ABSTRACT

This guide is designed to assist Florida teachers helping students achieve the Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma. To meet the needs of students with disabilities more effectively and to align with the intent of the Sunshine State Standards and the Florida System of School Improvement and Accountability, the Student Performance Standards for Exceptional Students have been revised to reflect high levels of accomplishment in the curriculum areas appropriate for students with disabilities seeking a special diploma. The guide explains the hierarchic structure of the domains, strands, standards, and benchmarks that make up the Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma. The guide provides a brief description of each of the four domains: curriculum and learning environment (Sunshine State Standards, functional academics, and life work), independent functioning (personal care and self management), social and emotional behavior (working with others), and communication (communicating with others). Within each domain, the content is organized by strands. Each strand contains one or more standards, and each standard includes one or more benchmarks for three different levels of functioning: the independent level, the supported level, and the participatory level. The guide closes with a chart correlating the Sunshine State Standards to benchmarks and sample performance objectives. (CR)

Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma Exceptional Student Education

HIGHLIGHTS

- Sunshine State Standards and Exceptional Student Education
- The Hierarchic Structure of Domains, Strands, Standards, and Benchmarks
- The Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma

The strands, standards, and benchmarks of the Sunshine State Standards represent the center of efforts to reform and enhance education in Florida. Standards have the potential to affect many aspects of schooling in Florida. The general curriculum—what teachers teach and how they teach it—is organized around the Sunshine State Standards (Florida Department of Education, 1996).

The need to reexamine all areas of the curriculum has occurred because of the rapid increase of knowledge in all areas, combined with continual developments in technology, which are transforming our society. Homes, schools, and the workplace are much different than they were only 10 or 20 years ago. Therefore, education programs in the schools also need to change. They should account for lifelong learning in a changed and changing world.

Sunshine State Standards and Exceptional Student Education

Effective accommodations and modifications must be in place to support involvement of students with disabilities in basic and vocational instructional programs. The high expectations of the Goal 3 Student Performance Standards and Sunshine State Standards (Florida Department of Education, 1996, 1997a) are appropriate for students with disabilities. Approximately 60% of graduating students with disabilities leave school with a standard diploma. However, it is important to add in the number of students with disabilities who drop out of school.

Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma

Graduating students with disabilities (i.e., students who exit with a diploma or certificate of completion) represent only 60% of the school leaver population for students with disabilities. Forty percent (40%) of the students with disabilities leave school as dropouts.

If the educational needs and level of performance of an individual student with disabilities bring into question the appropriateness of the regular education program and standard diploma requirements, more realistic and feasible school or postschool outcomes must be identified. Students with certain disabilities may elect to work for a Special Diploma. Currently, the Student Performance Standards for Exceptional Students define the required (minimum) standards for a Special Diploma, Option 1. Option 1 is based on mastery of a specific set of student performance standards for students with disabilities and course credit requirements established by each local school district. Special Diploma, Option 2, is based on mastery of employment competencies specified in a graduation plan on an individual student basis through the Individual Educational Plan process. Approximately 40% of graduating students with disabilities leave with a Special Diploma or Special Certificate of Completion.

To meet the needs of students with disabilities more effectively and to align with the intent and approach of the Sunshine State Standards and the Florida System of School Improvement and Accountability, the Student Performance Standards for Exceptional Students have been revised to reflect high levels of accomplishment in the curriculum areas appropriate for students with disabilities seeking a Special Diploma. The Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma support the attainment of the desired school and post-school outcomes of students with disabilities and the adaptations to content that may be required to meet the other educational needs that result from their individual disability. The Sunshine State Standards provide descriptions of the knowledge and skills associated with the academic disciplines. Of importance for students with disabilities are

- the areas of functional academics, life work, social and emotional behavior, and independent functioning needed by many students with disabilities
- a delineation of skills at lower levels of functioning
- a functional level approach

The Hierarchic Structure of Domains, Strands, Standards, and Benchmarks

Four domains have been defined for the standards. The domains are consistent with the domains used in the Florida Education Finance Program Matrix of Services for Exceptional Student Education (Florida Department of Education, 1997b). Within each domain, the content is organized into one or more strands. Each strand has standards, and each standard has one or more benchmarks at the independent, supported, and participatory levels of functioning.

The standards presented in this document have a specific hierarchic structure. There are several levels of information, each more specific than the next.

Domain = content area of functioning, such as Curriculum and Learning Environment, Social and Emotional Behavior.

Strand = label (word or phrase) for a category of functioning, such as Life Work, Personal Care, Self-Management.

Standard = general statement of expected learner achievement upon exiting the school program at graduation or age 22.

Benchmark = learner expectations (what a student should be able to do) based on the student's level of functioning, independent, supported, or participatory.

with

Sample Performance Objectives = examples of things a student could do to demonstrate achievement of the benchmark.

and

Correlations to Goal 3 Standards = identification of the specific Goal 3 standards that are incorporated into the sample performance objectives.

The domains, strands, standards, and benchmarks make up the Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma. These have been authorized by Section 233.01(2), Florida Statutes, and adopted by the State Board of Education as Rule 6A-1.09401, Florida Administrative Code. These laws require public schools to provide appropriate instruction to assist students in the achievement of these standards. Each district school board must incorporate the Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma into its district Pupil Progression Plan.

The Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma are based on the Goal 3 Student Performance Standards (Florida Department of Education, 1997a), the Sunshine State Standards (Florida Department of Education, 1996), the Florida Standards for Applied Technology (Florida Department of Education, Division of Workforce Development, 1997), and the Performance Assessment System for Students with Disabilities (PASSD), developed by the State of Florida (Disability Research Systems, Inc. and Florida Department of Education, 1995a, 1995b, in press).

This document includes the Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma. The standards are introduced with a discussion of the domains, strands, and standards. The standards and benchmarks for the domain areas follow. The domains include:

- Curriculum and Learning Environment
- Independent Functioning
- Social and Emotional Behavior
- Communication

Within each domain, the content is organized by strands. Each strand contains one or more standards. A standard is a description of general expectations regarding knowledge and skill development within a strand. For example, within Independent Functioning, Strand B: Self-Management, there are two standards:

Standard 1: The student manages personal, career, and other life decisions.

Standard 2: The student demonstrates conduct that complies with social and environmental expectations.

The most specific level of information is the benchmark. A benchmark is a statement of expectations about student knowledge and skill for each of three levels of functioning: independent, supported, and participatory. Benchmarks translate the standards into expectations at different levels of student functioning. Within a standard, one would expect students at independent levels to be performing differently from students at participatory levels. The benchmarks describe these differing levels of functioning. The actual attainment of any of the three levels, as indicated in the specific benchmarks, is to be achieved by the time a student exits the school program at graduation.

Individual students may function at one level across all areas, or at several different levels, depending on the requirements of situations. The following descriptions describe expectations for each level. Each standard includes one or more benchmarks for each level of functioning.

Students functioning at the Independent Level are generally considered to be capable of meeting their own needs and working and living successfully in their communities as adults without overt support from others. The standards for students functioning at the Independent Level should encompass a set of skills, competencies, and orientations required for independent living. However, these students have some limitations that affect their ability to transfer or generalize learning across different environments and situations. Students functioning at the Independent Level need to be able to assess their personal strengths and limitations and obtain resources, supports, and linkages to maximize their personal effectiveness. The focus of the standards should be balanced between functional academic skills and daily living and working skills.

Students functioning at the Independent Level can realistically be expected to perform the behaviors identified for each benchmark on their own once they have mastered the knowledge and skills (Disability Research Systems, Inc. and Florida Department of Education, in press).

Students functioning at the Supported Level are generally considered to be capable of achieving supported independence in adulthood. The standards for students functioning at the Supported Level should encompass a set of skills, competencies, and orientations required for living in a supported setting. They also reflect familiar and basic tasks and activities of daily living, which acknowledge that students, while capable of completing these tasks and activities, will require support or assistance in establishing and maintaining the desired behaviors. Students functioning at the Supported Level will require supervision and support throughout their lives, but they can learn many skills to maximize their independence. The focus of the standards should be on completing tasks and activities of daily living and work, enhancing the quality of life, and maximizing personal effectiveness.

Students functioning at the Supported Level can realistically be expected to perform the behaviors identified for each benchmark with assistive or adaptive aids, supervision, or prompting (Disability Research Systems, Inc. and Florida Department of Education, 1995a). Each benchmark at the Support Level includes the phrase “–with guidance and support” to indicate that aids, supervision, or prompting is generally needed to insure the successful performance of the student.

Assistive or Adaptive Aids

Materials to help the student perform the target behavior without the intervention of another individual at the time the student is participating in the activity. These aids (e.g., list of instructions, cue cards, calendars, alarms) may have been developed especially for the student.

Supervision

The student is watched by another person or has another person in the immediate vicinity who makes sure that that student is performing as expected. The supervision might include occasional prompts or corrections.

Prompts

Verbal or physical cues from another person that encourage the student to continue effort, perform a specific behavior, or correct a mistake. Once the student is given the cue, he or she continues with the activity and does not require step-by-step instructions.

Students functioning at the Participatory Level are generally considered to have significant cognitive and physical limitations that preclude their ability to generalize or transfer their learning. These students will be dependent on others for most, if not all, of their daily living needs as adults. The standards for students functioning at the Participatory Level will require an extensive ongoing support system that enables students to participate in all areas of life. The focus of the standards should be on participating to the maximum extent possible in tasks and activities of daily living. The “maximum extent possible” is individually determined for each student based on input from parents, teachers, and therapists. The standards will require that the home, school, and community work together to integrate the student as fully as possible into major life activities.

Students functioning at the Participatory Level are expected to participate at a level consistent with their own capabilities (Disability Research Systems, Inc. and Florida Department of Education, 1995b). This means that the expectations for the student's performance must take into consideration his or her physical and mental limitations. The phrase “–with assistance” is included with each benchmark at the Participatory Level to indicate that assistance is generally needed for participation by the student.

Participation at a Level Consistent with Own Capabilities

The student is not expected to perform independently if his or her physical and mental capabilities will not allow independent performance. A student may receive any form of assistance necessary ranging from prompting to full physical manipulation.

Regular Participation and Interaction

Regular participation refers to the fact that the student participates in the activity and interacts with others with a frequency that is typical of nondisabled agemates.

Work or Volunteer Activities

Work or volunteer activities refer to activities that are performed outside the domestic environment and lead to marketable goods or services. If these activities were not performed by the student, they would need to be performed by another individual (i.e., they are not activities designed solely to keep the student occupied).

Accompanying the benchmarks are sample performance objectives. These sample performance objectives suggest how teachers might ask students to apply the knowledge and skill described in the benchmark. For example, consider the following benchmark at the supported level within Social and Emotional Behavior, Strand A, Working with Others, Standard 1:

The student functions effectively within formal organizations—with guidance and support.

A sample performance objective that may accompany this benchmark is [Achievement of the benchmarks may be demonstrated when the student uses a personal information card to sign in and out at the visitors desk of the retirement home when visiting grandparents or friends.]

To perform this activity, students must apply the knowledge and skill described in the benchmark.

Each sample performance objective is keyed to specific Goal 3 standards; for example, in the above sample performance objective, students are using the processes and abilities associated with Goal 3 Standards 2, 5, and 7.

The sample performance objectives and their Goal 3 correlations are meant to suggest to local curriculum and assessment developers and teachers the kinds of classroom instruction and assessment activities that can be used with the benchmarks. They are not one-to-one assessment items for the benchmarks; neither are they state-mandated assessment activities. They serve only to suggest to local curriculum and assessment designers and teachers how they might begin to think about ways to determine if students are achieving or are making adequate progress toward achieving the benchmarks. Additional performance objectives correlated to the benchmarks have been developed for the Suggested Course Performance Objectives for the Florida Course Descriptions, Grades 6-12, Exceptional Student Education (1999). Curriculum designers and teachers may choose the content, topic, or processes for the activities appropriate to the local curriculum and develop additional performance objectives.

For ease of reference, the table of standards and benchmarks uses an identification system that mirrors the hierarchic structure just described. Each domain, strand, standard, benchmark, and sample performance objective has been assigned a unique identification code. The codes associated with the benchmarks and sample performance objectives reflect the structure of this coding system. For example, note the following benchmark:

CL.B.3.In.2

The student applies mathematical concepts and processes to solve problems.

This code indicates that the benchmark is in the domain of Curriculum and Learning Environment (CL), Strand B, Functional Academics. The next number identifies the standard (3) under which the benchmark is categorized, and the letters identify the functional level (In) designated for this benchmark, that is, Independent. The last number, 2, signifies that this is the second benchmark found under the standard at this developmental level. Sample performance objectives share a similar identification code but differ in having a lowercase letter appended. This can be seen in the code for a sample performance objective associated with the benchmark above:

CL.B.3.In.2.a

[Achievement of the benchmarks may be demonstrated when the student] compares the value of two products, based on cost, quantity, and quality of goods, to determine the best buy.

The letter “a” indicates that this is the first sample performance objective provided for this benchmark.

The standards and benchmarks in this document identify the essential knowledge and skills that students earning a Special Diploma should learn and for which the state will hold schools accountable. Nevertheless, how the standards and benchmarks are organized; what specific curriculum, instructional strategies, materials, and activities are designed to teach them; how much time is spent teaching them; and when they are taught within the functional levels are local decisions.

SUNSHINE STATE STANDARDS FOR SPECIAL DIPLOMA

The Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma are organized around four domains: 1) Curriculum and Learning Environment, 2) Independent Functioning, 3) Social and Emotional Behavior, and 4) Communication. This section provides a brief description of each domain and standard. The benchmarks and sample performance objectives follow.

Curriculum and Learning Environment

The Curriculum and Learning Environment Domain reflects the academic and vocational subject areas included in the general curriculum.

Strand A: Sunshine State Standards

The Sunshine State Standards contain a comprehensive description of the content of the general curriculum for Florida's students. These standards and their developmental benchmarks outline milestones for learning at four grade levels for seven major subject areas: Language Arts, Mathematics, Science, Social Studies, Health Education and Physical Education, the Arts, and Foreign Languages. A student with a disability is expected to be involved and make progress in the general curriculum. Curriculum modifications and accommodations may be provided based on the needs of the individual student.

Standard 1

The student participates and makes progress in the Sunshine State Standards as appropriate for the individual student.

A student with a disability may also require specially designed instruction in which content is adapted and special methodologies are used. The additional Sunshine State Standards for Special Diploma are intended to reflect the levels of assistance and modifications that might be needed to address the unique needs that result from the student's disability.

Strand B: Functional Academics

Functional Academics includes skills in the areas of reading, writing, listening, speaking, viewing, mathematics, and problem solving.

Standard 1

The student locates, interprets, and uses oral, print, or visual information for a variety of purposes.

The ability to interpret and use information is critical to effective functioning in daily living and the world of work. Information is conveyed through words, symbols, pictures, and experiences. It is primarily obtained by reading, listening, and viewing. Individuals need to be able to locate and use information from a variety of sources such as a newspaper, technical manual, or the instructions of a supervisor for a variety of purposes including following directions, making decisions, and solving problems. Individuals must also be able to organize and store information so that it can be retrieved.

Standard 2

The student expresses information effectively using oral, print, or visual formats for a variety of purposes.

The ability to express information is critical to effective functioning in adult life and the world of work. Information is primarily expressed by writing and speaking and through graphic formats. Alternate forms of expression may be needed for certain individuals including the use of sign language and augmentative communication. Individuals need to be able to present thoughts, feelings, and information to meet requirements of specific tasks or situations.

Standard 3

The student identifies and applies mathematical concepts and processes to solve problems.

In managing work activities and meeting personal needs, individuals may apply mathematical concepts and processes. Problem solving often requires the use of numbers and calculations. For example, finding the best value in purchasing a pair of shoes or determining if a particular tool will produce the desired results requires that one apply mathematical knowledge and skills.

Standard 4

The student uses systematic approaches when solving problems.

Individuals who learn to approach problems systematically are generally effective at achieving desired results. Problems may range from fixing a minor mistake on the job to very complex problems like working through the issues of resolving conflict in a social group. The ability to consider alternative solutions is critical in the problem-solving process. Individuals also need to seek and use assistance and support in solving problems.

Strand C: Life Work

Life Work addresses workplace competencies relating to job preparation, task management, use of tools and technology, and employability skills.

Standard 1

The student recognizes opportunities and responsibilities in the workplace.

Gaining understanding of the opportunities and responsibilities of the workplace prepares students for post-school adult living. Knowledge of the workplace includes awareness of job characteristics and training requirements, as well as understanding of individual rights and responsibilities. Individuals can use that knowledge to determine their own interests and career goals; obtain knowledge of the availability of jobs now and in the future; and develop the skills needed to successfully locate, apply, and get the desired job.

Standard 2

The student demonstrates skills and competencies needed for employment.

Individuals who demonstrate skills and competencies needed for employment are able to get and keep jobs. Knowing how to do the job involves being able to use electronic technology, tools, and materials associated with the tasks and being able to learn how to meet new job requirements. Following health and safety procedures will be essential for successful employment. Planning and implementing work procedures that meet the safety and quality requirements of the worksite and completing the task on time are critical factors of employability. A reliable employee who displays a basic work ethic is a valuable asset to any business or industry.

Independent Functioning

Independent Functioning is the aim for post-school and adult living. The content centers around the knowledge and skills needed to take care of personal needs and to participate effectively in the community. Essential to independent functioning is the ability to manage important decisions and behave in ways that meet social expectations.

Strand A: Personal Care

Personal Care includes the skills and knowledge associated with personal daily living and care, as well as obtaining community resources.

Standard 1.

The student engages in productive and leisure activities for use in the home and community.

Individuals must be prepared to function effectively at home and in the community. Individuals must possess the knowledge and specific skills needed for the routines associated with personal care. They may assume all or part of the responsibilities for keeping the household running, preparing meals, or taking care of repairs. Community involvement is also an important part of adult life.

Individuals need to be able to travel within and beyond the community, communicate with friends and acquaintances, and participate effectively in leisure activities.

Standard 2

The student accesses and uses community resources and services.

In the course of daily living, individuals routinely complete activities that require community transactions such as using a bank, shopping, or obtaining the services of agencies. These transactions must be completed as efficiently and safely as possible.

Strand B: Self-Management

Self-Management encompasses personal planning and decision making and appropriate conduct in daily living and work roles.

Standard 1

The student manages personal, career, and other life decisions.

Individuals make decisions every day—which job to take, where to live, or whether to go to a movie or watch a video. Some issues are very personal, while others may concern the family or community. To be able to think through the decision-making process, establish goals, and consider options and risks helps individuals to arrive at beneficial decisions more effectively.

Standard 2

The student demonstrates conduct that complies with social and environmental expectations.

When individuals understand social and environmental expectations for behavior, they can act accordingly. Using strategies to initiate or curtail certain desired or undesired behaviors may help the individual to behave in ways that meet expected standards of conduct. Knowing what to do when confronted with an unexpected event can play a large part in ensuring that individuals are safe.

When a person is treated badly or witnesses someone else being physically harmed, the knowledge of how to respond and where to find help is critical.

Social and Emotional Behavior

The Social and Emotional Behavior Domain focuses on working in groups and developing interpersonal relationships.

Strand A: Working with Others

Functioning effectively in formal and informal group situations requires that individuals understand the implicit and explicit rules and expectations. Using effective interpersonal skills is the key to success in this areas.

Standard 1

The student contributes to overall effort of the group.

Group activities are an inevitable part of daily life and are becoming increasingly important in the workplace. Individuals must interact with others when they complete daily living transactions, perform work-related tasks, and participate in leisure activities. Individuals must be able to function in a variety of group situations. Functioning within formal organizations such as the school, church, workplace, and hospital requires that individuals be aware of both explicit and implied expectations for behavior. Being able to use appropriate interpersonal communication skills can enable individuals to work with others successfully.

Standard 2

The student uses acceptable interpersonal skills when interacting with others.

The ability to interact appropriately requires that the individual be able to communicate effectively. Understanding the needs of others and being sensitive to their opinions, perspectives, and particular characteristics are critical aspects of interpersonal relationships. It is important that individuals be afforded the opportunity to interact with a full range of persons, including individuals who do and do not have disabilities.

Communication

Communication addresses the ability to participate effectively in communication cycles. Competencies related to communication and language are also described in the Curriculum and Learning Environment in Standards 1 and 2 for Strand A: Functional Academics and in Social and Personal Domain in Standard 1 on interpersonal communication.

Strand A: Communicating with Others

Effective communication skills enable individuals to express their thoughts and needs and respond to interactions with others. Language facilitates successful completion of daily activities.

Standard 1

The student effectively communicates with others.

The ability to communicate with others enhances one's personal daily functioning and integration with society. Effective communication skills enable individuals to express their own needs, respond to directions or commands from others, and generally use their language to facilitate successful completion of daily activities. Knowing how to participate in discussions, conversations, and the general give and take required in interacting with others will enable individuals to make effective use of communication.
