style, etc.
27. Ability to recognize and appraise differences between newspapers and other media: e.g., more emphasis on local and state news, greater detail than radio and TV news, NOT necessarily more accurate or up-to-the-minute, etc.

II. Understanding the Role of Newspapers in a Free Society

This second main category of objectives of most newspaper programs, while terribly important, is approached in so many different ways that relatively few questions showed an advantage of newspaper over regular students when the questions were tried out in all parts of the country. Those that did so were related mainly to the freedom and responsibility of newspapers.

28. Understanding that freedom of the press is protected by the First Amendment and includes freedom to ferret out and publish news without official permission or censorship, and that minorities have the right to publish unpopular views.

29. Understanding that the press is responsible primarily for the accuracy and completeness of its coverage of important and interesting events, both in reporting the facts and in interpreting their meaning. It is generally much less subject to political pressure than the press in totalitarian countries. Questions related to this understanding dealt with the general credibility of newspapers and of specific reports. Incorrect responses often revealed such attitudes as "You can't trust newspapers" or "It's true because the newspaper said so."

30. Understanding that the press is responsible for libel and hence is unwilling to publish letters to the editor that attack character, but is quite willing to print opposing views.

For the sake of completeness, it may be mentioned that questions dealing with the following types of understanding were written but "washed out" in the tryout, either because the items were defective or because the material in the simulated newspapers did not lend itself to very discriminating items of these kinds. The objectives remain important, however, and will probably be represented in subsequent editions of these tests.

31. Responsibility of the press for arousing interest and concern for public issues and problems and for attempting to formulate and guide public opinion.

32. Responsibility of the press for keeping officials responsive to the public interest by calling attention to their decisions and actions and by exposing graft, corruption, inertia, inefficiency, waste, etc.

HAND SCORING KEY

FORM J-1

The pages of this scoring key are numbered to correspond to the pages of the test book. For convenience, the keys for facing pages in the test book have been arranged back-to-back.

SUGGESTED PROCEDURES FOR SCORING

1. Separate this sheet into strip keys by cutting along the dotted lines.
2. Lay the key for page 2 between the columns of the answers on page 2 of the test book, aligning the student's answers with the key.
3. Note, either mentally or with a colored pencil, each incorrect or omitted answer.
4. Write the number of errors at the bottom of the page.
5. Turn the strip key over and proceed in the same manner for page 3.
6. Score page 4 in the same manner using the key on the back of this strip.
7. When the three pages of the test have been scored, add the number of errors you have recorded at the bottom of each page and subtract that sum from the number of items in the test (30). The remainder is the student's score, and should be recorded in the space provided at the end of the test.

Governor Calls Session On Taxes

By RONALD McVAY
Chief Legislative Correspondent

STATE CAPITAL—Gov. Preston Forbes today called a special session of the Legislature for noon Monday to consider new state taxes. He said the additional levies were necessary to meet the state's mounting deficit, for which he placed the blame in large part on the controversial medical insurance program.

The two houses of the Legislature will convene in the House chamber to hear the governor's message, which is expected to be posed on a request for a state income tax.

Such a request would face difficult going, however, as leaders of both houses are on record against an income tax. They are expected to propose instead a doubling of the 2 per cent sales tax and penny increases in a series of existing state excise taxes.

The Senate majority leader, Blair Paxton, said the governor's message would receive careful study but that he doubted an income tax was necessary. The Assembly speaker, Walter Wilson, was more blunt.

"An income tax doesn't have a chance in the Assembly," he said. "The first thing we'll do is a little trimming on the budget, including the medical program."

The deficit, already $150 million, is laid largely to the medical insurance program. In effect since Jan. 1, the program has been far more costly than had been predicted and is expected to exceed its projected cost for the year by $200 million.

The deficit is attributed in part also to the state's ambitious anti-pollution campaign, launched before a very substantial

The City Council ended more than a decade of controversy last night when, by a margin of one vote, it named Middletown's first city manager, Mayor Henry Hopkins, who previously had maintained a stance of neutrality, cast the decisive vote. Voting with him were Councilmen Richard M. Burnes, George Maloney, Charles R. Stone and Frank Prince. Voting "no" were Councilmen Ralph W. Anderson, David Pardy,

The State Legislature approved the necessary changes in the city charter two years ago, with the stipulation that they could not take effect until a manager actually was chosen.

Reached by telephone late last night after his appointment was approved, Curtis said he planned no immediate

Wilson Wire Plant Struck

Production workers at the Wilson Wire and Cable Co. went on strike at midnight yesterday after company and union negotiators failed to agree on terms for a new contract. More than 400 employees, members of Local 6, United Cable Workers, are affected by the walkout. Picket lines went up at 12:01 a.m. around the plant at 900 Central Ave. Some of the workers on the midnight-to-8 a.m. shift joined the pickets, but most went home. Negotiations had continued right up to midnight, when union leaders left the conference room. The chief union negotiator, Sam Blackburn, then told waiting members: "We have not agreed on

The Union president, George Dixon, told news-men he would not comment on how far apart the two sides were, pending resumption of talks. He said no new date had been set, but that he expected to be in touch with company officials later today. The plant was closed today except for the business and executive offices, although union officials did allow two half-loaded trucks to finish loading and leave. Incoming trucks were turned around at the picket line.

Two policemen were assigned to keep order and direct traffic at the plant, but the picketing was being carried out without incident.

Search Begins For Missing Sub

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP)—An air-sea search is under way 100 miles north of here for a Navy research submarine with a crew of four that was reported missing yesterday. The missing vessel, Woods Hole III, had been on a routine survey of the undersea terrain when its radio signals stopped at 9:08 a.m. yesterday, according to Navy officials here. The 24-foot submarine then failed to surface, as it was required to do when any malfunction occurred, the officials said. However, Navy rescue experts, flown here last night from Florida and California, held out hope for rescue. They estimated that the missing sub had enough reserve oxygen to last through tomorrow even if its mechanical air filters were not working. Word of the loss of the sub's signals was radioed to the Navy base here by the submarine tender Galway, which was on duty with the Woods Hole III, and planes and ships with submarine-detection equipment were sent to the scene immediately. Two destroyers equipped with the latest submarine-detection devices were dispatched from the United States Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba—approximately 600 miles away—joining the search this morning. A larger search was begun today.

That The People May Know

Middletown's City Manager

The minimal margin (5-4) by which John Curtis was named Middletown's first city manager will hardly elate Mr. Curtis. But it really was nothing personal.

Part of the opposition can be ascribed to satisfaction with the status quo and the obverse of that coin—fear of change. But among thoughtful opponents there is more to it than that. There is a disenchantment with the manager concept because of the sorry way it has worked out—or has failed to work out—in other cities in this area.

As a concept, the manager system is unassailable. It is the essence of political science in action, making for professionalism in the day-to-day as well as long-term administration of municipal government. Also inherent in the concept is the city manager's independence. Not having to concern himself with wooing voters and winning elections, the manager theoretically is free to concentrate solely on a city's best interests—without, as the old expression goes, fear or favor.

In practice, however, this has never quite worked out. Nor can it, as a matter of realism, when a manager is responsible to elective officials, who in turn are responsible to the citizenry for what the manager does or doesn't do.

Peterson Poll Tax Rise Gets 58% Backing

The Peterson Opinion Poll, released yesterday, finds that 58 per cent of the state's citizens would be willing to pay higher taxes to avoid cuts in the state's "essential" services. Interviewing had been completed before Gov. Preston Forbes issued his call for a special session of the Legislature to enact additional taxes.

A cross-section of 1525 adults was asked: "Would you be willing to pay higher taxes so that the state would not have to cut back its essential services?"

The results were as follows:

- Yes .....58%
- No .....30%
- No opinion...12%

The respondents were also asked to list any services which they considered "nonessential." A total of 84 per cent listed one or more. Those mentioned most often were promotion of tourist travel within the state, grants to the State Arts Council, the budget of the state historian and state aid for local planning.

manager theoretically is free to concentrate solely on a city's best interests—without, as the old expression goes, fear or favor.

In practice, however, this has never quite worked out. Nor can it, as a matter of realism, when a manager is responsible to elective officials, who in turn are responsible to the citizenry for what the manager does or doesn't do.

But unfortunate or unimpressive experiences in some cities do not foreclose the possibility that the managerial system can work here—and perhaps brilliantly.

Facing Up to Fiscal Facts

Glum is the word for state legislators summoned back to the capital by Gov. Forbes. But, having left state finances in a highly precarious condition when they last adjourned, they must have known a call-back would become inevitable.

The alarming deficit in the state's operating budget serves plain notice that new sources of revenue must be found. The time for gimmicks, patchwork taxation and inflated estimates of revenue is long gone.

The equation is inescapable: Income must match outgo—after, of course, outgo has been set at a prudent, reasonable level. Legislators insisted at the last session that they had indeed held outgo to such a level. We won't dispute the point. But they did vote for an extensive health insurance plan. Now the cost of that plan, along with the cost of several other state programs, is running considerably higher than legislators had anticipated—or, at any rate, had allowed for in the budget.

So what we have in the capital is a fiscal crisis that requires more than rejiggering present taxes or concocting a new low-yield nuisance tax or two.

For the kind of tax the state requires to put its financial house in order, and to do so on an equitable basis of ability to pay, there is really no longer any responsible alternative to enactment of a graduated income tax.

The clamor for college reforms may yet successfully swirl around the most probable substitution of all, the Electoral College.

Leo Meyer should have been enough to doom it long ago. Besides the quaint numerical ability to elect a candidate who trailed in the popular vote or to toss into the House of Representatives an election in which the field was so split that no candidate received an electoral majority, the functioning of the Electoral College simply fails to make any sense.

When the voters of a city elect a mayor, they vote directly for the posted candidates and the man with the top tally wins. Logical, yes?

50 Years Ago

MAYOR DWIGHT HOLBORN urged the City Council to start thinking about new zoning laws that would assure adequate separation of office street stores and offices from residential neighborhoods.

THE MIDDLETOWN Chamber of Commerce predicted, to the disbelief of many residents, that within five years the city would have its own radio station.

By LEO MEYER

So it goes also for district elections, county elections and state elections.

But in nationwide elections—that is, for President and Vice President—the picture is different. The citizen votes for a slate of electors. Through this tortured mechanism, the winning slate carries an entire state, collecting all of that state's electoral votes. This winner-take-all system hands Candidate A the entire bag of a state's electoral votes even though Candidate B might have polled millions of votes in that state and lost by only one vote.

Thus, a relatively small change in the proportions of the popular vote received by the two major parties can produce strange and lopsided changes in the electoral vote.

Why not, in logic, quit voting for electors and playing this silly—and in extremely close voting, potentially undemocratic—game of winner-take-all? Why not simply tally the votes state by state and add them up on a national basis?

All it takes is a constitutional amendment. The Constitution has been amended for less important reasons than assuring a national election in a great democracy is genuinely democratic. Let's insure that the process of counting ballots is as democratic as casting them.

I protest the use of our schools for disseminating United Nations propaganda. All over town posters, made by school students under school auspices and in classroom time, are being displayed in shop windows—extolling the purported virtues of the United Nations.

As a taxpayer, I resent both the indoctrination of children and the use of school time and facilities for turning out U. N. propaganda.

... and Extolled

To the editor:

There has been considerable misunderstanding, much of it intentional, about the U. N. posters prepared by children here and throughout much of the world.

It is truly amazing that supposed adults can work up a lather over children's participation in a special observance honoring the world organization's so little-noticed humane activities for the ill, the destitute and the helpless all over the world, without regard to politics or ideology.

I, for one, applaud the Middletown school system for its participation.

Treaty OK On Trade

By RICHARD PETERSON
 (ASUNCION, Paraguay (UPI)—The foreign ministers of 13 South American nations agreed today to a treaty establishing a regional economic and trade system modeled on the European Economic Community, or Common Market.

The presidents of the nations are expected here in the next few days to formally sign the historic document.

The basic effect of the treaty will be to remove tariffs and other trade barriers between member countries so that each may expand its markets.

This expansion in South America is expected in turn to lead to greatly accelerated growth and development that will enable the nations to compete more effectively in world markets.

Approved a few three months of negotiations here by the ministers and their staffs, the treaty marks the realization of an idea that has been the dream of many South Americans for decades.

Although the United States took no direct hand in the negotiations, Washington officials worked behind the scenes to encourage formation of the continental market. U. S. officials view the market as the framework for

'Born Yesterday' Still a Delight

By MARIAN MICHEL

Cast and audience enjoyed themselves thoroughly last night as the Community Players proved that Garson Kanin's durable comedy "Born Yesterday" still has plenty of theatrical mileage.

The performance was the first of four consecutive evening showings at the Middletown Opera House.

Stella Scott is excellent as Billie Dawn, the dumb blonde whose education leads to big trouble for her possessive keeper, the boorish junk tycoon, Harry Brock. Paul McLaughlin is a delightfully convincing Brock.

Terence Devlin is impressive as Paul, the liberal, sophisticated newspaper reporter who, in educating Billie, awakens her to the realities around her, including the benevolent but crafty tyranny of her companion, Brock. Occasional lapses in technique last night were more than offset by the sparkle and zest of the performance.

While the Players have had moderate success with serious drama and satire, comedy seems to be their forte.

That goes not only for the acting but for Michael McCant's direction, Faye Marley's sets and Joe Flaherty's lighting.

Part of the charm of "Born Yesterday" is its evocation of a less complicated time when the story of a feather-brained blonde outwitting her crude mentor generated a telling social commentary as well as an evening of laughs.

It still does — but the emphasis now is more on the laughs.

Although the United States took no direct hand in the negotiations, Washington officials worked behind the scenes to encourage formation of the continental market. U. federal aid became available, and under which the state is providing direct subsidies and tax benefits to industries and municipalities for reducing air and water pollution.

The governor's criticism of the medical insurance program is a reversal of his attitude last year when he signed the bill, calling it the most progressive health plan ever adopted by a state, and terming it clear evidence that the states are capable of many of the functions now being performed by the federal government.

In the statement to newsmen concerning the special session, Forbes said:

"I have called the Legislature into special session Monday next at noon to consider new sources of revenue. This action is taken in view of present forecasts of a deficit of $300 million at year's end.

"I shall make specific proposals as to how new revenue should be acquired when I address a joint session of the Legislature on Monday."

Manager Is Named

"I'm well aware," he added, that I'll have to prove myself."

That was an apparent reference not only to last night's 5-4 vote in the council but to the outcome of the referendum earlier this year, when only 53 per cent of the city's voters approved the switch to manager government.

The councilmen who cast the dissenting votes indicated that they would have voted against any candidate for the post.

Anderson typified their sentiment when he said outside the council chamber for it in any way. Hiring a manager is an admission that we can't do the job ourselves."

Debate before the vote was brief, with both sides appearing to feel that everything that could be said on the subject had been said many times during the last 10 years.

Curtis, 50, has been manager in Portville for eight years. Previously he had served in similar positions in Ohio and his native California.

A graduate of Pennsylvania State University, he holds a master's degree in public administration.

By JOHNNY FERRARI

A three-run homer gave the Middletown Lions a 4-1 extra-inning victory over the Iron City Miners yesterday.

A deadlocked pitching duel was broken in the 11th inning of the twilight contest when the Lions' top slugger, Lou Whitfield, belted the ball over the wall of Municipal Stadium, sending home Del Vincent and Bob Cooper from second and first base ahead of him. The winning hit came with two outs.

Until then, Lion pitcher Danny Carothers had held the Miners to one run, scored in the fourth by Jim Frank, who tripled and came in on a fielder's choice. It was the best showing of the season for Carothers, a lanky 19-year-old rookie.

Carothers pitched the entire game, as did the Miners' veteran Danny Williams, who had held the opposition to a home run by the powerful Rick Bradley in the fifth frame.

Yesterday's victory brought the Lions' record to 15 wins and 23 losses. It also brought from Coach Gary Winters broad smiles and a prediction that "we're on our way now."

His prediction will be put to an early test. After an off-day today, the Middletown club travels to Watertown tomorrow for another joust with the Eagles, whom the Lions have yet to beat this season.

Despite their six losses to the Eagles, the Lions were riding a crest of optimism after yesterday's dazzling performance.

"We've proved we can pitch and we've proved we can hit," Winters said jubilantly. "The trick is to do them both, and do them well, in the same game. It's all a matter of hitting one's stride, and I really think we've hit ours now."

The home fans were eager to believe him. During the last month many of them have taken to referring to Watertown as "Waterloo."

Navy submarine with special rescue equipment was expected to arrive in the search area later today.

The Galway's skipper, Capt. Perry Young, USN, who has had 30 years of underseas experience, said it was possible that the Woods Hole III had lost power and was lying on the bottom of the ocean. The depth of water in that area varies from 500 to 750 feet, he added, and is well within the capacity of the Woods Hole III to withstand the pressure.

Also, the vessel is equipped with escape locks, the skipper said, and it would be possible to transfer the men to another submarine with a diving bell or other rescue equipment. In addition, the four crewmen are experienced divers and should have no trouble making the transfer, Young added.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS

There are 30 four-choice questions in this test. You have the rest of this period to answer them.

Do not try to read the whole newspaper first. Go right to work on the questions. They tell which parts of the paper you must read to find the answers.

As soon as you know which answer to a question is the best, write its number in the blank at the right. You may not need to read a whole article to answer the questions about it.

EXAMPLE

0 The name of the test newspaper is the Middletown Daily
1 Mirror    2 News    3 Sun    4 Times    0.....

If you are not sure which answer to a question is the best, guess. The score is the number of right answers.
