ABSTRACT

Art concepts are surveyed from the beginning of recorded time of the stone age to present day contemporary society in this curriculum guide for grades seven through nine. Since art reflects culture, the student interprets the past, analyzes the present, and projects the future by using art as a medium. Objectives are for the student to identify elements of composition, value, and universality in works of art; to trace the development of a specific style of art by examining the social, political, and religious development of each period; to recognize original works of art; and to relate to the world through art. Course content focuses on the history of civilization through art as a portrayer of human experiences. Teaching techniques include demonstrations, lectures, multi-media instruction, field trips, and readings. In addition to the above information, guidelines, objectives, and student and teacher resources are provided. Related documents are SO 005 207, SO 005 269 through SO 005 273. (SJM)

III. COURSE DESCRIPTION

An introductory survey of art concepts from the beginning of recorded time to the present. The student investigates ideas of past civilizations and their relationship to our contemporary society.

IV. RATIONALE

The real contribution of the artist to history is the deepening and extension of human experience. This is enhanced by his ability and talent to record and project these experiences into history in a language that is universal and can express thoughts and emotions of the people involved.

By studying art, as a reflection of culture both of history and modern times, the student should be able to interpret the past, analyze the present and project the future.

V. COURSE ENROLLMENT GUIDELINES

- A. No prerequisite for enrolling in this course.
- B. Recommended for grades 7-9.

VI. COURSE OF STUDY OBJECTIVES

- A. Given a classroom demonstration the student will describe orally or in writing, the following elements of a work of art:
  - 1. Composition
  - 2. Interpretive value
  - 3. Universality
- B. Given explanatory lectures accompanied by films, slides and other audiovisual aids, the student will present a graphic (time line mural or collage) or written report tracing the development of a specific style of art specifying:
  - 1. Social characteristics of the period
  - 2. Religious practices and beliefs of the period
  - 3. Political developments of the period
- C. Given the opportunity to go on field trips to museums, art galleries, etc., the students will present a small group demonstration to the class about the ways a person may recognize an original work of art as compared to a copy or a reproduction; pointing out the immediate difference of the effect of depth and significance of an original work as compared to a reproduction.

- D. Given special readings of informal stories of famous artists, the student will present orally, graphically or in writing, a report to the class on the way he himself can relate to the world around him with his own special talent.
1. He will interpret how the artist is affected by his peers, his culture and his environment.
  2. He will demonstrate how he, too, is affected the same way and will outline contributions that he himself could make to the aesthetic world by any of these methods:
    - a. Showing reproductions
    - b. Making sketches
    - c. Playing records or tapes that will help to demonstrate the world in which he lives

- d. Listing words that have significance to him in relation to his aesthetic emotions

VII. COURSE CONTENT

A history of civilization emphasizing art as the portrayer of human feelings.

A. The Stone Age: Prehistoric man - 3rd millennium B. C.

1. Palaeolithic hunters gave us our first art by painting on the walls of caves.
  - a. Shows man's life and means of survival by paintings of animals not photographic but strangely representational. Tremendous importance of these animals of supporting life; food, clothing and even light.
  - b. Depicts man's life as threatened or enhanced by nature.
2. Sculpture found in tombs show both the sacred and spiritual influences in a context of supernatural concepts.
  - a. Transcends the visible and tangible
  - b. Portrays images of an unseen world as though it were dangerous to set down a recognizable form of a human being

- c. Renders the sacred in a vein of fantasy. Similar to figures found in Mayan cultures; snake goddesses, bird heads. Also similar to the culture of African Bushman which represents a comparable outlook on life.
  - d. Presents figures always in praying position -- can be compared to sculptured figures on churches during Gothic period (12th century)
  - e. Conjures up forms which did not exist in reality. These forms are not capricious; they are functional to the soul, the sacred world of the gods and the dead.
3. The dawn of art projects a special appeal to modern man because it is not illustrative. Its freedom relates to the art trends of today.
- B. Egyptian Period - From 2700 B. C.
- 1. A bureaucratic culture of kings and slaves
  - 2. Except for royalty every Egyptian took his part in a system of routine, never using his inherent creative abilities.

3. No desire for knowledge; therefore, progress was sacrificed for order which is reflected in the art.
  4. Stereotyped poses characteristic of primitive painting
  5. Discovery of papyrus and the beginning of printed words: hieroglyphics
  6. Death was not so mysterious: they portrayed gods as living people and were concerned with the survival of the deceased soul.
  7. Climate very hot; reflected in costume and the portrayal of almost nude figures in the murals.
  8. Beginning of crafts; gold and silver-smiths, sculptors, cabinetmakers, etc.
  9. Painting was linear; figures mostly in profile.
  10. Mythological, ritualistic, and biographic character of the subject matter was a narrative, but reality was expressed by presenting the eye in full face, front view.
  11. Dawn of realistic painting 1375-58 B.C.
- C. Greek Period - from 1100 B.C.
1. The Golden Age of Greek Art 450 B. C. - 400 B. C., also called the Age of Pericles

2. The study of philosophy; the importance of man
  - a. Aristotle
  - b. Socrates
3. Although the religion was mythological, the gods were represented as real people and in real situations
4. Worshipped perfection in human forms, natural forms and man made forms
5. Musical instruments
6. The theater
7. Architecture
Example: Parthenon considered the most beautiful building ever built
8. Athletic games
9. Painting
  - a. Found mostly on vases
  - b. Some frescoes found in recent years

11. Coins

12. Beauty in all things. Greek beauty is referred to as "classic beauty".

D. Roman Period - Mid 8th Century B.C.

1. Imperial Rome; war-like, wealthy, extravagant, ostentatious
2. Aesthetically decadent
3. Grandeur its goal; magnificent works of engineering and building; little creativity in art work yet works were executed large; decorations and lavish ornamentation.
4. Era of the mighty Ceasars.
5. Sculpture was mostly portraiture for personal glorification or ornamentalism.
6. Instead of theater as in Greece, the Roman taste turned more to the gladiator arena with spectacles of the fights of slaves against wild beasts.
7. Poetry; Ovid, Vergil
8. First 'republican' government attempted with a senate, public meeting halls, or forum
9. Roman character essentially brutal and sensual, had little use for the arts except as diversion or social show.

10. March of Roman army conquest absorbs Egypt and Greece
  11. In architecture the post and lintel were used; influenced the arch and the vault
  12. The basilica originally secular; was used as an early model for the Christian church.
  13. Painting found on the walls of Pompeii. Walls often completely painted over with architectural ornamentation. Examples of a decadent period.
- E. Far Eastern Period: China, India, Persia - 1000 B. C.
1. Arts: mystic, colorful, formal, sensuous
  2. Minimize the natural phenomenon and seek the way of the spirit, the essence of life with intuition and creative formal organization
  3. The soul compared to an interior eye which does not look at the external world but inward to eternal realities.
  4. Abstract elements of art are a language understood by the soul and the inner spirit, by a contemplative vision

5. Offers a feeling of peace and rightness
  6. T'ang Dynasty in China (A.D. 618) produced greatest art: painting, sculpture, porcelain, clay figures, textiles, jade, are sponsored and encouraged by the court.

- c. William Zorach
- d. Henry Moore

VIII. COURSE PROCEDURES, STRATEGIES AND SUGGESTED LEARNING ACTIVITIES TO FACILITATE THE ACHIEVEMENT OF OBJECTIVES

- A. Films
- B. Filmstrips
- C. Slides
- D. Dukane combinations
- E. Projection of reproductions by using opaque projector
- F. Portfolios of reproductions to set around the room.

- G. Students bring in reproductions from home or cut out of magazines or newspaper and there could be a "show and tell" period. Students explain pictures according to what they have learned in previous lectures.
- H. Trips to art galleries
1. Lowe Museum
  2. Bass Museum
  3. Galleries in Coconut Grove
  4. Galleries in Surfside
  5. Bacardi Art Gallery
  6. Spanish Monastery
  7. Art Department, Barry College
  8. Art Department, Dade Jr. College
  9. Viscaya
- I. Students keep a notebook with appropriate remarks and illustrations of famous work. Extra credit could be given for this.
- J. Students divided into groups of three or four, plan a presentation for the class using audiovisual aids, or an original presentation based on what they have seen or learned in the development of the history of art. This could be about one artist or a whole school of artists.

- K. Extra reading could be assigned. These could be specifically art books or magazines but they could also be philosophical about a special period in history and how it influenced an art style.
- I. Students could view art departments in stores by themselves and bring in a report telling how the selections could be improved and how they influence the buying public.

ADDITIONAL AREAS TO EXPLORE

While this course is designed to present art concepts from the beginning of time and how they evolved out of specific civilizations with different cultures, religions, etc., it is almost impossible to take every phase of development and history into account. Therefore, it would be wise for the teacher to overview the whole history and dwell a little longer on certain aspects or periods that would be more interesting to the particular group of students. The teacher should take into consideration the age, grade, ethnic group and other unique characteristics of the students.

It is with the above suggestion in mind that one should not forget the following and should try to investigate resources, illustrations and literature that could be used in teaching:

- A. African heritage
  - 1. A noble past
  - 2. Lost kingdoms
  - 3. The power of the tribe
