The Impact of Jurisprudence on Andalusian Husbandry Research and Writing

*Mustafa A. Ghnaimat

ABSTRACT

This piece of research goes beyond the historical view of husbandry science in the Arab-Islamic culture. It actually looks into Andalusian husbandry through its renovation and development.

The aim of this study is to understand the Andalusians' approach and thinking of their husbandry issues. It also focuses on the epistemic aspect of this science in terms of vision, methodology and intellectual devices on the one hand, and the impact of jurisprudence on this particular kind of science on the other.

The fact that husbandry scientists are simultaneously jurists in Andalusia, allows us to extend links between husbandry and jurisprudence within the Andalusian general intellectual structure, namely in light of the ability reflected in their writings to render Arabic vocabulary obedient to husbandry contents based on a positive vision where their scientific methodology is established. In addition, they have brought in many jurisprudence terms and methods to husbandry research and writing. And this is what this study tries to tackle.
